LAUGHS MARK TRIAL OF O'NEILL ACTORS

SIGHT EMBARRASSED HIM

"Couldn't Look World in the Face for Hours" — Gavel Bangs for Order as Spectators Chuckle.

Special to The New York Times.

LOS ANGELES, Cal., April 12.—The prosecution has closed its case against seventeen members of the cast of "Desire Under the Elms" and the defense has begun its task of attempting to show that Eugene O'Neill's paly is not obscene, as charged in the complaint, which aims to prevent further performance in California and to penalize the cast for those already given.

Police Officer Taylor, who went to see the play for the Board of Education, testified today that he had been shocked and had regarded the play as not of a clean character. Asked the customary question by defense attorney W. A. Green, as to whether the play would incite him to any questionable action, the officer said it would not.

Deputy City Prosecutor Reams asked Taylor if his sense of decency had been offended. It had, the officer deposed.

"I was painfully shocked," Policeman Taylor testified. "I blushed. I sat there so embarrassed that I feared for the time when the act would end and the lights would again be turned on. After I left that place I couldn't look the world in the face for hours."

Injury to Police Feelings.

Questioned closely regarding his other reactions, the policeman said that his "feelings were hurt, terribly hurt."

There were snickers and giggles in the crowded court room as the policeman testified, and his testimony was punctuated by the sharp crack of the bailiff's gavel, swung vigorously in a futile effort to preserve decorum.

Asked by defense attorney Green as to the scene that "hurt his feelings" most, Policeman Taylor replied that he took decided objection to the costume worn by the stepmother in the play when she entered the bedroom.

"What did she wear?" he was asked.

"A nightgown—nothing more," he answered.

Attorney Green produced a photograph from that particular scene. The nightgown was of the old style, enveloping its wearer from chin to feet.

"Why, that's quite a modest garment, isn't it?" the attorney asked. "More modest than the street dress of today."

Objects to Flannel Nightgowns.

"And so you object to flannel nightgowns, do you?" inquired the attorney.

"Yes, sir," responded Policeman Taylor.

There was another roar of laughter in the court room and the officer amended his answer.

"I don't know whether it was flannel or not."

Under further questioning the policeman revealed the fact that he was not a constant spectator as the grim drama of New England life ran its course. Frequently, he admitted, he retreated to the lobby of the theatre. Because of this, he said, he might be slightly mixed up concerning some of the situations.

The defense will contend that the play, grim though it be, is a true picture of a phase of American life; that it is realism, and nothing more. They will contend that any vulgarity found in the play is in the mind of the spectator and not in the lines of the drama.

Taylor was the only prosecution witness to date answering "yes" to the question of the defense as to whether the play was "obscene" in the legal sense of the word. Taylor admitted that it had had "a tendency to deprave and corrupt" his morals. On re-examination by a deputy city prosecutor he added that the play had "shocked his ordinary and common sense of decency" and that he couldn't recall a single thing that pointed a moral.

Sergeant Sweetnam was recalled by the prosecution for the third time to testify regarding an alleged conversation with Mr. Greene in the police station shortly after the cast had been arrested. Greene asked him, he said, if the play would be allowed to proceed if the questionable passages were omitted, Sweetnam replying he had nothing to do with that, but giving assurance that the cast would be arrested every night if the protested passages were repeated.

Thomas Morgan, stage manager of the theatre, denied that a great many changes had been made in the play. One or two changes were made, he said. Monroe Lathrop, newspaper dramatic critic, was then called for the defense.

ZASLAWSKY'S DEBUT BRINGS AN OVATION

Russian, Directing Philharmonic, Shows New York Has Another Able Conductor.

Georges Zaslawsky, Russian conductor, made his New York début in a special concert with the Philharmonic Orchestra at Carnegie Hall last evening. His coming adds another able conductor to New York's list.

Mr. Zaslawsky created a favorable impression in appearance, being tall and well built. During the overture to Egmont it was discovered he was well in control of his orchestra and that he choose to present Beethoven as a composer of rugged force, of realism, rather than one of overwhelming imagination. Not that Mr. Zaslawsky forgot the finer marks, for he gave plenty of light and shade, but the general effect was of a sound technic, whereby the relative values were set forth. The audience, which had listened with marked attention, gave the conductor great applause tnd two recalls.

Beethoven's Fifth Symphony gave even greater opportunity for observing Mr. Zaslawsky's style. The first movement was broadly taken, pianos without weakness, fortes without crudity. The steadiness and strength of the conductor were never in doubt. He moved in a logical sequence, laying brilliant emphasis on his climaxes.

The second movement, owing to a certain squareness in tempo, lost some of its imaginative quality, but the third movement had a virility that left no feeling of insufficiency. The applause was great and prolonged, Mr. Zaslawsky being recalled three times, receiving a basketful of flowers, and signaling the orchestra to stand up.

The conductor had chosen Tschaikovsky's Fourth Symphony for his final number. Here he was completely in his element. He made the composer vivid and poetic. He put some of the imagination he had dispensed with in Beethoven into his reading of Tschaikovsky. It was a Russian interpreting a fellow-countryman, not lending him the attributes that belonged to another people. At the conclusion, Mr. Zaslawsky was recalled with great warmth.

PHILHARMONIC'S BIG YEAR.

C. H. Mackay Says Public Appreciated Concerts' High Plane.

The Philharmonic Society's annual meeting of directors and auxiliary committee too kplace yesterday at the home of Clarence H. Mackay, Chairman of the board. Referring to audiences of the season now ending, Mr. Mackay said that the public support had been unequalled. It could be continued only by presenting concerts of the highest quality as to programs, orchestras and conductors. This, he declared, had been accomplished "in spite of the enormous costs involved."

Elihu Root, Otto H. Kahn and Walter W. Price were other speakers. Those at the meeting included also Richard Aldrich, Lawrence Gilman, Charles Triller, Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth O'Brien, Mrs. Newbold Edgar, Mrs. H. F. Osborn, Mrs. H. M. Alexander, Mrs. Julian W. Robbins, Mrs. Charles S. Guggenheimer, Mrs. Charles E. Mitchell, Mrs. Arthur Sachs, Mrs. Christian R. Holmes and Mrs. Frederick Steinway.

GODFREY LUDLOW PLAYS.

Australian Violinist Displays a Fine, Firm Tone.

Godfrey Ludlow, an Australian violinist who has before been heard both in recitals and broadcasting by radio, gave an evening's program at Aeolian Hall last night in which the shorter and lighter numbers were all of his own arranging. With Walter Golde, he also performed Sylvio Lazzari's sonata, recalled by some from the Parisian composer's visit here, and the D major concerto of Mozart and "Polonaise Brillante" of Wieniawski.

Mr. Ludlow played with a fine, firm tone, conveying a sense of power and sinewy strength drawn doubtless from his native plains and not too often found in fiddlers of less musical force and character.

Show by Western Union Employes.

Traffic employes of the main office of the Western Union Telegraph Company will stage their annual show at Stuyvesant High School on Thursday night. A musical comedy, "Connie Comes Through," written by Nanon Bargetzi, an employe, will be given. Anna Walters and Jerry Sullivan will be principals in the cast.

LEADS LONDON SYMPHONY.

Vladimir Shavitch Gives Successful Concert in Queen's Hall.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, April 12.—Vladimir Shavitch, conductor of the Syracuse Symphony Orchestra, repeated his success of last year when tonight he conducted the London Symphony Orchestra of 110 performers at a concert in Queen's Hall. He was especially applauded for his rendering of Liszt's Faust Symphony for a finale, whereof a contingent of the London Choral Society had been engaged with Tudor Davies as tenor soloist.

MUSIC NOTES.

Nicolai Vasiliieff, who sang in Rimsky-Korsakoff's "Sadko" with the Schola Cantorum, will appear for the first time tonight in the tenor role of Boughton's "The Immortal Hour" with the Opera Players at the Grove Street Theatre.

More than a dozen Metropolitan singers will appear next Sunday in the final "opera concert" of the season. They are Mmes. Mario, Sabanieva, Ryan, Sparkes, Wells, Arden, Delaunois and Howard and Messrs. Errolle, Schuetzendorf, Malatesta, Vajda and Wolfe, with Karl Riedel and Paul Elsler conducting.

The Brahms Club will sing a program of French, Italian, German and English partsongs tomorrow evening at the Waldorf-Astoria. Leo Braun is the conductor, and the club will be assisted by Magdel Salzinger, baritone, and an instrumental ensemble from the Philharmonic Orchestra.

You Said It, Doug!

Dear Douglas MacLean:—

Thanks a whole lot for the wonderful tribute you paid in yesterday's papers to my production "For Heaven's Sake," now playing at the Rialto.

So I'm a riot, am I? Well, that's a great line, Doug, but listen, my friend, I've been on the reviewing job myself and want to tell you that you're not only a riot but a WHOLE LAUGH FACTORY.

Talk about fun! If there's any one who can't find all they want in your picture THAT'S MY BABY, they're just physically incapable of laughing. You've got a splendid comedy, and I'm sure everybody will want to see it at the RIVOLI this week.

Sincerely,

FINANCIAL MARKETS

Stocks Decline Sharply as Active Liquidation Develops—Call Money Higher.

Acute weakness in stocks, lower prices for commodities and a sharp tightening of the call-money rate, possibly a reflection of over-Sunday developments in the Cuban banking situation, characterized the market yesterday. Interest was centred sharply on the decline in stocks because of its violence and because of the fact that it followed a week in which market conditions had been very quiet, trading had fallen to a low scale, and in which stocks seemed to be convalescing.

Under present conditions, however, the market is quick to sense and emphasize, and even at times to overemphasize, developments which may be construed as unsettling. Little attention was paid in the market of Saturday to the news from Cuba about bank runs, but yesterday it was one of the main motives in a decline, despite the reassuring news from that country that the critical time had passed. The fact that our own call-money market was drawn on for some of the funds used to bolster confidence in Cuba brought a rate of 5½ per cent., and this probably was a factor of importance in the market, yet the very fact that time money was easier and in supply should make plain to the market that such a withdrawal as occurred yesterday was an extraordinary and probably a temporary one.

The declines yesterday were orderly and the turnover not especially large, but nevertheless, there was a considerable amount of determined selling which even the scale orders which were put in the market did not stop. It was most emphatic in the motor issues, in the chain store stocks and in the volatile specialties. Possibly, this decline may be placed in the category of a continuation of the correction of an overwrought speculative condition which has been under way for several weeks. There was little in the financial news of the day to warrant such a sharp decline. Likely, the report of unfilled orders of the United States Steel Corporation, showing a decline for the third successive month, and which was made public on Saturday, after the close of the market, had a measure of effect.

The Federal Reserve Board's summary of its attitude toward speculative conditions, although dealing with the past, nevertheless, furnished an interesting commentary on official opinion toward such runaway markets as developed last Fall and early this year. In this connection, it is to be recalled that the recent statements of brokers' loans, which at the highest stood at approximately $3,500,000,000, have been reduced only about 20 per cent. despite the fact that the liquidation has been sharp and accomplished in most drastic fashion. It is now quite evident that brokers' loans, at their highest, were abnormal and that the Stock Exchange was using too large a percentage of the nation's credit resources. Just what a "normal figure" would be remains for the market itself to demonstrate.

SOUTHERN RAILWAY EARNS $22,579,172

BIG GAINS MADE OVER 1924

Rise in Revenues Due to South's Industrial Expansion as Passenger Income Dropped.

The report of the Southern Railway Company for 1925, made public yesterday, shows that the balance of the road's income over fixed charges amounted to $22,579,172, equivalent to 16.31 per cent. on the common stock after providing for dividends on the preferred stock. This compared with net income of $17,769,140 in the previous year, or with 12.30 per cent. on the common stock.

Gross operating revenue for 1925 amounted to $149,313,892, compared with $142,486,514 in 1924, an increase of $6,827,378 or 4.79 per cent. Operating expenses increased $1,137,277 or 1.11 per cent. The ratio of operating expenses to gross revenue, which is the measure of railroad efficiency, was 69.53 per cent., compared with 72.06 per cent. in the previous year. The net operating income, which is what is left after the payment of operating expenses, taxes and rentals, was $35,086,021, or 15.25 per cent. in excess of the corresponding figure for 1924.

The balance sheet indicates current assets of $59,739,503 or $9,964,836 in excess of the previous year, while current liabilities are $24,353,874 or $1,682,063 less, resulting in a net increase of $11,646,899 in working capital. Capital liabilities declined $3,646,000 by the retirement of equipment trust obligations.

Gross revenue of the road from freight traffic amounted to $106,776,762, compared with $99,842,143 in 1924, an increase of $6,934,619 or 6.95 per cent. The volume of freight traffic in 1925 was the heaviest in the company's history, being the equivalent of moving 8,274 million tons a distance of one mile compared with 7,585 million tons in 1924, and the previous record of 8,230 million tons attained in 1920. The average revenue per ton mile in 1925 is reported as 1.291, compared with 1.316 cents in 1924.

Revenues from passenger traffic declined from $31,083,146 in 1924 to $30,951,806 in 1925, a decrease of one-half of one per cent. Passenger revenue from the last four months' operation was above the same period in 1924.

"Two hundred and sixty new traffic producing industries," says President Fairfax Harrison, "were established last year on Southern Railway System lines. Two hundred and thirty additional industrial establishments were enlarged. The outlook is favorable for the continuation of this expansion during the coming year. Many important projects are under way or in contemplation, among which may be mentioned plans for a substantial increase in the steel making capacity of furnaces in the Birmingham district, and the production on a large scale of rayon."

Other liabilities	decreased	7,452,000

Total gold holdings are now 1,491,122,000 reichsmarks.

Following is the Reichsbank's gold reserve for a series of recent weeks, compared with the two preceding years, in thousands of marks:

April 7	1,491,122	1,003,430	464,883
March 23	1,449,150	996,083	876,000
March 6	1,404,902	983,169	870,000
	1924.	1923.	1922.

*Lowest since the war.

The addition to the bank's gold reserve since the low point of April, 1924, amounts now to 1,049,245,000 gold marks, or $249,720,310. When the war began the bank's gold holdings were 1,253,199,000 marks. They were increased to 2,537,780,000 on Dec. 30, 1916, the high point in its history.

March 6	2,729,707,000	2,035,546,000

Last week's note circulation, reckoned in gold values, was the highest reached since the war. Before the return to the gold standard the bank's circulation was stated on Oct. 31, 1924, at 1,780,930,000,000,000 of the old and depreciated paper marks, but the great depreciation of the paper mark at that time made the gold value of the circulation then outstanding less than the present maximum.

When the war began the Reichsbank's note circulation stood at 2,405,580,000 marks on June 31, 1914.

TOPICS IN WALL STREET.

News, Comment and Incident, On the Stock Exchange and In the Financial Markets.

The stock market registered another sharp reaction in prices yesterday. Declines ranging from 2 to 5 points were numerous among the active stocks, while larger losses were recorded in Atlantic Coast Line and Woolworth, which dropped 10% and 7½ points respectively. Hudson Motors dropped 6¼ points and General Electric 9½. The professional element did not hesitate to capitalize the over-Sunday developments and sold stocks at the opening. This selling touched off stop orders in many of the specialties, and with the exception of short feeble rallies the trend continued downward to the close. Most stocks closed at or near the low levels for the day. Trading was on a more active scale.

Cuban Bank Run Ends.

Bankers said yesterday that the run on Cuban banks had served only to bring to public attention what had been known for months by financiers and business men regarding economic conditions on the island. There was nothing new in the situation, they declared, and selling in the stock market based on the Cuban episode was regarded as the work solely of professional market manipulators. The low prices of sugar and the high American tariff have produced trying conditions in Cuba, but it is believed that a favorable turn now has been reached, with plans for reduced production and ample resources placed at the command of the banks and industry. The bank run itself now is regarded as a closed incident, as the money already transferred or on the way to Havana is more than sufficient to pay off all the depositors, should this be demanded. It was reported yesterday that many of the depositors who withdrew funds during the excitement of Saturday were putting their money back in the banks.

Time Money Again Is Easy.

The advance to 5½ per cent. in the call money rate, as against a 4 per cent. rate at the close of last week, was regarded merely as a reflection of the calling of loans in connection with the Cuban banking situation. This was illustrated by the continued ease in the time money market, where 4½ per cent. again was bid and 4¾ per cent. was asked for short-term money, with business transacted at the latter figure. These quotations reflected a general opinion that cheap money would continue, regardless of occasional flurries in the call money rate due to special developments. It was estimated that yesterday's calling of demand loans amounted to $35,000,000.

Market Continues Professional.

A canvass of leading commission houses indicated yesterday that the public was taking only a small part in the day-to-day stock market operations, and where trading was apparent it was generally of an investment character and confined to the better grade of railroad and industrial issues. The "uptown crowd" was blamed for the attack against the market yesterday, it being said that the selling was confined to supposedly vulnerable speculative issues for the purpose of reaching stop orders. Consequently when the so-called leaders reacted, it was not long before the general swing of prices was downward. Commission houses reported some good buying, but the orders were put in "on a scale," which had no effect in stemming the decline.

Market Advisers Guess Wrong.

Most of the prognostigations on the course of stock prices sent out from brokerage houses before the opening of the market yesterday were far wide of actual developments. In most instances the prediction was made that prices would continue firm, but that trading would be on a small scale compared with the active markets of a month ago. Some forecasters also went so far as to say that the trend of prices would continue upward for the greater part of the week. Others hedged in their predictions. They said the market would "bear watching" in its present state and cautioned against overtrading on either the short or the long side. By the end of the first hour, however, the wires of the brokerage firms were hot with special flashes expressing opinions as to why the market did not act as expected. In most instances the selling was laid to professionals and much space was devoted to the Cuban situation, a development which was virtually ignored in the earlier advices.

Mexican Bonds Advance.

Advances of from 1 to 1½ points in Mexican bonds furnished one of the few active price movements in the bond market yesterday. The buying resulted from Washington information that an understanding had been reached between the American and Mexican Governments, respectivley, the rights of United States citizens under the petroleum and land laws in the southern republic. Other foreign bonds generally were firm, but trading was quiet. Most domestic corporation bonds were fractionally higher, the market having shaken itself free of the influence of the movement of stock prices. It was, in fact, noticeable yesterday, that prices of some of the high-grade railroad bonds were firm and higher, while the stocks of the same roads were declining under quite heavy pressure. Liberty bonds were firm, partly on the news of the large amounts to be retired through the sinking fund.

Decline in Railroad Stocks.

Sporadic declines in the market value of some of the high-grade railroad stocks is greatly increasing the number of railroad stockholders, according to banking houses specializing in these issues. Reduction of quotations on the preferred stocks and on the common stocks of those companies which have no preferred issues, it was said, is bringing out the small investor seeking a yield of from 6 to 8 per cent. A falling market in this class of securities according to bankers' observation, nearly always attracts the man who is unwilling to take only 5 per cent. on his money as he believes that by waiting for a bargain day he can do substantially better.

Telephone Rate Decision.

Commenting on the decision by the United States Supreme Court that the action of the New Jersey Public Utility Commission in ordering lower rates to New Jersey subscribers of the New York Telephone Company was confiscatory, an observer in the utility field said yesterday that he could not recall a telephone rate case which had resulted in a defeat for the company. In the New Jersey case, the commission asked that a reserve of more than $2,000,000 be applied to the reduction of rates. Other cases brought to the courts usually have involved applications by telephone companies for higher rates. The successful record of the telephone companies in the courts is, in the opinion of this observer, an indication that their applications for favorable rates are based on sound methods of valuation. Incidently, it was said that the cost of evaluation by both sides in a recent Massachusetts rate hearing was $1,000,000.

MONEY.

MONDAY, APRIL 12, 1926.

Heavy and unexpected withdrawals stiffened the Stock Exchange call money market to highest charge in two weeks. Some $35,000,000 was estimated to have been called. In trading circles it was intimated that the incident had a connection with the strained banking conditions in Cuba. Starting at 4 per cent. the first advance came at noon to 4½, followed shortly thereafter by 5 and finally 5½, touched at 2 o'clock. Time money was not the least disturbed by the rise in demand loans, obviously due, dealers said, to poor inquiry and to the belief that somewhat easier conditions will prevail in the call market. Commercial paper and acceptances were fairly active, but unchanged in discount.

Mr. Arthur A. Curme, President of The Feltman & Curme Shoe Stores Co., has summarized his letter to the Bankers, as follows:

1. The Feltman & Curme Shoe Stores Co. operates a chain of 73 shoe stores located in 46 cities and 20 states extending from the Atlantic to the Pacific Coast. The organization began with one store established in 1907 by Mr. Charles H. Feltman in Richmond, Indiana, with a nominal capital. In 1911 a second store was opened in Indianapolis. Since then the chain has grown steadily until now it is one of the country's leading shoe store chains.

2. The business has shown a profit in every year since its inception. Sales have increased from $150,846.18 in the first full year of operation to $9,154,855 in 1925. At the same time net profits before taxes have grown from $931.25 to over $500,000. Sales and profits after Federal Taxes for the four years ended December 31, 1925, as certified to by Messrs. Haskins & Sells, are reported as follows:

1923	57	7,220,095	498,380	105,000	4.74
1924	70	8,170,358	351,840	105,000	3.35

3. The balance sheet of the Company as of December 31, 1925, certified to by Messrs. Haskins & Sells, giving effect to the present financing, shows total net assets of $2,032,540 or $135 per share on this issue of Preferred Stock, and net quick assets of $1,461,735 or $97 per share of such stock.

4. This transaction only represents new financing for the Company to the extent of $500,000 Preferred Stock, the remainder being purchased from stockholders.

5. Dividends have been paid on the old Common Stock in varying amounts in every year since 1912. In 1925 the Company inaugurated dividends at the rate of $2.50 a year on the new Common Stock without par value.

6. The future outlook for the growth of the business is exceptionally bright. Plans call for the opening of about 20 additional stores during 1926. It is confidently expected that as time goes on the Company will build an ever increasing and profitable business.

FINANCIAL ENCYCLOPAEDIA

OPERATING EXPENSES: The operating expenses of a corporation may be compared to the general living and household expenses of an individual.

In the first instance, the term represents the cost of doing business, and in the latter that portion of an individual's income which must be used by the family for living expenses.

The sum remaining after operating expenses have been deducted is available for taxes, bond interest, improvements and dividends.

The comparison of a company's operating expenses over a period of years, when taken in conjunction with total income, frequently assists the investor in determining whether the affairs of a corporation are being economically administered.

WILSON COUNTY, formed in 1855, has an area of approximately 373 square miles. According to the U. S. Agricultural reports for 1920, it is the leading agricultural county in the United States in crops produced per acre. The Census figures show that the crop values were $16,006,712 which, distributed over the acreage of the entire county, gives an annual production per acre of $66. The reports further show that the value of all farm property is over $31,000,000 and the average value of the land is about $127 per acre. This average value, however, is very low in view of the high productivity of the soil. The chief crops are cotton, tobacco and corn. Excellent transportation facilities are afforded by the main lines of the Atlantic Coast Line and Norfolk and Southern Railways. WILSON, the County Seat (population, 1920 census, 10,612 and now estimated to be 13,000), is said to be the largest tobacco market in the world, having sold in 1923-24 about 73,000,000 pounds of tobacco, valued at approximately $15,000,000.

THESE BONDS are a direct obligation of the entire County, payable from unlimited ad valorem taxes levied against all of the taxable property therein.

DENY CONSOLIDATED ASKS EASIER TERMS

Officers Say Exchange Has Not Sought Modification of State's Restrictions.

LITTLE BUSINESS IS DONE

Executives Withhold Information Concerning Proposed Sale of Exchange Building.

Reports in the financial district yesterday that officers of the Consolidated Stock Exchange were seeking permission to modify certain restrictions under which the Exchange was permitted to resume business, following the recent reorganization, were denied by Exchange executives. Philip Evans, head of the Exchange, would not comment, but referred inquiries to the Attorney General's office.

It was said that informal discussions had been held with representatives of Attorney General Ottinger and that, although no formal request had been made for modification of the various stipulations, such a program had been hinted at. It was further learned yesterday that objections had been raised against the accountant selected by the State authorities to examine the books of member firms, on the ground that he "was too expensive."

It was understood that the State authorities would not consent to any modification of the seventeen stipulations contained in the revised constitution and by-laws of the Exchange drawn up as a result of an agreement reached between the Exchange authorities and the Attorney General's office. This agreement resulted in the dismissal of injunctions against the Exchange and the resumption of business which followed.

Trading on the Consolidated, according to some members, was virtually at a standstill, little having been done since the Exchange reopened under the new order. Mr. Evans said the Exchange was doing "some business," but was not in a position to furnish figures as to volume. In this connection, he added, some time must necessarily elapse before "the new baby is able to walk."

No information was obtainable yesterday concerning the progress being made in the proposed sale of the building now occupied by the Exchange at Broad and Beaver Streets and the acquisition of smaller quarters. Executives of the Exchange pointed out that they never had admitted there was any intention of selling the present building.

SIMMONS RENAMED AS EXCHANGE HEAD

Nominating Committee Makes Up Slate for the 'Big Board's' May 10 Elections.

E. H. H. Simmons, President of the Stock Exchange, has been nominated to serve a third term in that position, according to the slate presented to members by the Nominating Committee yesterday. Mr. Simmons was first elected President of the Exchange in the Spring of 1924, succeeding the late Seymour L. Cromwell, who also served three terms as President. In recent years H. G. S. Noble holds the record for continuous service as head of the organization, having served as President for five consecutive terms.

Warren B. Nash was renominated for Treasurer, and the three trustees of the gratuity fund whose terms expire in May also were selected to succeed themselves. They are James B. Mabon, Winthrop Burr and H. G. S. Noble.

The committee also named thirteen members of the Board of Governors to be voted on at the May 10 elections. All but one will succeed themselves. The exception is Huntington Lyman, who was nominated in the place of William A. Greer. The other members nominated for the Governing Committee were James C. Auchincloss, Oliver C. Billings, Dexter Blagden, Edgar Boody, Jay F. Carlisle, Robert Gibson, James B. Mabon, L. Martin Richmond, Charles S. Sargent Jr., Frank Altschul, Herbert L. Mills and William V. C. Ruxton.

BUYS F. J. FRESE STORES.

Southern Grocery Concern Acquires Savannah Chain.

Purchase of the chain of grocery stores known as the F. J. Frese Company of Savannah, Ga., by the Southern Grocery Stores, Inc., was made known yesterday by the latter company. The Southern Grocery Company will continue operation of the Frese stores under present personnel and will also use Savannah as a distributing point for its chain throughout Eastern and Southeastern Georgia.

The Southern Grocery Stores Company was organized in January last by the consolidation of the L. W. Rogers Company and the Purity Markets Company, both of Atlanta, Ga. The first company operated 280 grocery stores throughout Georgia, Alabama and South Carolina, while the Purity Company conducts eighty meat markets in the same regions.

PAPER PRODUCTION SHOWS LARGE GAIN

ASSETS TOTAL $148,585,001

Statement Tells of Acquisition of Large Timber Tracts and Plans to Enlarge Mills.

In its detailed report for 1925, the International Paper Company shows a net income of $1,571,281, available for common stock dividends after depreciation, interest, taxes, preferred dividends and reduction of contingency reserves.

The total revenue for the year was $8,212,383. Depreciation was $3,404,519; interest, $2,195,969; taxes, $61,593, and the contingency reserve, $1,000,000. Dividends of $1,979,019 were paid on the preferred stock. Surplus Dec. 31—including paid in surplus, $2,140,950, and that from Jan. 1, 1925, $18,144,986—was $21,857,217.

Assets for 1925 totaled $148,585,001. These included cash, $1,573,059; accounts receivable, $7,226,611; notes receivable, $989,489, and inventories, $23,255,232. Capital assets totaled $110,565,065. Total liabilities were $126,727,784. Current liabilities, including accounts and notes payable, $10,759,998, and dividends payable on the preferred stock, $548,025, were $11,318,023. Capital stock and surplus totaled $83,743,030.

President Archibald R. Graustein, in his remarks to the stockholders, said:

"Total production of paper during 1925 aggregated 503,702 tons, against 434,288 in 1924. The increase is due in part to the acquisition of the Ticonderoga, N. Y., and the Bastrop, La., mills. The price of newsprint was reduced to $70 a ton on Jan. 1, 1925, remaining at that price during the year. On Jan. 1 of this year it was further reduced to the present figure of $65 a ton.

"The acquisition of the Riordan properties was successfully consummated during the year and the results to date of their operation have equalled expectations. The Bastrop sulphate pulp and paper mill was acquired in July, 1925, and has proved a profitable investment. Although operating on purchased wood, the company has now secured an option on a tract of woodland, which, if present anticipations turn out satisfactorily, will assure the mill of a permanent supply of raw material from its own lands.

"The company has also acquired approximately 376 square miles of Crown timber limits on the Gaspe peninsula, and 2,000 square miles on the Upper Ottawa and Gatineau Rivers, in Quebec. The latter will permit the enlargement of both the Kipawa and Gatineau mills, and will reinforce the available supply for the new newsprint mill which the company contemplates building on the Quinze (Upper Ottawa) River, some time during the next four years."

BANK TRANSFER COMPLETE.

Mechanics & Metals Signs Replaced by Those of Chase National.

Removal of the old sign-plates from the Mechanics and Metals National Bank Building at 20 Nassau Street, thus eliminating a name that had existed for 116 years in American finance, marked the completion of the consolidation of the Chase National Bank and the Mechanics and Metals yesterday. Many persons stopped to watch workmen remove the signs and replace them with new ones bearing the inscription, "Chase National Bank of the City of New York," and in smaller letters underneath, "Mechanics and Metals Branch."

Gates W. McGarrah, former Chairman of the Mechanics and Metals, who will be Chairman of the Executive Committee of the combined institution; John McHugh, President, and other executives took up their new duties in the main offices of the Chase National, at 57 Broadway. The executive offices were filled with flowers, tributes from scores of well-wishers.

Office staffs worked until late last night completing the transfer of records and papers from the Nassau Street quarters to the Broadway building. Gold, securities and other contents of the Mechanics and Metals vaults, however, will not be moved.

NEW BOSTON-CANADA TRAIN.

Canadian Pacific and Boston & Maine Service to Save 2½ Hours.

The Canadian Pacific and the Boston & Maine, it was announced yesterday, will cooperate in placing into service on April 25 a new through train from Boston to Montreal and Quebec, which will cut the present traveling time between these cities by two and one-half hours.

The announcement follows the granting of permission by the Interstate Commerce Commission to the Canadian Pacific to lease from the Boston & Maine a subsidiary line running from Wells River, Vt., to Sherbrooke, Quebec, a distance of 104 miles. The commission's authority extended only to the sixty-nine miles from Wells River to the boundary at Derby, Vt.

Time of the journey will be reduced to nine hours and fifty minutes. Trains will leave North Station, Boston, at 11:05 P. M. Daylight Saving Time, or 10:05 Eastern Standard Time, and arrive at Montreal at 9:05 A. M. Daylight Saving Time, or 8:05 Eastern Standard Time. They will make only four stops, Concord, Woodsville, St. Johnsbury and Newport.

In returning, the new train, which will be christened the Red Wing, will leave Montreal at 8:45 P. M. Standard Time and arrive in Boston at 7:10 A. M. Standard Time. A buffet car will be included in the equipment.

C. & O. MINORITY STILL ALIVE

Word was received in the financial district yesterday from George Cole Scott, leader of the Chesapeake & Ohio minority stockholders' committee, that the election of himself and J. S. Bryan to the Board of Directors of the C. & O. did not necessarily mean that the minority would agree to any new merger plan proposed by the Van Sweringens.

The minority is still in a position, according to Mr. Scott, to object to any new proposal that may not be satisfactory to it. He and Mr. Bryan feel that in accepting places on the Board they will not relinquish any of their freedom to act "as their judgment may direct."

According to present plans Mr. Scott and Mr. Bryan will become directors of the railroad when the Board meets on April 20.

FOREIGN EXCHANGE.

Spanish, Japanese and Norwegian in Violent Rise—Sterling and Francs React.

Special attention was diverted yesterday to three exchanges, which of late had been more or less dormant and in which movements were narrow and therefore obscured by the gyrations in the Franch and Belgian francs. These three—the Spanish, Japanese and Norwegian—all enjoyed lively bidding and a sharp upturn, which put the first two named at new highs, while the Scandinavian came within easy approach of the year's top. Strength in London provided the inspiration for a further rise by speculative purchases here.

The Spanish bill rose 3⅛ points to 14.22⅝ cents on reports of peace negotiations with the Riffians in Morocco, together with the pronounced success of an internal loan. The yen was bought very heavily up to 46.43 cents for checks, on recurrence of talk of parity before the year-end, while the boost in the kroner to 21.78 cents followed another push by those who were the leaders in the recent speculation.

Sterling sagged a fraction to $4.85⅛, as did the French to 3.43⅛ cents. Belgian francs dropped 7½ points to 3.78 cents. Italian was unchanged. Chinese exchanges eased to new lows, silver touching bottom for the year at both London and New York. South Americans turned higher.

HALLGARTEN GROUP GETS URUGUAY LOAN

Bonds for $30,000,000 Bearing 6% Interest to Go on Market Here and in Europe Soon.

OTHER NEW BOND ISSUES

Two Today Total $1,625,000—Central Gas & Electric Co. Soon to Raise About $10,000,000.

A $30,000,000 Uruguayan Government loan, for which several New York banking groups submitted bids, was awarded yesterday to a syndicate headed by Hallgarten & Co. and Halsey, Stuart & Co., by the National Council of the Republic of Uruguay, subject to ratification by the National Congress. It has been known since the middle of last week that the Hallgarten group had submitted the highest bid for the loan, but this did not necessarily mean that it would obtain the award. Blair & Co., Inc., and Lee, Higginson & Co. were among the other bidders.

The syndicate that obtained the award includes Lehman Brothers, Cassatt & Co., Kissel, Kinnicutt & Co., Ames, Emerich & Co., National Republic Company, Chicago; Northern Trust Company, Chicago; Guardian Detroit Company, Shawmut Corporation, Boston; Anglo London-Paris Company, Bank of Italy, San Francisco; Mississippi Valley Trust Company, St. Louis; Minnesota Loan and Trust Company, Minneapolis; Northwestern Trust Company, St. Paul.

A substantial amount of the issue will be taken in Europe, the bankers announced. In the past, London has been the chief market for Uruguay's bonds, which command high prices in Europe. The last loan the country obtained here consisted of 8 per cent. bonds underwritten by a National City Company syndicate. Public offering of the new Uruguayan bonds will be made soon. The issue will bear 6 per cent. interest.

Another South American loan that is expected to reach the New York market soon is a $6,000,000 bond issue of one of the departments of Colombia, which has been negotiated by a New York banking group. Only the final details remain to be settled and the issue probably will reach the market this week. Three Colombian departments so far have floated loans in the American market, Caldas, Antioquia and Valle del Cauca.

Public offering of $1,625,000 of new bonds will be made today, to be followed later in the week by larger issues, both in the domestic and foreign fields. Today's principal issue consists of $1,000,000 6 per cent. guaranteed first mortgage collateral gold bonds, Series A, of the Investment Securities Company of Texas, guaranteed by the National Surety Company. The bonds are priced at 100 and interest, and are offered by Peabody, Houghteling & Co.

C. W. McNear & Co. are offering a new issue of $625,000 Wilson County, N. C., 4¾ per cent. highway bonds, due 1931 to 1955, at prices to yield from 4.40 to 4.45 per cent. The county has an assessed valuation of $40,056,195 and a total bonded debt, including this issue, of $1,837,500.

Three issues of the securities of the Central Gas & Electric Company, the formation of which was announced last week by its President, Colonel A. E. Pierce, will be offered to the public shortly by a banking group composed of the Federal Securities Corporation, H. M. Byllesby & Co., West & Co., the Pearsons-Taft Company and Thomas, Ross & Co. The issues consist of $6,500,000 first lien collateral trust sinking fund twenty-year gold bonds, $1,500,000 three-year 6 per cent. gold notes, and 21,000 shares of $7 dividend series preferred stock without par value.

S. W. Straus & Co. will offer tomorrow, in co-operation with a group of dealers, an issue of $1,000,000 first mortgage fee 6 per cent. sinking fund gold bond certificates of the Birdoo Realty Corporation, legal for the investment of trust funds in New York State. The certificates are secured by the newly completed sixteen-story Cellini Building, 48 to 56 West Forty-eighth Street, designed for the jewelry trade.

TO JOIN VAUCLAIN ABROAD.

William Hamilton, Banker, Will Help Study Conditions in Russia.

William Hamilton, Vice President of the Guaranty Trust Company, plans to go to Russia soon on a tour in company with his father-in-law, Samuel N. Vauclain, President of the Baldwin Locomotive Works. Mr. Vauclain sailed a week ago last Saturday and is now in Paris, where it is expected Mr. Hamilton will join him shortly.

Mr. Hamilton said yesterday that Mr. Vauclain desired to get first-hand information of actual conditions in Russia and that the tour might result in future business between American industrial concerns and Russia, though no immediate results along this line were expected. Bankers believe that the credit situation must be adjusted before large transactions with the Soviet authorities can be undertaken.

Mr. Hamilton's visit will not be in connection with Guaranty Trust Company business but will have for its main purpose assisting Mr. Vauclain to get accurate data on conditions. On the occasion of his sailing Mr. Vauclain said that he expected to be abroad for six or eight weeks, "scouting for business."

FORESEES BUMPER CROPS.

President Davis of Lackawanna Discusses Conditions in Southwest.

President J. M. Davis of the Delaware, Lackawanna & Western Railroad, who has just returned from a trip to Texas, said yesterday that according to his observation and from reports of bankers and railroad men in that section, crop prospects were better there than they had been for the last five years.

"Present conditions," declared Mr. Davis, "indicate that Texas and Oklahoma will have bumper wheat crops. The bankers I talked to in those States were all optimistic. They felt that the country had the three underlying influences which produce prosperity: (1) Cheap money, (2) employment for all who wish to work, (3) prospect of good crops."

Spring Valley Water Net Higher.

Net income of $2,031,628 after taxes, interest, depreciation, authorization, &c., is reported for 1925 by the Spring Valley Water Company of San Francisco. This is equivalent to $7.25 a share earned on $28,000,000 capital stock outstanding. In 1924 the net income was $1,907,196, or $6.81 a share. Gross income last year totaled $6,170,223, compared with $5,903,956 in 1924. After payment of dividends totaling $1,680,000, a surplus remained last year of $351,628. Surplus in 1924 was $227,196.

BUYS GERMAN SECURITIES.

European Shares, Inc., Gets Equity Ownership in 17 Concerns.

European Shares, Inc., a newly formed concern, has acquired an equity ownership in seventeen different German banking, utility and industrial corporations, according to announcement yesterday by officials of the company.

"While European Shares is in no way obligated to restrict its buying field to any one country," the announcement said, "the most attractive opportunities so far available have been in Germany, although situations in several other European States have been carefully studied and investigated. The securities purchased are largely payers and at recent date there had been a substantial appreciation in the market value of these securities over their cost price. In one or two instances small amounts of stock have been sold at substantial profits. The income return on the securities held by European Shares is naturally 2 to 3 per cent. greater than would be realized from American stocks of corresponding investment standing."

REPORTS SOUTH THRIVING.

Head of Fuel Concern Says Wall St. Slump Has No Effect There.

Wall Street depression has had no effect on Southern business, it was said yesterday by Walter Moore, President of the Pratt Fuel Corporation of Birmingham, Ala., who is at the Waldorf-Astoria. He said that individuals might have felt personal depression as a result of drops in stock prices, but that steel, iron, cement and piping plants were all operating at full capacity. Discussing the labor situation, he said:

"In Birmingham and in the South we have plenty of labor. A considerable portion of our negro population who came North a few years ago has returned and a large number is clamoring to get back. We have all we need, but I venture to say that if I were to place in one of the big New York newspapers tomorrow morning an advertisement offering work in the South at the pay that is current down there, I could get one hundred and fifty men before the day was over. As a matter of fact, I think a committee would be apt to come to me and ask how many I could take care of."

He said letters indicated there was a lot of homesickness among negroes in the North.

NEW HAVEN ROAD SHOWS GREAT GAIN

1925 Net Is $7,410,282, Which Is $4,419,601 More Than Earnings in 1924.

DUE TO FREIGHT INCREASES

Gross Revenues Are $132,266,422, an Advance of $5,052,724—$4.72 Earned Per Capital Share.

A statement of the affairs of the New Haven Railroad for 1925, made public yesterday, shows a surplus after all charges of $7,410,282, an improvement over the previous year of $4,419,601. The 1925 net is equivalent to earnings of $4.72 per share on the capital stock and compares with earnings of $1.91 per share in 1924.

Passenger revenues, President E. J. Pearson reports, were substantially the same as the previous year, the gain being practically all due to the increase in freight revenue which, measured in ton-miles, exceeded any previous year. Gross revenues amounted to $132,266,422, an advance of $5,052,724.

"The favorable result for the year," he says, "for the New Haven and for the railroads of the country as a whole, has been largely due, although generally not so recognized, to more than normal traffic, reduced cost of fuel and some supplies and the absence of any unusual difficulties affecting transportation or industry."

Two factors, however, he says, affected passenger revenues favorably. These were the decision by the Interstate Commerce Commission withdrawing its order for an interchangeable scrip coupon mileage book which it is estimated would have entailed a loss of not less than $2,500,000 in the New Haven annual passenger fares and decisions of the Interstate Commerce Commission and the Public Service Commission of New York State that proposed increases in commutation and fifty-trip fares between New York City and points in New York State and Connecticut were justified.

Regarding the New Haven's holdings in the Boston & Maine President Pearson says:

"Your company has an investment in the stock and securities of the Boston & Maine Railroad, through the medium of the Boston Railroad Holding Company, amounting to $23,888,519. Through this medium your company owns and votes upon 229,883 shares of Boston & Maine stock out of a total of 814,728, substantially 28.3 per cent. The holdings of this stock are as follows: Common, 219,129; preferred, 6,543; first preferred, 4,181; total, 229,853."

What Will Your Estate Be Worth?

IN estimating the value of your Estate, due allowance must be made for the payment of debts, costs of administration, Federal Estate Tax and State Inheritance Taxes.

The Federal Estate Tax is relatively simple of computation, but the effect of the Inheritance or Transfer Taxes imposed by the various States is not so readily understood.

The State Taxes which will be paid by your Estate will vary with the nature of the securities of which it consists and your Estate will be worth more or less according to the discretion you now exercise in the selection of investments.

In considering this phase of your investment problems we offer a service that is purely disinterested because we have no securities to sell.

TWO STATES LOSE PHONE RATE FIGHTS

INJUNCTION IS UPHELD

Commission Is Restrained From Enforcing Lower Rates by New York Company.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, April 12.—In two cases decided today the United States Supreme Court set aside orders of State utility commissions to enforce lower rates for telephone service. One originated in New Jersey and the other in Illinois.

In the case of the Board of Public Utility Commissioners of New Jersey against the New York Telephone Company the Supreme Court upheld the judgment of the District Court of New Jersey, which had granted a temporary injunction against the board restraining the enforcement of certain telephone rates.

The litigation arose out of the fact that on March 6, 1924, the telephone company filed with the New Jersey board a schedule providing for an increase of rates for exchange service in the State, effective April 1, 1924. An order suspending the proposed rates pending an inquiry as to their reasonableness was issued by the board. On Dec. 31, 1924, the increases were disapproved and the company was directed to continue service at the old rates.

In surveying the telephone company's affairs the board ruled that a rate of return of 7.53 per cent., producing an income ranging from $5,750,000 to $6,000,000, would be a fair return; that the amount charged by the company in 1924 for depreciation, namely $3,452,000 was excessive and that $2,678,000 was sufficient.

Denied Charges Were Too High.

Incident to an application for a temporary injunction, the company assailed the findings of the board in respect to rate of return, property value and charges for depreciation. It contended that its charges for depreciation were not excessive, and that in any event it could not be expected to make up deficits by future net earnings.

The court reasstrted the principle, which had been laid down in a number of cases that "profits of the past cannot be used to sustain confiscatory rates for the future." In affirming the lower court Justice Butler said:

"It is conceded that the exchange rates complained of are not sufficient to yield a just return after paying taxes and operating expenses, including a proper allowance for current depreciation. The property or money of the company represented by the credit balance in the reserve for depreciation cannot be used to make up the deficiency."

Court Criticised Board's Delay.

Justice Sutherland read the opinion in the case of the Illinois State Utilities Commission against the Illinois Bell Telephone Company. The court set aside rates ordered by the commission, which is headed by Frank Smith, a candidate for the Senate in the Republican primaries in Illinois against Senator William B. McKinley. The court sharply criticized the commission's delay in acting on the company's schedule of rates. It said:

"For this apparent neglect on the part of the commission no reason or excuse has been given; and just to say that without explanation, its conduct evinces an entire lack of that acute appreciation of justice which should characterize a tribunal charged with the delicate and important duty of regulating the rates of a public utility with fairness to its patrons but with a hand quick to preserve it from confusion.

"Property may be as effectively taken by reason of long continued and unreasonable delay in putting an end to confiscatory rates as by an express affirmance of them."

Estimates Indicate Net Profit for the Twenty-eight Weeks Ended March 14 of $3,650,000.

A new high record of earnings of Loew's, Inc., including Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer Pictures and other fully owned subsidiaries, for the first half of the fiscal year will be made, according to estimates by David Bernstein, Treasurer of the company.

Mr. Bernstein's preliminary figures point out that the net profit for the twenty-eight weeks ended March 14, after taxes, will total $3,650,000 as compared with a profit of $2,945,143 in the corresponding period in 1924.

Exceptional progress is reported in the expansion program of Loew's, Inc., which now owns or directs fifty-one theatres in Greater New York and the metropolitan district, and which during the last few years has been building up a chain of motion picture and vaudeville houses.

Two new theatres were opened this month, one in New Orleans and the other in Dallas, Texas. New houses are under construction in New York, Yonkers, New Rochelle, Syracuse, Houston, Norfolk, Canton, Kansas City, Pittsburgh, Fordham, Woodside, L. I., and Jamaica, L. I. The houses just opened and those in construction will add approximately 50,000 to the seating capacity of the entire Loew chain.

ACCOUNTANTS' BOARD MEETS

American Institute to Issue Bulletin on Bankruptcy.

Enlargement of its public service program was decided on yesterday at a meeting of the Council of the American Institute of Accountancy, its governing body, composed of forty members of the profession from as far West as California and Texas, and as far South as Louisiana.

The next item in the public service program will be the issuance of a bulletin on bankruptcy problems, which will be distributed gratis to the business public late this month. It will summarize the existing evils of the bankruptcy system, and analyze the proposed remedial measures, several of which are pending in Congress. The bulletin will be issued by the Bureau of Public Affairs of the Institute, of which Homer S. Pace is Chairman.

President William H. West of the institute, said last night that steps were taken also to establish a research bureau to study accountancy problems as related to various forms of industry and commerce.

February Zinc Output Lower.

A total of 96,247 short tons of zinc were produced during February by the more important producing countries of the world, compared with 99,457 short tons in January, and 98,234 short tons in December of last year. An increase of 220 short tons in stocks in American producers' hands was noted on April 1, the tonnage held being 20,561, against 20,341 on March 1. Shipments by American producers in March totaled 54,191 short tons and production, 54,411 short tons.

CLEVELAND ELECTRIC BUYS FOUR UTILITIES

New Deal Is in Line With Plan for Electrical Development of Lake Erie Area.

Four light and power companies have been purchased by the Cleveland Electric Illuminating Company, a subsidiary of the North American Company, according to report from the Cleveland company's offices yesterday. The four concerns involved are the Grand River Electric Light and Power Company, the Suburban Utilities Company, the Northeastern Ohio Power and Light Company and the municipal power and light plant of Conneaut, Ohio.

The acquisition of these companies is an additional factor in the program, launched some time ago by the Cleveland company, for the electrical development of the Lake Erie territory adjacent to and including Cleveland. The region is important from one viewpoint, because it is the meeting place for iron ore from the North and coal from the South.

Thus far the program has included, since March 15; the extension of the Cleveland Electric Illuminating Company's system from the eastern outskirts of Cleveland to the State line of Pennsylvania. Including its recent acquisitions the company now serves more than 200,000 customers and maintains in service more than fifty miles of 132,000-volts transmission line, in addition to its vast system of distribution lines.

OIL OUTPUT DROPS SHARPLY

California Daily Production for Last Week 598,800 Barrels.

The production of crude oil in California dropped below the 600,000-barrel daily mark last week, for the first time since March 28, 1925, according to figures received in the financial district yesterday. The daily average production last week was 598,800 barrels against 607,000 barrels daily, reported in the previous week. In the week of March 28, 1925, production averaged 597,900 barrels daily.

The decline in production was due chiefly to the sharp falling off in output in the Long Beach field, in California where output declined from 110,000 barrels daily in the week of April 3, to 104,000 barrels daily last week. Production also declined in the Inglewood and Rosecrans fields.

He can't wait!

There is but one through train a day and it leaves on time—he can't wait. His business appointment is at 9 a. m. tomorrow. Delay would be fatal.

Our friend "wouldn't let anything interfere with business for the world." We wonder if that is entirely true. We wonder if he has neglected to find time for one of the most business-like things a man can do. By that we mean putting his estate in order—making a will with desirable Trust provisions.

It is a very simple matter to arrange, while living, business-like Trust provisions which automatically control your estate in the future. An hour's talk with a Trust Officer of the Seaboard would make the details clear to you.

There is a Seaboard Trust suited to any of your plans. One can be made to operate during your life, or after, or both. In this way, you can provide for the distribution of the income and the principal of your estate with the same foresight you displayed in building it.

Protecting your estate is always good business. Waiting to do so is very generally poor business.

Call at our offices today—or send for our booklet, "Seven ways to protect your Family and Property." The booklet itself has a Guide Chart which will answer many of your first questions. We will gladly answer any others that may arise in your mind.

This FREE Booklet and Guide Chart suggest practical answers to the following "IFS."

If your business will require ready funds and experienced attention at your death—what then?
If you can secure no more life insurance—what then?
If your time is too crowded for careful, personal management of your property—what then?
If your wife is not experienced in business matters—what then?
If your dependent daughter is soon to marry—what then?
If inheritance taxes might force your executor to sell the cream of your estate—what then?
If your son is to succeed to your business—what then?

Every business man should have a copy of this booklet. May we mail you a copy?

COTTON EXCHANGE WINS IN HIGH COURT

Gets a Permanent Injunction Against Odd Lot Exchange in Suit Begun by Latter.

PROTECTS ITS QUOTATIONS

Is Not In Interstate Trade, Is Not Monopoly and Has Right to Secrecy, Court Holds.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, April 12.—The right of the New York Cotton Exchange to deny the use of its quotations to firms and corporations not associated with it in membership was upheld by the Supreme Court today in an opinion read by Associate Justice Sutherland. The Odd Lot Cotton Exchange brought suit under the Federal anti-trust laws to have the New York Cotton Exchange adjudged a monopoly in restraint of trade.

It also sought to have canceled a contract between the New York Cotton Exchange and the Western Union Telegraph Company by which the Cotton Exchange's quotations were disseminated.

The purpose of the suit was to compel the New York Cotton Exchange to furnish the Odd Lot Cotton Exchange with continuous quotations of prices bid and asked for cotton.

The Court ruled that the Exchange is not an interstate corporation, and it is not subject to the regulatory provisions of the Federal anti-trust statutes.

No Unfairness, Court Holds.

The Court ruled that the Cotton Exchange was not engaged in interstate commerce, but in a local business.

"If interstate shipments are actually made," the Court said, "it is not because of any contractual obligation to that effect, but it is a chance happening which cannot have the effect of converting purely local agreements of the transactions to which they relate into subjects of interstate commerce. The most that can be said is that the agreements are likely to give rise to interstate shipments."

Justice Sutherland said further that "there is an attempt to allege unfair methods of competition which may be put aside at once, since relief in such cases under the Federal Trade Commission must be afforded in the first instance by the commission."

The Court upheld the averment of the New York Cotton Exchange that its contract for the distribution of its quotations by the telegraph company was neither an attempt at monopoly nor a restraint of trade.

Exchange Made Counter Claims.

In its answer to the Odd Lot suit the Exchange asserted that it had a legal right to safeguard its quotations and to refuse to furnish them to any person who in its opinion might misuse them.

It set up counter claims to the effect that the Odd Lot Exchange, although it had been refused permission to use the New York Cotton Exchange quotations, "was purloining them or receiving them from some person who was purloining them and giving them out to its members, who were distributing them to bucket shops with the consequent impairment of the value of the appellee's property therein."

The decision upholds the ruling of the District Court as reaffirmed by the Circuit Court of Appeals. It makes permanent the injunction granted the defendants against the Odd Lot Exchange.

The New York Cotton Exchange for a number of years has been fighting the so-called bucket shop cotton brokers. In virtually all instances they have been successful and several have been closed in recent years.

FORM BEECH CORPORATION.

Articles of incorporation were filed with the Hudson County Clerk in Jersey City late yesterday afternoon for the Beech Corporation with authorized stock of $10,000,000. The articles authorize the corporation to conduct general business, real estate, investments, etc. The address given is 15 Exchange Place, Jersey City. This is the address of the United States Corporation Company, named as agents.

Three employes of the United States Corporation Company, Raymond Gorman, Harry C. Hand and Samuel C. Wood, are named as incorporators in this case. Gorman subscribes to eight shares, Hand, one, and Wood, one, making $1,000 in all. They give 150 Broadway, Manhattan, as their address. This is the New York address of the Corporation Company. White & Case of 14 Wall Street are the attorneys.

Governor Signs Kosher Food Bill.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, April 12.—Governor Smith has approved a bill sponsored by Assemblyman Mandlebaum, Democrat, of New York, adding a new section to the penal law in relation to the sale of kosher food in restaurants. The new statute makes it a misdemeanor for the proprietor of a restaurant falsely to represent food to be kosher or as having been prepared in accordance with the Orthodox Hebrew religious requirements.

Gives Railroad Valuation.

WASHINGTON, April 12 (AP).—A tentative valuation of $14,996,000 as of June 30, 1919, has been placed by the Interstate Commerce Commission on the Denver & Salt Lake Railroad. The properties of the Gallatin Valley Railway of Montana were tentatively valued at $1,312,580 as of June 30, 1918.

COOPER ABANDONS WATER POWER TALK

Wires He Cannot Speak at Albany on Date Set by Knight and McGinnies.

MEETING IS CALLED OFF

Other Republican Leaders Objected to Appearance of Foe of Governor Smith's Policy.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, April 12.—Colonel Hugh L. Cooper, the water power engineer who appeared last week before the State Water Power Commission in support of the request for a permit to develop water power on the St. Lawrence made by a subsidiary of the du Ponts, the Aluminum Company of America and the General Electric Company, will not speak on water power at a public meeting here next week.

Following the hearing, at which he testified, Colonel Cooper was invited by the Republican leaders in the Legislature, Senator Knight and Speaker McGinnies, to make an address on the proposed private corporation development on the St. Lawrence. At a public meeting in the State Education Building here next Tuesday or Wednesday, according to a telegram received today by Senator Knight, Colonel Cooper will not be able to keep the engagement.

Senator Knight and Speaker McGinnies had planned to invite the members of the Legislature to hear Colonel Cooper. Some of the other Republican leaders, including George K. Morris, the State Chairman, were said to be strongly opposed to having Colonel Cooper deliver an address on water power under Republican auspices.

Colonel Cooper is a foe of Governor Smith's policy of State development of water power. On one occasion when he appeared before the Water Power Commission he asserted that State development could be undertaken only at twice the cost of private development under State regulation, as proposed by the Republicans.

In a statement announcing that Colonel Cooper would not be able to deliver the proposed address, Senator Knight said:

"Attention has been called to the fact that at the State Water Power Commission meeting held last Friday an invitation was extended to Colonel Cooper, who appeared as a witness for the applicant for a license, to speak at a public meeting upon the proposal. Following the testimony given by Colonel Cooper in a previous meeting, criticism was made that no opportunity was given for a cross-examination of the witness by those especially informed on the subject. It was with the view that a wider opportunity might be given the public to hear and criticize the St. Lawrence River project that this invitation or suggestion of a meeting was given. It was distinctly stated that it was intended that it be a public meeting for all who might be interested.

"No matter what the view of any one may be touching the question of State or private development of the State's water power resources, he cannot be so callous in his opinion that he is unwilling to hear different sides of the matter. I think that it is characteristic of the citizens of this State that they wish to be informed on any subject, that they may act with intelligence and understanding.

"However, we have just received a telegram from Mr. Cooper advising that he will be unable to speak on the date designated. I do not deem it of sufficient importance now to seek to fix upon any other date."

The Republican leaders who were opposed to the plan to have Colonel Cooper speak are said to have taken the position that since Governor Smith's measures to carry out his water power policy had been killed there was no reason why the subject should be revived during the closing days of the session.

BERLIN TO BUY SUBWAYS.

City Offers Company $35,000,000 for the Lines.

BERLIN, April 12.—That the Berlin Subway Company will accept the city's offer of $35,000,000, made today, for its portion of Berlin's underground system, is the belief in well-informed circles tonight.

Though the company's books show a profit of about 7 per cent. for last year's business, it is understood that the restrictions on the extension of lines placed in its path is leading to their willingness to sell.

Boroughs of Greater Berlin have taken transportation concessions into their own hands and intend to build their own lines, forcing the Subway Company to operate in conjunction with them.

The city promises to pay stockholders at par value for the shares with interest at 7 per cent. until it is able to redeem the entire issue.

BELGRADE MINISTER RESIGNS

By Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

BELGRADE, April 12.—The fragility of the new Cabinet formed last Thursday was demonstrated today when the Minister of Transportation, Krsta Miletitch, offered his resignation to Premier Usunovitch. The Croatian leader, Stean Raditch, Minister of Education, who caused the overthrow of the previous Cabinet, was again responsible.

In a fiery speech yesterday in Takradx he denounced the corruption in the Transport Ministry, though he held that M. Miletitch was not personally responsible.

M. Miletitch, in his letter of resignation, after replying to these charges, declared he refused any longer to "sit at the same table with such a vagabond neerdowell as Raditch."

His resignation has not yet been accepted.

RICHMOND CAR LINE IS NEARING ITS END

Constant Deficit Stirs Mayor to Ask If Buses Would Not Give Better Service.

$75,000 LOST WITHIN YEAR

Residents of Far Rockaway and Hammels May Buy Line the Long Island Wishes to End.

Abandonment of municipal operation of the Staten Island Midland Railroad Company's surface lines was foreshadowed yesterday at a meeting of the Committee of the Whole of the Board of Estimate, during discussion of a request for an appropriation of $140,000 for the continuation of operation by Albert Goldman, Commissioner of Plant and Structures. The operating deficit for last year has been about $75,000.

"Isn't there any cure for this constant deficit?" Mayor Walker asked.

"The road is being run at a considerable loss and I don't believe there is any prospect of future profits," Mr. Goldman replied. "Traffic on the lines appears less today than it was in the past."

"If you had a good bus system in the territory which the Midland lines serve wouldn't it render far better service?" asked the Mayor.

"With a good bus system, the trolley lines would not be necessary," said Mr. Goldman.

"What is the deficit on this trolley line?" asked the Mayor.

"There is a deficit of $75,000 for this fiscal year," Mr. Goldman replied. "However, this loss, which is solely one of operating expenses, does not cover other losses, or, rather, payments which must be made if the operation is to be continued."

Joseph V. McKee, President of the Board of Aldermen, said he had been informed that municipal operation of the Midland surface lines had resulted in a loss of $150,000 to the city since 1920.

Far Rockaway Line.

Residents of Far Rockaway and Hammels may purchase the surface line of the Ocean Electric Railway Company, if they can come to terms with its owner, the Long Island Railroad, and the terms are approved by the Transit Commission, it was announced after a discussion yesterday before the Transit Commission of the Long Island Railroad Company's application to discontinue operation of the surface line between those two points. A committee of residents of the Rockaway peninsula, headed by Assemblyman William F. Brunner, will confer Friday with George Le Boutillier, Vice President of the Long Island, in an attempt to reach terms.

The hearing on the application to discontinue service was adjourned to next Tuesday. Mr. Le Boutillier reiterated that he considered continued operation of the surface cars hazardous, because they ran on the Long Island tracks. In reply to a question, Mr. Le Boutillier said that the Long Island might run a shuttle service to connect with a bus line to Far Rockaway, if a satisfactory joint rate of fare could be fixed.

Subway Decision Delayed.

Decision on what to do in the matter of lengthening the local subway station platforms of the Interborough system to take ten-car trains was postponed at a conference in Mayor Walker's office in City Hall yesterday to await an order on the matter by the Transit Commission, which probably will be issued this week.

Besides the Mayor, those participating in the conference included Edward J. Berwind, Chairman of the Board of Directors of the Interborough Rapid Transit Company; James L. Quackenbush, counsel of the company; George McAneny, Chairman of the Transit Commission, and Daniel L. Ryan of the Board of Transportation.

EARLY WHEAT BULGE LAGS AT THE FINISH

Foreigners Absorb the Surplus, but Eastern Interests Get to Selling Later.

THE MAY GOES CENT LOWER

Export, 700,000 Bushels — Corn Loses and Rye Drops in Spite of Good Sales.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, April 12.—Wheat values held within comparatively narrow limits, May having a range of only 1⅝ cents, the highest prices being made early on scattered commission house buying which found offerings light; foreigners had absorbed the surplus in the pit early. The May acted tight throughout the day, only to weaken at the last on Eastern selling, and close 1 cent lower, while deferred deliveries were off ⅝ to ⅞ cent, July leading.

The May-July spread was around 23½ cents at one time, with the finish 23 cents difference. Outside interest in the market was lacking a good part of the day and the local element had things to themselves, although early there was a good trade in the May.

Liverpool failed to respond to the strength in North America on Saturday and closed ¼d. lower to ⅛d. higher, while Buenos Aires was unchanged to ½ cent higher, and Winnipeg ⅝ to ¾ cent lower.

J. P. Griffin of J. S. Bache & Co. estimates that the world's import needs to June 30, based on the average takings so far this season, will be around 210,000,000 bushels, or 40,000,000 bushels more than exporters apparently have to spare, exclusive of the United States. Broomhall figures that to July 31 importers will require 240,000,000 bushels, while exporters exclusive of the United States have 208,000,000 bushels.

The visible supply decreased 928,000 bushels the past week and is 31,116,000 bushels against 32,044,000 the previous week, and 55,244,000 last year.

The break in wheat today was due in part to sympathy with the decline in the stock market in New York, which forced out some weakly held lines of May which were sold out shortly before the close.

This is the first time in years when, under normal conditions, the theoretical import needs exceeded the quantities available in the leading exporting countries. Sales of durum from east of the Rockies are persistent. In the American and Canadian Northwest the snowfall the past Winter was below normal over a wide area.

It is said that a leading New York operator, while short May, is long more July and September in the aggregate than he is short the nearby delivery.

Local contract stocks were reduced 12,000 bushels the past week and are only 52,000 bushels.

Export sales in all positions were finally estimated at 600,000 bushels to 700,000 bushels, of which half was durum, with Italy credited with having been the buyer.

Primary arrivals today were 623,000 bushels; week ago, 684,000; last year, 577,000. Shipments were 317,000 bushels; week ago, 354,000; last year, 671,000.

Corn held within a range of ½ cent and closed unchanged to ¼ cent lower, while oats were ½ cent lower to ¼ cent higher, with the bulk of the trade in changing between May and July at ½ cent difference. Outside trade was light, but support developed through commission houses in corn to largely offset the effect of the decline in wheat and pressure from local traders, the latter remaining bearish.

The visible supply of corn decreased 957,000 bushels for the week and is 35,528,000 against 33,485,000 the previous week and 30,761,000 last year.

Primary arrivals of corn today were 573,000 bushels; week ago, 603,000; last year, 387,000, and shipments, 370,000 bushels; week ago, 453,000; last year, 502,000.

Local handlers sold 25,000 bushels of oats to exporters.

Houses with seaboard connections bought rye futures and there were reports of 100,000 bushels sold in the East for export, but the finish was ⅝@⅞ cent lower in sympathy with wheat.

GOVERNMENT LOSES IN RAISED CHECK CASE

Supreme Court Refuses Recovery of $4,702.50 From Bank in Fraud on Veterans' Bureau.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, April 12.—The Federal Government loses the difference between $47.50 and $4,750 by the refusal of the Supreme Court today to grant recovery on a Veterans' Bureau check fraudulently increased in amount.

The Government sued the National Exchange Bank of Baltimore to recover the difference. The bank won in the lower courts and these rulings were affirmed today in an opinion read by Associate Justice Holmes.

The Veterans' Bureau drew a check for $47.50 upon the United States Treasurer in favor of one Beck. After issue the check was changed to call for the payment of $4,750. Beck endorsed it to a South Carolina bank, which negotiated it to the Baltimore bank.

The Baltimore Branch of the Federal Reserve Bank of Richmond forwarded the check to the United States Treasurer and was credited with $4,750.

The Government contended that the drawer and drawee of the check were not the same in such sense as to charge the drawee with knowledge of the amount of the check, and that therefore the Government could recover as for money paid under a mistake of fact.

In the decision, the Supreme Court said:

"If the drawer and the drawee are the same, the drawer cannot recover for an overpayment to an innocent payee because he is bound to know his own checks.

"In this case there is no doubt that in truth the check was drawn by the United States upon itself. The Government attempts to escape this conclusion by the fact that the hand that drew and the hand that was to pay were not the same.

"When the United States issues an order upon itself it has notice of the amount and when it comes to pay to an innocent holder making a claim as of right it is at arm's length and takes the risk.

"We are of opinion that the United States is not excepted from the general rule by the largeness of its dealings and its having to employ agents to do what if done by a principal in person would leave no room for doubt."

YALE AND NEW HAVEN IN BRIDGE QUANDARY

Special to The New York Times.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., April 12.—Yale and the City of New Haven have agreed to leave to the State Supreme Court the question of the right of the municipality to grant permission to the university to construct a bridge from the old Arts School Building to the $1,000,000 art museum, which, it was today announced, has been pledged to Yale by an anonymous donor.

The right of the Board of Aldermen to approve or disapprove the bridge is in doubt, pending decision upon a similar case which arose when the A. B. Hendryx Hardware Company built a similar bridge between two of its buildings on Audubon Street last Fall without the city's permission. Injunction proceedings and lawsuits have followed and the Supreme Court is expected to pass final judgment upon the matter next month.

Yale and the city have agreed to present the facts in the case in a friendly search for a court ruling to Judge Arthur Ells of the Superior Court.

OPENS IRRIGATION IN INDIA.

By Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LAHORE, British India, April 12.—The State opening today by Sir Malcolm Hailey, Governor of the Punjab, of the first completed unit of the great Sutlej Valley irrigation scheme, was the occasion of a great assemblage, representative of all parts of the province and all sections of its people.

The Nawab of Rawalpur, who stands to become through the scheme richer than Haroun el Raschid, from whom he claims descent, came up the river from his State by motor launch.

Distinguished Indian engineers were present while the crowds of laborers on the irrigation work kept the holiday in gayest attire to watch the proceedings.

The Sutlej Valley irrigation scheme was first proposed by a young engineer officer in 1854 and will not be fully completed until 1933. Sir Malcolm Hailey pointed out today that of 65,000,000 acres of land in the Punjab, 35,000,000 are cultivated, and of these 18,500,000 acres will be watered by irrigation.

PRICES OF COTTON TREND DIVERSELY

Near Months Gain and Distant Ones Lose—Uninfluenced by Stock Market.

MAY PREMIUM ADVANCES

Spread From December Position Increases to 177 Points, Against 140 a Week Ago.

New and old crop positions moved in opposite directions in yesterday's cotton market. Near months gained four to six points, while distant ones lost seven to nine points from last week's quotations. Weakness in the stock market and heavy rains over the major portion of the belt Saturday night failed to influence the course of prices to any perceptible degree, and covering of May contracts was the controlling factor. With first notice day coming on April 27, both domestic and foreign interests are becoming more active in terminating commitments in that month.

Over-Sunday weather developments, while unfavorable in several States both as regards moisture and temperatures, were in great measure offset by predictions of an improvement in Western sections today. The weather was the warmest of the season in the extreme Northwest and furnished prospects of rising temperatures west of the river, with unsettled conditions in the Eastern belt.

A week ago May sold 140 points over December, and yesterday this premium had increased to 177 points. Trade covering of outstanding obligations, price fixing by mills and the taking in of hedges and their transfer to later months have furnished a buying power operating to widen the spread between near and distant months. The May contracts wanted have mostly been furnished by spot interests that sold May and replaced with either July or new crops. May contracts were available on these swapping orders yesterday 58 points over July, but there were no indications that holders of cotton in the South had become sellers in New York as an outlet for stocks still remaining unsold. It is the continued lack of pressure of cotton on either the New Orleans or New York markets which leaves each near position strong and at a premium over succeeding months as contracts mature.

At the Saturday session of the American Cotton Shippers' Association at Atlanta delegates went on record against the present system of issuing two Washington cotton reports each month

RUBBER MARKET CONTINUES EASY

Futures Drop 40 to 100 Points —Report of Increased Stocks Blamed for Weakness.

STREET MARKET IS DULLER

Prices Remain Much the Same as on Saturday—Spot Sheets Are Quoted at 51½ Cents.

Rubber futures continued easier again yesterday. The decline ran from 40 to 100 points in the near-by positions, the market's activity being confined to the first three months for a volume of 184 contracts. The far-off positions closed from 47.20 cents for March to 49.60 cents for August. Short covering and factory buying on a moderate scale brought a partial recovery from the earlier lows just before the close.

Weakness of the market was attributed to the report of the Rubber Association, which revealed an increase of 3,800 tons in stocks on hand and in transit as of March 31, compared with the preceding month. Returns from a questionnaire sent to manufacturers, dealers and importers also disclosed March consumption as 32,900 tons, an increase of 1,800 tons over February, and estimated the stock afloat as 43,550 tons on March 31, compared with 46,930 tons at the end of February. Rubber stocks in London as of April 10, as compiled by the Rubber Association in London, showed an increase in stocks for the week of 1,661 tons, which leaves the present holdings at 15,300 tons.

	High.	Low.	Close.	Saturday Close.
May	51.50	50.80	51.00	52.00

GREEN CALLS LABOR CHIEF FOE OF WAR

He Recalls That Since 1887 the Federation Has Always Stood for Peace.

IS OUT FOR DISARMAMENT

Growth of Such a Policy Abroad Is Encouraging, He Tells Park Av. Baptist Church Council.

The American Federation of Labor is unalterably opposed to war and supports the doctrine of settlement of all international differences through arbitration, William Green, President of the Federation, said last night in an address before the Fellowship Council of the Park Avenue Baptist Church.

"The great World War was the tragedy of tragedies," he declared. "It was the climax of the horrors of all previous wars."

He said that labor had led in the movement toward a peaceful solution of national and international disputes, because workers had been more deeply and vitally affected by war than any other group of society by reason of their numbers and social status.

"There is no subject which appeals more strongly to working men and women than peace," he said. "It has so thoroughly occupied their thoughts and attention that at practically every convention of the American Federation of Labor held since 1887 consideration in some form has been given to this all-absorbing topic. The proceedings of the conventions of the American Federation of Labor are replete with declarations and pronouncementos upon peace and the attitude of the American Federation of Labor toward peace.

"One of the encouraging signs and tendencies manifested in many nations of the world is the growing sentiment in favor of international disarmament. This movement will prove to be a strong influence in promoting international peace. An individual heavily armed is a menace to personal safety. In like manner, a nation unreasonably equipped for war is a menace to the peace of the world. A nation will not so readily resort to war, as a means of settling disputes, if it is not well prepared for war and thoroughly armed.

"It is inconceivable that any nation would invade the territory or domain of another nation for selfish reasons or for the purpose of territorial acquisition, but if such an unexpected development would arise, wherein another nation would be the aggressor, attempting to invade the United States, to impair our country's sovereignty or to attack us in an aggressive war campaign, I am confident the working people of the United States would respond to the needs of the Government. We would be willing to defend our country, our liberty and our freedom.

"The American Federation of Labor will in the future, as it has in the past, associate itself with all practical movements engaged in promoting international peace."

Mr. Green was introduced by Mrs. John D. Rockefeller Jr., Chairman of the council, who described the labor President as "one of the greatest leaders of organized labor America has ever had."

SEES NEW NERVES GROWING.

Yale Research Student Reveals His Experiments With a Tadpole.

Special to The New York Times.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., April 12.—S. Culver Williams, a research student in the Osborn Laboratory at Yale, has succeeded in performing the hitherto unaccomplished feat of studying the growth of nerve tissue in a living tadpole after the nerve had been cut, and has reported his experiments to the American Anatomical Association. He has developed a method whereby the nerves in the tail of the animal can be studied at great magnification after the cutting of the nerves.

It has been found that when the nerve is cut the portion beyond the main part breaks down and new fibre grows out from the severed end. The study of the different stages of the growth, as reported technically by Mr. Williams, discloses that it has been found that the new outgrowing part may or may not follow the path of the disintegrating part. If it follows the path, the growth will be perhaps three times as fast as if it does not.

The chief value of the experiment is probably its importance as a study of nerve regeneration. The tadpoles studied were, of course, subjected to anaesthetization, rendering the operation painless. Mr. Williams is a student of Professor Ross G. Harrison and is a graduate of Wesleyan University, Middletown. He is a Yale graduate student and lives in Seymour, Conn.

CHARGE EUCHARISTIC FRAUD

Chicago Society Alleges Selling of Advertising in a Fake Program.

CHICAGO, April 12 (AP).—On the complaint of officials of the International Eucharistic Society, which holds its world congress here in June, detectives today visited the offices of the American-Foreign News Service Bureau to question men said to be selling advertising for an unauthorized "program and guide" for the congress.

Louis A. Satany, said to have come from New York to direct the organization, was taken to the State's Attorney's office by detectives, who seized books and records in the offices.

Mgr. C. J. Quille, General Secretary of the society, said that the sponsors of the "guide" were claiming authorization of their work by the society and were selling advertising for as much as $1,500 for a cover page. An investigation by society officials has convinced them that $10,000 has been collected for the publication.

The society announced again that no solicitations are being made for the congress and that no publication has been authorized except the official program, which will carry no paid advertising.

More Optimism in Hosiery Trade.

So far as that branch of the knit goods industry making the better grades of women's full-fashioned hosiery is concerned, there is an increasing feeling of optimism regarding the immediate future. For a while, just before Easter, there were signs of a slowing up of the movement of this merchandise for the first time in several months. Buyers have now apparently recovered from the temporary slump in consumer purchasing, however, and again are placing orders. Most of them are small, though, and it is expected that this condition will prevail for the next few weeks. One of the interesting things about the current demand is the increasing call for white hose from those parts of the country where warm weather is first felt. Not much call for hose of this hue is looked for from buyers nearer this market for three or four weeks yet.

Gray Goods Were More Active.

Gray goods picked up considerably in this market yesterday, and a fairly large volume was disposed of during the day. Spot sales of 39-inch 68-72 print cloths were made at 8¾ cents, and business was also done in spot 38½-inch 64-60s at 7¾ cents. Bids of 7½ cents for the latter construction, for July to September delivery, were reported to be numerous. Other print-cloth sales of the day included spot 38½-inch 48-squares and 44-40s at 6 and 5¼ cents, respectively. Spot and April deliveries were sold in the sheetings, the sales including the following: 36-inch 5-yard at 7½ cents; 36-inch 5.50s at 6¾ cents, and 37-inch 48-square, 4-yard at 8¾ cents. In the drills some fairly good buying of 37-inch 3.96s was reported at 9 cents. The rest of the market was devoid of feature.

Coat-Dress to Have Vogue?.

With the interest shown by consumers in suits this season as a stimulating influence, the coat-dress is receiving considerable attention from certain style houses here. Models have been prepared for late Spring and also Summer, but the main vogue of the coat-dress, if it materializes as expected, will be during the Fall. It was pointed out yesterday that, so far as that indefinable something called "chic" is concerned, the coat-dress ranks high. It was added that the style is also one that is favorable to the higher-priced models, which would help sales to the so-called exclusive consumer and also prolong the length of its vogue.

Established New Volume Sales.

According to comment in the local floor-coverings trade yesterday, it is highly probable that a new record was set during the past week in the volume of carpets and rugs sold here. During the opening weeks of seasons through the boom period of the war and immediately thereafter, when prices were high, it is probable that the sales of the past week were at least equaled as to dollars and cents total, but not in the number of separate pieces sold. Not only were about 95,000 bales of carpets and rugs disposed of at the Smith auction during the week, but thousands of bales of similar goods in the form of discontinued patterns and merchandise of a "distress" nature were let out by other members of the trade. The cash value of the merchandise disposed of during the week, including the auction goods, was estimated at between $3,000,000 and $10,000,000.

Will Work With Trade Council.

A willingness to work with the proposed trade relations bureau dealing with group buying was expressed by manufacturers of juniors' and children's coats at the meeting yesterday of the Junior Coat Group of the National Wholesale Women's Wear Association at the Hotel McAlpin. These manufacturers, who recently refused to send their samples to the group-buying offices, reiterated their opposition to certain features of group buying, but expressed their willingness to work with such a bureau to do away with what they consider their grievances, according to Meyer Bloomfield, business consultant of the association. This trade relations bureau will be composed of representatives of the group-buying units and the ready-to-wear manufacturers and wholesalers. It will probably be known as the Wholesale and Retail Council, Mr. Bloomfield said.

Fall Openings at End of Month.

Despite reports to the contrary, it is not held likely that there will be any general openings of important lines of Fall broadsilks much before the end of the month. One of the best known lines in the market, for example, will not be shown until the last week of the month, although previous reports stated these goods would be offered this week. There is no reason to rush the openings of Fall silks, according to many executives in the market, in view of the delayed business that is expected for both Spring and Summer.

Are Buying More Furs.

Reports from the raw-skin end of the fur industry make it appear that, despite the strike, there has been quite a noticeable expansion lately in the purchases of furs for making up into Fall and Winter garments. Furs suitable for Spring neckwear, notably silver fox, have also been more active, and a broader demand for white fox is likewise reported. Northern muskrat, which are scarce, are selling freely. There is also some call for Southern "rats," principally tops. Among the other furs listed as "good" at the moment are squirrel, mink and marmot. Some demand for beaver is reported. The feeling in the skin trade is that the strike is slowly breaking, and that generally active business is not far away.

Art in Dress Style Revue.

A formal presentation of "Art in Dress" was given at the Art Centre last night by Mrs. Helene Volka, fashion director of Botany Worsted Mills. She introduced the showing by an analysis of dress as an expression of today's changing social standards. The style revue strongly emphasized color, featuring Chanel red, matelot blue and Veronese green as basic shades of the Spring modes. A later grouping presented coral sands and June rose, the new mid-Summer pastel shades, in gowns of crepe Elizabeth. Among the noteworthy fine woolens and worsteds represented were a sports ballseur of gray mannish mixture, a redingote of black reps over white crepe and a sports ensemble of kasha and flat crepe in coral tones. Sports coats and a series of formal topcoats included colorful plaid homespuns and tweeds, coverts, lustrous twills, diagonals and wool velours, many of which were lavishly fur trimmed. Sumptuous evening wraps, the latest accessories and new developments in stylish footwear were also shown in the course of the revue.

Fall Clothing Lines Shown.

While the base prices of a few lines of men's clothing now being opened for Fall, are slightly lower than a year ago, the general average of most lines is practically unchanged. Some firms, however, in order to increase their volume orders, have added cheaper ranges to their offerings. Most men are now out with some of the new lines, while those representing firms which have been slow in opening will go out in their territories within a week or so. The early trip, it was said yesterday, will take on more the nature of in sounding out process by the salesmen to ascertain retail buying sentiment, and to what extent it has been influenced by poor Spring selling weather.

Will Sell Furs in Masonic Hall.

The entire Spring fur sale of the New York Auction Company, Inc., which will start on April 26, will be held in the Masonic Hall. Announcement to this effect was made yesterday by General Manager J. Gordon Noakes. There had been some question of where the selling during the week beginning May 3 would take place, inasmuch as the main auditorium of the hall, where the sale is held, will then be occupied by the annual meeting of the New York State Grand Lodge. It has been decided, Mr. Noakes said, to use one of the smaller rooms of the hall during the concluding days, when furs of less general interest to the trade will be put on the block. Mr. Noakes also said that on April 21 the company would sell for the estate of Arthur Wachtel about $50,000 worth of raw and dressed furs. Foreign skins will predominate in this sale, which will be held in the warehouse of the corporation, 218 West Twenty-sixth Street.

CARPET AND RUG PRICES.

Most of Those Named for Fall Yesterday Show Reductions.

Prices on 9 by 12 rugs ranging from unchanged on Hudson tapestries to $1.40 lower for fringed Colonial velvets—the comparisons being made with the Spring list of Nov. 2 last—were issued to the trade yesterday by the Alexander Smith & Sons Carpet Company. They will cover the production of the company for the Fall season, and are guaranteed against decline to Oct. 1.

With the exception of the Meadowbrook worsteds, which are unchanged; the special Carlton axminsters, which are new, and the Potomac axminsters, which are higher, all of the other changes in the new list consist of reductions of 60 cents from the Spring figures. The Potomac axminsters, which are priced in the Fall list at $40.80, against $36 in the Spring list, have been advanced because it is the intention of the company to turn out merchandise of higher quality under this brand for the new season. This explanation of the advance was given by Sales Manager E. A. Haggenmuller, who also said that prices on the carpets of the Smith Company for Fall would show no changes from those in the Spring list. These are the Fall prices on the 9 by 12 rugs of the company:

Ardsley axminster, $27; Carlton axminster, $31.80; Carlton axminster, special, $33; Chesapeake axminster, $28.80; Potomac axminster, $32.80; Rockingham axminster, $15.60; Manor made velvet, fringed, $26.99; Colonial velvet, fringed, Silkoline and Shearwood worsted, $24.

Mr. Haggenmuller said yesterday that a number of the larger jobbers laid down sizable orders during the day, and that little difficulty in obtaining Fall business was looked for as a result of the active buying by wholesalers at the auction. Although these merchants took about $4,000,000 worth of the goods sold, it is expected that they will have pushed into the hands of retailers within the next sixty days. Branch office men of the Smith Company left for their various cities last night, and the company's traveling salesmen will leave for their respective territories during the present week.

A Fall price list, showing reductions of about 5 per cent. from the Spring figures on 9 by 12 rugs all through the lines of the Mohawk Carpet Mills, Inc., and C. H. Masland & Sons was given out late yesterday afternoon by the wholesale department of W. and J. Sloane, which acts as selling agent for the products of these manufacturers. On 9 by 12 axminsters of the Mohawk Carpet Mills these prices are quoted in the Fall list: Mohawk, $39.60; Amsterdam, $31.80; Victory, $27.35; Khorassan, $29.10, and Liberty, $26.60. Prices on Mohawk Mills velvet rugs run this way: Norwood, $28.50, and Gotham, fringed, $20.10. For National tapestry rugs $16.55 is quoted, while the figure for Lincoln "tapa" is $14.60.

In the higher-priced lines the following prices were quoted on the 9 by 12 fringed wiltons of the Mohawk Mills: Akbar, $61.70; Balbeck, $57.55; Koran, $76.35, and Karnak, $103. Two new wilton rugs, known as Kayen worsted wilton and Araby wool wilton, are offered for Fall. The list price of the former is $67.50, while the quotation on the latter is $58.50.

For the products of C. H. Masland & Sons the Sloane list quotes on the 9 by 12s: Beacon tapestry, $10.50; Fernbrook velvet, $18, and Masland Argonne, $29.40. The other Masland goods are priced only for the 27 by 54-inch size.

No new list was issued yesterday by Charles W. Poulson, Inc., as had been reported would be done. Mr. Poulson said that between now and June 1, when the Fall list will be distributed, business would be taken at prices averaging 5 per cent. under the figures that had prevailed through the Spring season.

URGES PROTECTION OF INSANE VETERANS

Kindred Wants Administration of Their Estates Turned Over to Veterans' Bureau.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, April 12.—As a result of allegations made in Congress that one of the Commissioners of the District of Columbia, appointed by President Coolidge, has received 10 per cent. of the moneys of insane veterans passing through his hands as guardian attorney, and from this practice has accumulated $100,000, Representative Kindred of New York introduced today a bill providing for the administration of the estates of insane and deceased soldiers of the World War by the United States Veterans' Bureau.

The Kindred bill proposes to stop the appointment of guardians for incompetent veterans and the designation of administrators of the estates of deceased veterans by State courts, so that any moneys or equities due in such cases from the Government may be paid directly to the legal dependents or beneficiaries of such veterans through the guardians' division of the Veterans' Bureau.

Representative Kindred, who is a physician and psychiatrist, said today:

"These abuses have occurred in connection with the appointment under existing law of improper and unscrupulous guardians, not only in the District of Columbia but in many of the States. I personally know of one or more such cases in which there have been not only abuses by guardians but failure of the courts having power to appoint them to remove them even after evidence has been presented of unscrupulous conduct on the part of such guardians.

"My amendments to the law would eliminate and prohibit fees of any kind to be paid in this connection to any official, either Federal or State, and would preserve to the veteran and his dependents or beneficiaries every cent due him by the United States Government which he has served.

"Especial attention is called to the fact that my amendments also provide that all moneys and equities due from the United States Government to any veteran shall be paid directly to the veteran, without being subject to any judgments or any claims of any kind against the veteran or his estate."

BRASS CO. SELLS ITS ASSETS AND REALTY

TO SELL ALL THE STOCK

Builders Are Negotiating for East 27th St. Property to Erect Apartments.

An unusual transaction was made yesterday when all the assets of the Manhattan Brass Company, including the real estate and business of the company, was purchased by Robert B. Bowler.

The real estate comprises a plot of 54,000 square feet, 100 feet west of First Avenue, running through from East Twenty-seventh Street to East Twenty-eighth Street, 172 feet on each street and 187 feet through the block. It adjoins Cornell Medical College, which occupies the block front on the west side of First Avenue. On the easterly side of First Avenue is Bellevue Hospital, which occupies approximately three square blocks. The present improvements comprise one four and one six story factory building, fully sprinklered, and a number of smaller units.

The plans for the disposition of this property are rather unusual. All orders at present unfinished are to be completed, after which the stock, finished and unfinished, will be disposed of, and negotiations are pending looking toward the disposal of all special machinery, dies and equipment. The Manhattan Brass Company is one of the few concerns that can turn out the finished product from the raw material all under its own roof and for this reason the company filled many orders for depth bombs used by the allied fleet during the war. As to the real estate itself, a resale is being negotiated to a syndicate, headed by a builder and an architect, who contemplate the erection of an apartment house or apartment houses on the plot to accommodate a pressing demand for modern housing accommodation in this locality.

There are no housing facilities in the immediate neighborhood to accommodate the Faculty and students of Cornell Medical College, the house staff, nurses, &c., of Bellevue Hospital, to say nothing of the innumerable people engaged in business along Fourth Avenue, including those who will be with the New York Life, who may desire to live within walking distance of their occupation.

Leon R. Jillson of Hayden & Post represented the Manhattan Brass Company. Robert B. Bowler was represented by Martin J. Birmingham. The brokers in this transaction were Cyrille Carreau, Inc., and Simes & Simes.

CONTRACTORS and BUILDERS

This advertisement is addressed to the busy contractor or builder who wants some of the load taken from his shoulders by a young man who is a tactful negotiator, an accomplished correspondent, an air-tight contract writer, a buyer of acknowledged ability and a finished estimator. The advertiser, who is equally at home in both contracting and speculative fields is thirty-one years of age and a graduate of a leading college in engineering. He should like to hear from you if your business warrants spending $10,000 a year for such a man. D 561 Times.

BANKRUPTCY SALES.

IN THE DISTRICT COURT OF THE United States for the Southern District of New York.—In Bankruptcy. In the matter of Morris Greenberg, Bankrupt.—Chas. Shongood, U. S. Auctioneer for the Southern District of New York in bankruptcy, sells this day, Tuesday, April 13, 1926, by order of the Court, at MANHATTAN—FOR SALE OR TO LET.

There is plenty of room here for a spacious open office, comfortable private offices, conference and reception room with no waste space.

No Waste Space!

THIS office of 2,250 sq. ft. is typical of the efficient manner in which office space in the One Park Avenue Building may be utilized. The efficiency of space in this building, coupled with the exceptionally low scale of rentals is partly responsible for the number of important commercial concerns who are now its tenants.

Let us show you how comfortably and economically your business may be housed here.

Offices from 250 sq. ft. up. Owner's renting office on premises or apply to your own broker.

Winifred Boyle, Academy of St. Francis Xavier, "The Constitution."

Beatrice Leon, Holy Rosary School, "Marshall and The Constitution."

Gerda Halgreen, Academy of Our Lady of the Blessed Sacrament, "The Constitution."

The two winners were Edith Green, St. James Academy for Girls, and William Erskine, the Flatbush School.

The auditorium of the Academy of St. Francis Xavier was made available through the courtesy of the Right Rev. Mgr. David J. Hickey, pastor of St. Francis Xavier parish. The Chairman was Brother Columba, principal of St. Francis High School, who is Borough Chairman for the parochial-private schools entered in the National Oratorical Contest there. The judges were the Rev. J. Roger Smith of St. John's College, Brooklyn; Eugene A. Colligan, principal of Boys' High School, and Professor H. W. Humbie of St. Lawrence University, Brooklyn Law School. An attractive musical program was a feature.

This included the Flatbush School Glee Club, directed by Mrs. Mabel Corey Watt, and the following student artistes: Miss Mary Casey, who gave "Morning," "Oley Speaks" and "Thais" (violin selection); Miss Charlotte Rehman, Rachmaninoff's "Polichinelle," and Miss Helen Janes, "Liebestraume." Franz Liszt.

Robinson Hall at Adelphi Academy was offered for the evening by Eugene C. Alder, who presided as chairman. The Adelphi Academy Glee Club gave several selections.

The Bronx public high schools will hold two important borough semi-final contests this afternoon at Morris High School and Evander Childs High School. The three winning speakers at each event will qualify for the borough final contest at Morris High School on Friday evening, according to Elmer E. Bogart, Principal there, and Borough Chairman in charge of all arrangements for the contest.

The Bronx Borough final will go to make a five-star series for Friday with similar borough contests being held also in Manhattan, Brooklyn, Queens and Richmond. The Manhattan final will be held Friday afternoon, at Julia Richman High School. The other three will be held in the evening—at Girls' High School, Brooklyn; Jamaica Training School for Teachers in Jamaica, and Curtis High School, Staten Island. An earlier announcement erroneously reported the Brooklyn Borough final contest would be held at Girls' Commercial High School.

The contest at Girls Commercial High School will be the Brooklyn, Queens-Richmond Interborough Final Contest, and takes place the evening of April 23. The Brooklyn final this Friday evening is scheduled for Girls High School.

M'KINLEY IS BEATEN BY WORLD COURT FOE IN ILLINOIS VOTING

Republican Senator Runs Far Behind Frank Smith, Who May Have 150,000 Majority.

ISSUE OF POLL CLEAR-CUT

Friends of the Winner, Who Is State Chairman, Call Result a Rebuke to Administration.

BRENNAN AN EASY VICTOR

Democratic Boss, Running as an Avowed Wet, Defeats Two Opponents by Big Margin.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, April 13.—Colonel Frank L. Smith of Dwight, Chairman of the Republican State Committee, and George E. Brennan, Illinois Democratic Committeeman, and a national figure in his party, were the winners in today's race for the United States Senatorial nominations in their respective parties.

Upon the issue of the World Court alone, according to the political analysis, Senator William B. McKinley went down to defeat before Smith by about 150,000, according to incomplete, but apparently decisive, returns.

With Senators looking at Illinois for the first test of sentiment on the World Court and with the wet issue raised by Brennan in his campaign, the State result is regarded as significant.

Smith's friends regard his victory as a repudiation of the course of the Administration in urging American entry into the World Court.

With nearly one-third of the State's 6,053 precincts heard from and all except twelve of the counties represented in the returns, Smith at midnight was leading the senior Illinois Senator by 48,940. The totals in 1,883 precincts were: Smith, 201,051; McKinley, 155,211.

Both in Chicago (Cook County) and in the down-State section McKinley ran behind. In 908 down-State precincts Smith had 106,603 to McKinley's 88,078. The Cook County figures were: Smith, 94,448; McKinley, 67,133.

Made World Court the Issue.

Colonel Smith in his campaign declares for tax reduction, waterways, settlement of foreign debts, aid for farmers, increase in Panama Canal tolls and conscription of wealth in war, but he laid stress on his dissent from McKinley's vote for the World Court. For this vote, in the words of Smith, the Senator was put on trial. As a secondary issue between them, the question of party regularity was raised, and Smith was described as a bolter, one who would refuse to stand by his party platform and his party leader. This apparently had little effect.

The victory of Colonel Smith comes after years of labor for his party in the State. He was candidate for Governor in the primary contest against Frank O. Lowden in 1916. In 1920 he ran against McKinley for the Senatorial nomination, losing by 11,400 votes in a three-cornered race.

In this campaign Senator McKinley had the aid of his colleague, Senator Charles S. Deneen, while Smith was backed by a majority of the machine leaders including Governor Small. Ex-Mayor William Hale Thompson entered the campaign as a manager of the fight on the World Court, bringing Senators Borah, Shipstead and James A. Reed here to present their views.

Brennan Predicts Election.

Brennan's victory was never in doubt. He took a 10-to-1 lead in Chicago at the start over his opponents, James T. McDermott and James O. Monroe, and his State vote was about 6 to 1.

The Democratic vote here was about 200,000, according to Brennan's figures, and he declared this unusual and showing a deep interest in the prohibition issue. Late tonight he predicted a "sweeping victory" for the Democratic ticket, county and State, in November.

"Under the circumstances we appear to have polled a remarkable total," he said. "It reflects more than Democratic interest. It reflects enthusiasm and determination.

"It is certain now that there will be a vigorous and aggressive fighting spirit on the issues which we have brought out in our campaign. This, we believe, is the best possible indication of a sweeping victory in November."

On the Republican side there was no issue as to prohibition. Both candidates were endorsed by the Anti-Saloon League.

In the Ninth Congressional District, where Representative Fred Britten was opposed for the Republican nomination by Mrs. Bertha Bauer, a society woman of this city, the former was renominated. Both ran as wets.

In this city the voters decisively expressed their desire for improving Chicago. Each of sixteen bond issues, totaling $19,070,000, was approved by an overwhelming majority.

Another proposition receiving the endorsement of the voters legalizes professional boxing and wrestling. It was technically a referendum on an act passed by the Legislature, which created a commission to supervise boxing. Legislators who voted for this bill predicted at the time that the next General Assembly would pass legislation to encourage horse racing.

SIX KILLED AT POLLS IN HERRIN KLAN RIOT

1,000 Shots Are Fired Between Bitter Foes Before Troops Quell the Disorder.

MILITARY RUSHED TO CITY

Commander Calls for Martial Law—Plot to Kill Nine Klansmen Alleged.

Special to The New York Times.

HERRIN, Ill., April 13.—Herrin's Klan fued, after smouldering for thirteen months, broke out again this morning and left a death toll of three Klansmen and three anti-Klansmen in its wake.

Tonight Herrin again sleeps to the familiar tune of tramping feet of State troops, two companies of guardsmen having been sent here to prevent further outbreaks.

Fanned into flame by the bitter contest for Sheriff, Williamson County's most sought-after office, the latest Klan war in Herrin began in the morning with fist fights at a polling place and culminated in a pitched battle in which pistols, and machine guns were used, near the Masonic Temple.

The men killed were:

BRIGGS, CHARLES, Deputy Sheriff, Anti-Klansman.

FORD, MARLAND, Klansman, brother of former Police Chief John Ford.

SIZEMORE, BEN, Klansman.

SIZEMORE, MACK, brother of Ben, Alderman, Klansman.

TREADWAY, Deputy Sheriff, Anti-Klansman.

WEAVER, NOBLE, Deputy Sheriff, Anti-Klansman.

Alleged Ringleader Arrested.

The wounded included John Smith, a Klansman, who was shot in the neck, and O. A. Davis, a Klansman, who was slugged over the head. Monroe ("Blackie") Arms, the anti-Klansman, who is alleged to have fired the first shot, was arrested by the militia tonight, but none of more than a hundred others who participated in the gun battle has yet been taken into custody. It is estimated that a thousand shots were fired in the exchange of volleys between the rival factions.

The anti-Klansmen are said to have plotted the death of nine Klansmen today, including John Ford, Marland Ford, the two Sizemores, Eugene Vincent, brother-in-law of John Smith; John Smith, Clyde Fowler, the Rev. P. R. Glotfelty and the Rev. J. E. Story.

It was in front of the Masonic Temple, a ward voting place, that the Sizemore brothers, Ford and one or two others had gathered.

A closed car pushed up to the curb, the doors were thrown open and the occupants began firing. The fire was returned by those who had not been shot down at the first volley and one of the men, said to have been "Blackie Arms, fell from the car into the street. Another was badly wounded and slumped to the floor of the car as it was driven rapidly away.

Soldiers Reach Scene Too Late.

Troops, which had already reached Herrin and were guarding Smith's garage, where an earlier shooting had occurred, could not reach the polling place in time to avert the murders there.

Late this evening Lieut. Col. R. M. Davis, in command of the troops at Herrin, said that he would ask for enough troops to place the city under

SEIZE RADIO BURGLAR AT BASEBALL GAME; HE ADMITS MURDER

BIG CROWD SEES STRUGGLE

Prisoner Confesses He Killed Patrolman Kenny, Shot Three, Got 14 Radios in 29 Thefts.

'LIKED MUSIC,' IS HIS REASON

Terrorized Woodhaven, Queens—Captors to Be Promoted From Third to First Grade Detectives.

The "radio burglar" who has terrorized Woodhaven, Queens, for nearly three months was caught yesterday afternoon as he was about to enter the Polo Grounds to attend the opening baseball game of the season. He is Paul Emanuel Hilton, an ex-convict, 28 years old, with no address except Bowery lodging houses.

Hilton admitted the murder of Patrolman Arthur Kenny and the shooting of Patrolman Frank Donnolly in escaping after a burglary on March 25, the shooting of Patrolman Jacob Biegel on Feb. 26 and the shooting of Detective Charles H. McCarthy on April 6. He also confessed to twenty-nine house burglaries in Woodhaven and the vicinity, in which he stole fourteen radio sets besides some jewelry, silverware and clothing. He said he specialized in radio sets because he "liked music."

The burglar said he received only a few hundred dollars for all his loot, which he sold to fences near Third Avenue and Fourteenth Street. The usual price he got for a radio set was $6 or $8, although he got $15 for one that was worth $300. He had only $16 when arrested and was getting ready to commit more burglaries.

Sorry He Shot Policemen.

Hilton told the police he was sorry he had shot Kenny and the other policemen.

"I only shot to get away," he said.

He said he was American born, of Irish extraction, and had worked occasionally as a carpenter and truck driver in Brooklyn and Queens. During the war, he said, he enlisted in the navy and was a bugler at the Navy Training Station at Newport, R. I., in 1918. He liked to play the cornet, he added.

The prisoner expressed pride in his athletic accomplishments. Besides being a good baseball player, he said, he was a fast runner, and had escaped the night he killed Kenny because he could outsprint the policeman who chased him.

Hilton said that after stealing a radio set in Woodhaven or its vicinity he would carry it under his arm through the street and take the subway to Manhattan. No one ever expressed surprise at his traveling with such a strange package in the early morning hours, he said.

"The man I sold the stuff to was a worse burglar than I am," he said. "He hardly gave me anything."

He said he did not read the newspaper accounts of his crimes because he only read the "sporting pages and the comics."

Puts Up Desperate Fight.

Hilton put up a desperate fight to resist arrest and tried to shoot the detectives, who had to subdue him with blackjacks. He told them afterward that he would have killed them if he could.

Although he apparently is not insane, as the police thought before they found him, he is obviously a mental defective. He has a peculiarly flat face with an unusually broad nose, and a sullen, defiant look in his eyes. Well

PLAN TREASURY AID TO RELIEVE FARMERS

Government Shifts Position and Would Help in Marketing of Surplus Crops.

SPURRED BY SENATE BILL

Commitee Reports Measure Involving "Equalization Fee" and Federal Purchase Scheme.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, April 13.—The Administration today made a marked concession to the Western demand for farm relief legislation by proposing that the Government should advance money from the Treasury to enable farm cooperative organizations to finance the marketing of surplus farm products in time of emergency. This is a distinct advance from the position taken heretofore by President Coolidge and Secretary Jardine.

Announcement of the new program followed action by the Senate Committee on Agriculture today in reporting a farm relief bill much more radical than the Administration's bill for creating a division of cooperative marketing in the Department of Agriculture to assist farm organizations through advice and information in marketing surplus crops. The Senate committee's measure is sponsored by the "Corn Belt Committee," appointed by a convention of dissatisfied farmers at Des Moines.

Change Revealed in Letter.

Heretofore the Administration has set its face against direct appropriations of public funds to enable farmers to finance surplus crops. Its concession was made known through a letter written within the past forty-eight hours by Secretary Jardine to Senator Capper of Kansas.

Secretary Jardine did not suggest the amount it would be necessary for Congress to appropriate to create the revolving fund proposed to finance surplus crops, but discussion of that phase of the subject by members of the Senate and House from farming communities gave the impression that about $100,000,000 would be required.

The more radical bill reported by the Senate today proposed a revolving fund of $250,000,000 to be appropriated out of the Treasury. In addition, this bill would establish what is known as the "equalization fee" system to supplement Government aid to farmers.

The Farm Board to be established in the Department of Agriculture would declare that an emergency existed in the wheat-growing industry. This would mean that the wheat growers had a crop so big that the price would go down. The Farm Board would then declare an equalization fee of, say, 5 cents a bushel, and would at the same time buy a large number of bushels of wheat at a price fixed higher than the supply-and-demand market price.

With the money obtained through the fees paid by the wheat producers, the surplus crop would be marketed abroad and the reduced American crop would advance, to the increment of the wheat farmer. The farmer would be benefited so much that he would get a good profit in addition to the 5 cents per bushel he was obliged to pay as a fee. At least, that is the theory of it.

The Administration cannot stomach the equalization fee system; it doubts its constitutionality. The wordings of the system would require the Federal Government to collect what amounts to a tax in a manner not authorized by the tax-fixing powers conferred by the Constitution.

Action at Present Session Likely.

Today's activities of the Administration and the advanced farm contingent in Congress promise consideration of farm relief legislation at the present Congressional session, with practical certainty of a final vote. The test will come on the irreconcilable difference between the farm bloc's equalization fee proposal and the Administration's opposition to it.

Secretary Jardine's farm relief pro-

LONDON, April 13.—The Norge left the Pulham airdrome tonight at 11:40 o'clock for Oslo.

Like an apparition, the airship of the Amundsen-Ellsworth polar expedition glided out of the hangar. She swung round to face the wind, and after a few preliminaries rose, while a crowd of 500 cheered. In a minute she had risen 300 feet and in a few minutes had disappeared in the darkness.

The Norge was brought from the hangar at 11:05 P. M. About two hundred men of the district assisted in the operation. The airship was in position at 11:20 and released at 11:40. Searchlights played on her for a time, and when last seen from Pulham she was traveling in the direction of Scole with practically a following wind.

The Norge carries sufficient provisions to last for five days, but it is expected that if conditions hold good she will reach Oslo in fifteen hours.

Wireless messages later tonight reported the Norge well over the North Sea and on the way to Oslo. The Air Ministry in London reported that the Norge was going strong and that all was well aboard, but was unable to give the exact position.

The parting moments were rather solemn. The members of the expedition, during their short stay at Pulham, had made many friends, who clustered about the ship saying farewell. The crowd was touched by a display of affection between two Italians, who kissed each other just as the great ship started from the hangar. The two, who were old friends, had come to Pulham together on the Norge and one of them stayed behind.

Another incident that touched the observers was the placing of Colonel Nobile's fox terrier on board.

Nobile Thanks British for Help.

Just before climbing into the ship Colonel Nobile gave out a statement he said he would send by wireless from the air to the British Air Ministry:

"Our undertaking to go into unexplored regions is fraught with great dangers, which we hope to overcome successfully for the progress of civilization. We wish to thank the British Air Ministry for the courtesies extended to us."

Previously Colonel Nobile told your correspondent that he expects to reach Oslo tomorrow afternoon. Unless he changes his mind, owing to further meteorological information, he will

JENKS BILLS ARE CARRIED

Assembly Vote, 76 to 72, a Surprise—Speaker Casts Validating Ballot.

WETS ON ANXIOUS SEAT

Now Fear Modification Referendum Will Be Defeated in Lower House.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, April 13.—This was Prohibition Day in the Legislature and the Senate and Assembly, working at cross purposes, brought about what, at the present time at least, amounts to a deadlock between the two houses on State enforcement and the Karle-Phelps Modification bill.

The latter was passed in the Senate by an ample majority, the vote standing 30 tot 21. The State enforcement bills bearing the names of Senator Wales and Assemblyman Jenks, Broome County Republicans, were passed in the Assembly by a bare majority of seventy-six votes, which was gained only by calling on Speaker McGinnies, an unusual procedure. There were seventy-two votes recorded against the State enforcement of the Volstead act.

Fourteen Republican Assemblymen joined the Democrats in the lower house in opposing the two dry measures, while in the Senate eight Republicans voted with the Democratic wets for the Karle-Phelps referendum.

Dry Success a Surprise.

The success won by the drys in the Assembly came as a surprise and is regarded here as a result of strong pressure brought to bear on a number of wavering Republican Assemblymen during their week-end visits to their homes by the Anti-Saloon League and the Woman's Christian Temperance Union. The victory, however, is destined to become a barren one, for there is no likelihood whatever that the Senate, which already has defeated the two enforcement bills, will reverse itself.

The question which tonight is agitating both wets and drys is what is going to happen to the Karle-Phelps referendum in the Assembly. As recently as last week the outlook for its passage there was rosy. Tonight its fate is in the balance, largely because the Rules Committee, to which the Senate bill will automatically go, is overwhelmingly dry. It is admitted, even by the drys, that in the event of a favorable report on the measure from this committee there will be enough votes to insure passage.

The alternative would be a motion to discharge the Rules Committee from further consideration of the bill, but this is a somewhat hazardous undertaking, especially since the Speaker himself is Chairman of the committee.

Wets Are Worried.

It was stated tonight that consideration of the referendum bill would go over until next week. This will give to both sides an opportunity to take an inventory of their strength, and possibly to draw to their hands. The

Buckner's Removal Urged By Women Dry Advocates

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, April 13.—The Woman's National Committee for Law Enforcement, of which Mrs. Henry W. Peabody is the Chairman, and which is now holding its national convention in this city, passed a resolution today urging the removal from office of United States Attorney Emory R. Buckner of the Southern District of New York. The resolution reads:

"If it is true, as the newspapers state, that a United States District Attorney speaking before the Judiciary Committee at the wet hearings, declared that prohibition could not be enforced in his State and advocated the return of wine and beer, he should be removed, on the ground that his ideas will not tend to uphold the Constitution and enforce the law of the land."

Mrs. William Tilton, Legislative Chairman of the Congress of Parents and Teachers, was asked if the resolution referred to Mr. Buckner.

"Yes, it does," she replied.

WASHINGTON, April 13.—A warning to violators of the prohibition laws that his department will do its utmost from this time on to see that "the hand of punishment shall fall as often and as heavily as those now charged with the duty of administering the law can cause it to fall," was given by Attorney General Sargent today in an address to the Women's National Conference for Law Enforcement.

There could be no doubt left by the words of the Attorney General as to where he stood on the liquor issue. He warned the "thousands of best citizens of the country" who were violating the liquor laws, and yet had no compunctions about it, that they were forfeiting their right to be so designated, and backed up the plea made to the women yesterday by General Andrews, head of the Federal agencies, to make the serving of liquor unpopular at social functions.

Mr. Sargent told the women that, while the Government could keep the machinery of prosecution of violators of the law in motion, it was within the power of the women to do almost as much as he could to make the results of such work effective.

"In this country, under our system of government," said Mr. Sargent, "the will of the people expressed by their vote becomes and is the rule of conduct which all citizens are bound to observe and which all citizens or aliens must be compelled to observe. That rule of conduct creates the duty of every inhabitant of the jurisdiction doing the voting."

The Eighteenth Amendment and the Volstead act, Mr. Sargent said, were laws of the land and it had been decreed by their adoption that traffic in intoxicating liquor should cease.

"No Room for Discussion."

"There is no room for discussion as to what the voters of the country have said," he added. "There is no half-way place in the command they have laid upon their servants, chosen and appointed, to administer the law. But, notwithstanding that the law is as it is; notwithstanding the will of the people is that this traffic—and, of course, the drinking of alcohol—shall cease, a considerable number of persons insist they will not obey the law and persist in the traffic to supply drink for themselves and others who are willing to reward them for the chances they take.

"Those who engage in the business, those who furnish the business by buying its wares, and some who do not wish to either sell or buy liquor, undertake to excuse the violators by saying over and over that this law is an infringement of personal liberty. They declare that since the prohibition law went into effect it has never been practically in effect; that it has been a disastrous, tragic failure; that the Federal Government is powerless to enforce it; because, they say, 'the instinct of personal liberty is very strong'; 'man cannot be made over by law,' and 'thousands of the best citizens of the country have been brought into contact with the bootlegger and have no compunction whatever about violating the law.'

"Let us examine these propositions briefly. Though some of those who make these claims and arguments may not, do not, have in mind a purpose

NEW YORK EVILS DEPICTED

INTOXICATION DATA FILED

Moderation League Witness Says Drunkenness Gains, Particularly Among Auto Drivers.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, April 13.—Deplorable moral conditions in the anthracite mining regions of Pennsylvania and among the tenement house dwellers of New York City, attributed directly to the Volstead law, were described today before the subcommittee of the Senate Judiciary Committee investigating the prohibition situation.

The witness who pictured conditions in the coal mining districts was the Rev. Francis Kasacsun, for fifteen years the parish priest at the little mining town of Sugar Notch.

Pleading for a modification of the present prohibition enforcement act, Father Kasacsun, the principal witness of the day, told of drunkenness extending to children not in their teens; of stills in every other home; of young boys and girls on wildly immoral parties, and of shocking domestic infidelities, all of which, he said, came as a result of the dry laws. It would be a blessing, he said, to modify the statutes to allow light wines and beer.

Mrs. Viola M. Anglin, Deputy Chief Probation Officer in the New York City Magistrates' Courts, declared cases of family quarrels had increased greatly; that stills were running at such full blast in tenement houses that "when you open the door you get the whiff of liquor," and that children were exposed to a demoralizing influence.

Data on Drunkenness Submitted.

Stanley Shirk, research director of the Moderation League, testified in detail, with facts and figures, to show that arrests for drunkenness had grown enormously in proportion since prohibition, and that drunken automobile drivers now menaced life and safety on every side. In New York City, he said, arrests of drunken drivers had increased 484 per cent. over pre-prohibition days.

Arrests of young men under 22 years old had increased no less than 575 per cent. over the days before prohibition, Mr. Shirk asserted in his testimony. He criticized Wayne B. Wheeler, general counsel of the Anti-Saloon League, for stating that national arrests had decreased 500,000 since prohibition became effective, and declared that, on the other hand, arrests had grown far greater than before that date.

In twenty selected cities arrests of drunken automobile drivers had increased from 1,332 in 1919 to 6,006 in 1924, a jump of 354 per cent., Mr. Shirk stated. He gave the arrests of these drivers in New York in 1916-19 as an average of 161, but said the number went to 336 in 1920 and to 944 in 1924. Chicago, he said, had about the same results, while the increase in Washington in the comparative period was 1,062 per cent.

Father Kasacsun said that fully 90 per cent. of the liquor used in Sugar Notch was made in stills in private homes, where children congregated and themselves drank freely. The witness said that at one home he found a 3-year-old child, who, begging for liquor said, "Mamma, moonshine," and that the mother admitted giving the child an intoxicant.

Never, in his capacity as a priest, had he seen such a laxity among boys and girls, Father Kasacsun declared, adding that the girls now expected the boys of his district to bring liquor with them, with the result that "anything might happen."

Harreld Only Member Present.

Senator Harreld of Oklahoma was the only member of the subcommittee present today and only one session was held. It is understood there will be two tomorrow and that at the first General Lincoln C. Andrews, the Assistant Secretary of the Treasury, in charge of prohibition enforcement, will take the stand. The wet side still has about five or six hours to its credit, but plans are being made to conclude their testimony some time Thursday when the drys will begin to appear.

Further investigations into prohibition will be made by the House Alcoholic liquor Committee when it starts hearings Tuesday, calling first Treasury officers, who will be asked to discuss the diversion of alcohol. Ques-

Walker Rises Early to Ride Cedar King in Park; Says He Will Be in Saddle in Many Horse Shows

Mayor James J. Walker, who already has made secure his reputation as a faithful attendant at dinners and other evening functions, both official and social, may yet become celebrated as the early-rising Mayor.

Before the sun was many hours high yesterday he had attired himself in a snappy new outfit of riding clothes and at 7 o'clock sharp he cantered confidently out of Durland's Riding Academy astride his handsome gelding, Cedar King, for his first twenty-minute ride over the Central Park bridle paths.

The Mayor's riding companion was I. Altman, who gave to the Mayor the prize winning saddle horse and who is Secretary of the Early Rising Riding Club as well as owner of a stable of saddle horses. The Mayor gave Cedar King a thorough tryout, putting him through his paces in a manner creditable alike to horse and rider. When he returned to Durland's, where the animal is to be kept, Mayor Walker was enthusiastic about his experience and very proud of his new pet.

He was so proud that he has determined to enter Cedar King in many of the Spring horse shows in various cities throughout the East, for competition in the saddle and model horse classes.

Mayor Walker, furthermore, has promised that in the coming horse show of the Brooklyn Riding Club and in the Spring show which follows it in Durland's, as well as in the great National Horse Show, to be held in the new Madison Square Garden next November, he will appear personally in the saddle to show the horse in the ring before the judges.

The Brooklyn show will be held from April 20 to 24, inclusive, and the Durland show, which is the thirty-first annual New York Spring Horse Show, from April 27 to 29, inclusive. For both of these the entry blanks for Cedar King have been made out already and filed.

Mr. Altman is greatly pleased over the Mayor's enthusiastic renewal of his interest in saddle riding. He believes that if a brief early morning canter through the park becomes a habit it will be highly beneficial to the Mayor's health and will tend to put him in prime condition for his day's work in the City Hall. The donor of Cedar King is an enthusiastic horseman and it was largely through his activity that the Hylan Administration was persuaded last year to appropriate $100,000 for the reconstruction of the bridle path in Central Park.

After assisting in launching the major league baseball season yesterday afternoon, Mayor Walker went to Albany to attend a dinner to State Senator Bernard L. Downing, who succeeded Mayor Walker in the post of Democratic leader in the Senate. The dinner was in celebration of Senator Downing's tenth anniversary of his

An appeal was made to Supreme Court Justice Lydon yesterday to end the modern case of "Jarndyce vs. Jarndyce," under which name the litigation between Lorens Reich and the estate of William F. Cochran was described by Samuel Untermyer, counsel for the Cochran estate, because the suit has been in every court of New York State and also has reached the United States Supreme Court since it was started thirty-four years ago. The suit involves possession of the former Cambridge Hotel property at Thirty-third Street and Fifth Avenue.

The long litigation came to light yesterday when former Judge Alton B. Parker, an attorney for Reich, asked Justice Lydon for permission to revive the action against the executors under Mr. Cochran's will, so that Reich might renew the proceedings brought in the Municipal Court to retain possession of the Cambridge Hotel property as tenant. Reich wants to apply in the Municipal Court to set aside the judgment ousting him, although title to the property has passed a number of times since the original dispossess order against Reich was upheld in the higher court.

Mr. Untermyer declared that the Supreme Court had no power to revive an action which had not been brought in that court, and that the present application might as well have been made in the Supreme Court or before a Justice of the Peace so far as jurisdiction of the court to make the requested order exists. "Not only is this application without merit, but I venture to say that this is the most aggravated, persistent and unconscionable abuse of judicial process in the records of the courts of our State," said Mr. Untermyer.

The attorney, outlining the history of the litigation, said since it was originally decided against Reich, it had resulted in twenty-two actions and appeals and had gone through every court to the Court of Appeals and finally Reich had sought to have it heard by the Supreme Court of the United States, but the latter court had refused to consider it. Mr. Cochran, who originally got the dispossess order against Reich, died more than twenty-five years ago.

Mr. Untermyer read from a decision from the Court of Appeals made fourteen years ago, quoting from the opinion of Justice Werner.

"After more than twenty years of almost continuous legal warfare . . . the parties to this suit have apparently reached the end of their litigious journey."

One of the trials of Reich's allegations against the owner of the Cambrige Hotel property occupied seven weeks before the late Justice Bischoff and a record of 3,000 pages was taken. In deciding against Reich the court criticized his procedure [illegible]

STATE CRIME BOARD VOTED BY SENATE

Davison Bill Provides a Commission of 11 Men and $50,000 for an Inquiry.

GOVERNOR WILL SIGN IT

Assembly Passes Two Baumes Measures and Defeats Bill to License Chiropractors.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, April 13.—A sweeping investigation of the cause and prevention of crime was assured today when the Senate passed the bill by Assemblyman Davison, Nassau, Republican, providing for the creation of a special Crime Commission. The measure goes to Governor Smith, who will approve it, since he recommended it in a special message.

Under the Davison bill there would be a commission of eleven members: two Senators, two Assemblymen, Senator Knight, Speaker McGinnies and five men to be appointed by the Governor. An appropriation of $50,000 is provided for expenses.

There has been some talk at the Capitol that Assemblyman Davison, Chairman of the National Crime Commission, which was organized last Summer, might become head of the State Crime Commission. It was said that as Chairman of the two bodies he could accomplish more.

Two Crime Bills Passed.

Two bills recommended by the Baumes Crime Commission were passed in the Assembly today. One, which would give the Court the right to determine whether persons jointly indicted should be tried separately or together, was assailed by several Democrats. It was passed by a vote of 77 to 61.

Assemblyman Gavagan, New York Democrat, said the enactment of the measure might lead to the conviction of innocent persons.

During the debate on this measure it was charged by Assemblyman Gavagan and Assemblyman Galgano, New York Democrat, that the Baumes commission was attempting to pass some bills which were opposed by the State District Attorneys' Association.

Assemblyman Esmond, Republican, of Saratoga, Vice Chairman of the Baumes commission, denied the charge made by Mr. Galgano.

Because of amendments to his so-called "hasty marriage" bill, which would have required five days to elapse between the date of granting a license and the date of the wedding, Senator Higgins, New York Democrat, asked to have the measure sent back to the Rules Committee.

Defeat Chiropractor Bill.

The Assembly defeated the Esmond bill, which would have provided for State regulation and licensing of chiropractors. The vote was 55 to 76.

"If a person desires to be treated by a chiropractor, there is no good reason why the State should deny him that right by refusing to license these men," declared Mr. Esmond.

Assemblyman Berg, Bronx, Democrat, in opposing the bill charged that under its provisions chiropractors would be permitted to treat contagious disease. He said that while the measure provided that chiropractors must report to the health authorities all contagious diseases with which they might come in contact, there was nothing in the measure to prevent them from treating such cases. This was denied by Mr. Esmond.

"The only thing that can be said about this bill is that it is good for nothing and should be defeated once and for all," declared Assemblyman Bloch in opposing the measure. "The health of the people is too important to be treated by persons who know nothing about medicine."

A measure by Assemblyman Miller, Republican, which was strongly opposed by the State Federation of Labor on the ground that it would reduce the compensation for the loss of an eye was defeated in the Assembly by a vote of 72 to 74.

Governor Smith today vetoed a bill by Assemblyman Boyle, Suffolk Republican, which would have created a special park commission in Suffolk County.

Sees State Plan Embarrassed.

"If county park commissions are needed, provision can be made by a simple amendment to the county law authorizing the appointment of such commissioners by the County Supervisors to expend local funds for local purposes," the Governor wrote in his veto memorandum. "In this particular case," the Governor concluded, "it seems clear from the acknowledged origin of this bill that its purpose was to embarrass the State park program. I shall not be a party to any such procedure."

Governor Smith approved today the O'Brien-Shonk bill, which is designed to remove the office of Adjutant General from politics. Under the measure the Adjutant General can only be removed after charges have been conferred in conformity to the military law. At present the Adjutant General serves at the pleasure of the Governor and can be removed at any time by the Executive.

HUGHES COMMISSION FINDS JOKER IN BILL

Demands That Knight Eliminate Added Provision for Conservation Job.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, April 13.—The Hughes Commission, which prepared the plan for the reorganization of the State Administrative Departments, today sent a representative to call on Senator Knight and make peremptory demand that the bill dealing with the organization of the proposed Department of Conservation be amended.

In some occult manner provision had been made in the bill for an executive officer to be appointed by the Commissioner of Conservation and to be in charge of the office of the Division of Parks.

The Hughes Commission never recommended this and when the measure prepared by the bill drafting commission was sent to New York for the scrutiny of the Executive Committee of the Hughes Commission with this provision in it, it was sent back to the capitol with a request that it be eliminated.

Since then, however, it has been discovered that the request has not been complied with.

Those who are opposing the provision believe that something besides the desire to create a job for somebody is responsible for the provision finding its way into the bill. By whom it was inserted is not generally known. Members of the Hughes Commission object to it less on the patronage ground than in the belief that the proposed executive might find ways to hamper the work of the State Council of Parks, which body of late has not been viewed with friendly eyes by some of the Republican leaders.

CALL HUMMEL SUIT OVER WILL A 'SHAM'

Attorneys for Late Lawyer's Executor Charged Bad Faith in Portland Man's Contest.

In a procedure, said to be the first of its kind in the history of the Surrogates' Court, the attorneys for the executor of the will of Abraham H. Hummel, noted criminal lawyer, have applied for permission to examine before a referee the attorneys for Henry Hummel, the South Portland (Me.) bakery wagon driver who is contesting the will as Hummel's son, in an effort to prove that their objections to the will are "sham and frivolous," and are not made in good faith or based on real grounds.

This was learned yesterday when the application came before Surrogate Foley for a hearing. The motion was made by Davis, Polk, Wardwell, Gardiner & Reed, 15 Broad Street, attorneys for the Guaranty Trust Company, the executor. Arguments on the application were postponed until April 27.

Counsel for the proponents also have applied to strike out the objections.

In their objections to the probate of the will, counsel for the contestants charged that the document was not the last will of Mr. Hummel, that the testator at the time the will was made was not "of sound mind, memory and understanding, nor mentally capable of making a will," and that the will was procured "by fraud and undue influence practiced upon the decedent by one or more of the following persons, to wit: Bertha Hummel, Sophie Hummel Kaffenburgh and Abraham Kaffenburgh," sisters and nephew of Mr. Hummel.

MUSSOLINI STUDIES AFRICAN PROBLEMS

Receives Tribute of Tribesmen, Then Turns to Dominion's Economic Development.

By Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

TRIPOLI, April 13.—After having spent the day reviving memories of old Rome and receiving tributes from the desert tribesmen, Premier Mussolini today turned to the rock-bottom problem of the present and future economic development of the African dominion.

Leaving the historic coast, the Premier's automobile caravan headed straight inland 100 kilometers and saw the progress accomplished by the Italian colonists in the last two years, during which the frontier cultivated area was pushed thirty miles to the south.

The first halt was to lay the cornerstone of a building of the concessionaire concern which recently obtained 10,000 hectares, which will export olives and grain. Mussolini helped the mason to mix the mortar, smilingly remarking that it was his old trade.

The party then raced through the vast territory of new lands which Italy hopes to reclaim from its present aridity and transform to farms in the next ten years. To any one acquainted with the great reclamation projects of America, this Far East region suggests far-reaching possibilities, both for Italy and Europe, in view of the fact that Tripoli contains four times as much arable land as Italy. Parallel to the large areas of Arizona and California, which need only a touch of water to make veritable gardens, the soil is fertile and artesian waters are actually already on the spot here, a reasonable depth under the surface.

Today the expedition was more drab from the theatrical viewpoint than yesterday's triumphal tour, although it contained bits of color where it touched a few Arab settlements, resembling a matter of fact American engineering inspection trip.

Mussolini personally is in excellent spirits, and his nose is almost healed. He seemed eager to get to the bottom of things in his tour.

There was no galloping Arab escort, and sentinels were silhouetted against the sky, showing how carefully the Government is guarding the Premier's life. Guards were stationed at intervals of a mile or two throughout the hundred-kilometer route read, which was closed to traffic.

One car, on being left behind, was challenged three times, sentries refusing to let it pass until credentials were shown. The fifteen-car caravan contained many plain clothes men.

The trip wasn't lacking in the picturesque, however. Once stopped to visit an Arab fort now called Fort Bendito. At Axizia, a town built by Count Colpi two years ago the Premier saluted hundreds of Arabs whose many colored robes stood out in sharp relief against the white, modern cement buildings.

At Garia where there is an Italian military outpost on the mountain dancing girls danced there "hootchy kootchy." Premier Mussolini looking on interestedly but without a blink.

Then the chiefs invited him to go below and visit their homes. All the Arabs here live underground, the houses running two and three stories below the surface, containing many whitewashed corridors and chambers reminiscent of old San Francisco's Chinatown. The gathering in the town was a real Arabian Nights spectacle, with white, red and blue robes and immense crimson tents.

The Premier turned back to Garia leaving the desert shimmering behind. He raced on to Tripoli where more crowds and tomtoms awaited him.

TO CONFER ON BATTLEFIELDS

Supporters of Preservation Measure Enlist Governor's Aid.

ALBANY, April 13 (AP).—Stirred by charges of "misrepresentation and double crossing" on the Burgoyne Campaign Battlefields Bill which seeks the acquisition, rehabilitation and marking of the battlefields of Saratoga, Oriskany, and Bennington, proponents of the measure at the suggestion of Governor Smith today arranged a conference with Legislative leaders for tomorrow morning in the executive chamber.

The measure which provides an appropriation of $150,000 was reported today by the Assembly Rules Committee after a determined eleventh hour stand by Representatives of Historical and Civic Organizations who learned that substitute measures were to be introduced by Senator Hewitt, Chairman of the Senate Finance Committee, which proponents of the Assembly Bill declared would make impossible an adequate sesqui-centennial celebration next year.

Supporters of the battlefield measure carried their case to the Governor when they were told that their bill was being killed because the Governor would not sign it. Later it was decalred that the content of the measure had been misrepresented to the Governor.

De Valera to Form New Party.

DUBLIN, April 13 (AP).—Eamon de Valera, who recently split with other republican leaders, has decided to form a new political organization. The main plank of his policy will be to urge abolition of the oath of allegiance to the Crown in both the Free State and Northern Parliaments, so that republicans can enter both assemblies.

WOMEN LEADERS BACK WADSWORTH

Republicans From 35 Counties of State Endorse Senator for Third Term.

MRS. SABIN LAUDS CAREER

Declares He Should Be Re-elected for His Achievements, Ability and Courage.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, April 13.—James W. Wadsworth Jr. was endorsed for a third term in the United States Senate today by the Republican women leaders of thirty-five counties in the State, including those in New York City.

The action followed an after-luncheon speech by Mrs. Charles H. Sabin, Republican National Committeewoman from New York State. After surveying Senator Wadsworth's activities in Washington, she asserted that on account of his ability, his achievements and his high courage he was entitled to the support of every Republican woman in the State.

Senator Wadsworth has aroused opposition among the extreme drys through his opposition to the prohibition amendment and the Volstead law, and among many of the erstwhile militant suffragists by his opposition to the woman suffrage amendment.

Mrs. Sabin, however, pointed out that since this was ratified Senator Wadsworth has always urged the fullest participation by women in politics and public affairs, and she maintained that his opposition on conscientious grounds to the suffrage amendment should not be held against him by Republican women.

"In the twelve years that Senator Wadsworth has sat at Washington his value to the Empire State has increased in direct ratio to the duration of his service," Mrs. Sabin said. "As a statesman he has expanded. He has been sanely conservative in all things. He has been bold where boldness and bravery were required and he has used native judgment and developed more as the increasing importance of his place among the members of the upper house has demanded more.

"He has not gone out seeking reputation as an orator and yet the speeches he has made in the Senate have possessed value and straightforwardness, and have served to set before the Senate and the nation the digested views and opinions of a thoughtful man and a true American. He has the admiration and respect of all of his colleagues in the Senate.

"There are in the United States Senate today four or five outstanding Senators who are known from one end of the country to the other, and I think I can safely say that our Senator from New York is probably the best known. This is a great asset to New York State and adds materially to the prestige of our beloved State throughout these United States.

"Recently the Speaker of the House of Representatives, in speaking before the members and guests of the Woman's National Republican Club, said that it would be nothing short of a calamity not to return Senator Wadsworth to the Senate—day in and day out he is by far the ablest man in the Senate today.'

"President Coolidge, when speaking before the National Republican Club, said, 'I rejoice with you in the possession of such a Senator as James W. Wadsworth Jr. He represents you with a capacity that is unexcelled in the Senate of the United States.'

"I believe that if a referendum were taken among women as to what one quality they admired most in a man that an overwhelming majority would answer, 'courage.' There are several kinds of courage, the kind one meets on the battlefields, at sea and in the various hazards of life, and then there is moral courage—which is sometimes called having the courage of one's convictions. The latter, I regret to say, is sometimes rare in men holding elective office."

The women leaders took no action on prohibition or enforcement. They adopted a resolution introduced by Mrs. Beatrice V. Stevenson of Brooklyn calling upon the Republican leaders in the Legislature to use their best efforts to bring about the passage of the Straus-Ricca bill, providing salary increases for teachers in New York City.

NOBLETT IS INDICTED AS SECOND OFFENDER

Ex-Convict and Alleged Swindler Denies Fraud in Advertising —Trial to Begin Soon.

A superseding grand larceny indictment, charging Edwin Arden Noblett, "master swindler," with being a second offender, was handed up to Judge Francis X. Mancuso in General Sessions yesterday. Soon after Noblett, who has used scores of fictitious names, entered a plea of not guilty, and was remanded to the Tombs for trial in default of $30,000 bail fixed by the Court last Saturday.

His first arraignment was on an indictment returned last Friday on the complaint of Stephen Bourne of 136 East Sixty-seventh Street that Noblett, who has served two terms in Sing Sing and has a police record of arrests running back to 1893, had defrauded him out of $550 through subletting to him Noblett's furnished apartment in the Dorcester, at 131 Riverside Drive. The case against Noblett was clinched on April 7 last when William W. Miller and Mrs. Margaret Nash, employes of THE NEW YORK TIMES, who had been investigating Noblett's criminal activities in conjunction with The World, obtained from the ex-convict a receipt for $10 as advance payment for the rental of the apartment for a period including more than two months of the time that Noblett had sublet the same apartment to Mr. Bourne. Mr. Bourne had been unable to obtain possession of the apartment at the appointed date or the return of his money. Mr. Miller and Mrs. Nash called on Noblett in answer to an advertisement which he had placed in THE TIMES by using a fictitious name and changing the telephone number of his apartment.

Assistant District Attorney Richard C. Murphy, whose resignation as a prosecutor goes into effect next Saturday, when he will become counsel for the Jewelers' National Crime Committee, presented the evidence on which the first and superseding indictments were returned against Noblett. He said yesterday that, although Noblett had been sentenced to an eight-year term for a similar fraud in 1899, when he pleaded guilty, and again to grand larceny in October, 1922, the five-year term was imposed as a first offender. The superseding indictment returned yesterday was based on this sentence. Assistant District Attorney O'Sullivan was assigned yesterday by District Attorney Banton to prosecute the ex-convict at his trial on Mr. Bourne's complaint, which is expected to begin within the next two weeks.

Peggy Joyce to Wed Stanford E. Comstock; Latest Fiance Is a Miami Real Estate Pioneer

Special to The New York Times.

MIAMI, Fla., April 13.—Peggy Hopkins Joyce announced here today that she is engaged to marry Stanford E. Comstock, a member of a well-known Chicago family and a wealthy Miami real estate dealer. "Yes, I am engaged to marry Mr. Comstock," she said, displaying a large diamond engagement ring. Comstock was standing beside her as the widely-known stage and screen star made the announcement.

"This is my fiancé, Stan Comstock. But I can't see how my engagement is of interest to the public. We have tried to keep it a secret, and have done so until today." She turned to Comstock, who blushed and nodded in the affirmative.

She said she and her fiancé had not set the date for the wedding, but intimated that it would take place before she sailed for Europe on May 1. She also intimated that her fifth marriage would be her last one, that it would endure forever.

When she admitted the engagement she was at the Miami Beach home of L. Jerry Floum, and he and her sister, Mrs. Frank Harrison, and Mr. Harrison were present at the time of the announcement.

It will be remembered that Peggy and James Stanley Joyce got their marriage license in Miami. She lived here with Joyce, who gave her a mansion here which was returned to him when they were divorced. She said Comstock intended to buy Floum's Spanish home and that they would live here during the Winter seasons.

She and Comstock will sail on Thursday on the H. F. Alexander for New York and will arrive there Saturday.

Comstock is a veteran in the Florida real estate business, coming to this State in the early days of the land boom.

Miss Joyce was Marguerite Upton, daughter of a barber in Virginia. She was married at 16 to Everett A. Archer after an elopement. This marriage was annulled in six months. She next married Sherburne P. Hopkins Jr., a lawyer representing oil and mine interests. She was divorced from him to become the bride of Joyce. Later she married Count Gosta Morna de Moreland and was divorced from him Nov. 23, 1925.

Special to The New York Times.

RICHMOND, Va., April 13.—Peggy Hopkins Joyce has just settled enough money on her father, Sam Upton, town barber of Farmville, Va., to enable him to shut up shop and take it easy the remainder of his days.

According to word from Farmville, Peggy has given her dad enough to enjoy an income of $200 a month. The story goes further and says that his younger daughter, Lucille, who married a wealthy Brooklyn man, had contributed enough to run the income up to $350. Peggy had already lifted the mortgage from the home.

SCHOOL OFFICIALS BACK FINANCE BILLS

Call for Prompt Legislative Action on Proposals of the Friedsam Commission.

DECLARE A CRISIS EXISTS

Committee Presents to Governor Resolutions Asserting Need of Immediate Relief.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, April 13.—A special committee of superintendents of schools and spokesmen for teachers' associations, appointed by Dr. Frank P. Graves, State Commissioner of Education, called on Governor Smith today and presented to him resolutions fully endorsing his demand for immediate action by the Legislature to carry out recommendations in the report of the Governor's Commission on School Finances and Administration, headed by Colonel Michael Friedsam.

Republican leaders of the Legislature have shown every inclination to defer action on the report until the session next year. The committee declared in its resolutions that a crisis which all officials actively identified with the administration of the public schools clearly recognized made immediate action essential.

"This legislation is not in itself revolutionary, but, on the contrary, is merely an extension of the principle set up unanimously by the Legislature in Section 491b of the Education law last year, and promises financial relief to the cities, villages and union free school districts commensurate with that given rural districts last year," one of the preambles said.

"The clearly recognized crisis existing in financing of public education," another preamble said, "has grown more serious year by year for the last half dozen years, and a specific remedy has now been recommended by a highly competent non-partisan commission, appointed by the Governor as a result of a conference of 150 citizens. The deliberations of and report of this commission, as experience has shown, will have been wholly in vain if action does not spring from them at once."

The resolution not only calls for immediate action, but places the superintendents and representatives of the teachers on record as favoring all the major recommendations of the Friedsam commission.

"They should be crystallized into law at once and assurance given to the entire educational force of the State that relief from an intolerable situation in the financing of public education is in immediate prospect," it was declared.

The report of the commission urged additional apportionments from the State on a per teacher basis to school districts complying with the educational standards of the State, which would involve the immediate expenditure of $18,000,000, and a total of $35,000,000 in addition to the present $54,000,000 contribution of the State to the common schools, through progressive increases which would run until the beginning of the fiscal year 1930-31.

The committee which called upon the Governor included Arvid Eldred, Superintendent of Schools of Troy, as Chairman, and the following Superintendents of Schools: G. Edward Jones of Albany, Herbert S. West of Rochester and Ernest C. Hartwel of Buffalo; John T. Nicholson, District Superintendent, New York City; George H. Covey, President State Teachers' Association, and Harlan H. Horner, Field Secretary of that organization.

LISTS RELIEF EXPENDITURES

Cardinal Hayes Details Work of Charities Fund in 1925.

Cardinal Hayes announced yesterday the detailed report of appropriations by Catholic Charities to the 200 relief agencies in the archdiocese. Judges' Retirement Bill Killed.

BABE RUTH AFOUL OF BAY STATE LAWS

GETS RESPITE ON THE TAX

Then Placates Patrolman Regarding Parked Car and Hurries Off to Baseball Game.

BOSTON, April 13 (AP).—Babe Ruth, home-run slugger of the New York American League baseball club, was caught in the meshes of the law today. State authorities made known that they hold warrants for his arrest for non-payment of the 1923 and 1924 Massachusetts income taxes, and while Ruth hurried hither and thither trying to explain that he really did not live in Massachusetts a traffic officer tagged the Babe's automobile.

George Herman Ruth of Sudbury, Mass., the authorities discovered, had paid no income taxes in 1923 and 1924. They did not say how much taxes Ruth was assessed, for the law enjoins secrecy, but the ball player was notified that he must explain his failure to pay. Having arrived in Boston with the Yankees, Ruth made haste to comply. He went to the State House and conferred with Henry F. Long, Commissioner of Corporations and Taxation.

Ruth was said to have filled out a blank at the collection offices containing information about his financial affairs for 1923 and 1924. It took a long time and at the end it was said that service of the warrants was suspended for a week to give him time to file a statement in support of his contention that he was not a Massachusetts resident.

Meanwhile Officer Ollie Brennan found that the automobile Ruth had borrowed was raising havoc with traffic in Court Square. Nobody would move it because it was locked. Brennan said it stood there two hours and he put a tag on it. He demanded that Ruth explain. Ruth was "sore," he said. In fact he was "very sore," but when he was asked why he left the car there and what he meant by parking for two hours, and blocking traffic, and who was he anyway, Ruth explained who he was. He said he hadn't expected to leave the car there five minutes. Brennan told him never to do it again and took back the tag.

Ruth was still "sore." He refused to pose for photographers. He declined to be interviewed, insisted that his visit to the State House had nothing to do with taxes and that it was purely a personal visit. Then he hurried off to the ball park to begin earning his 1926 income.

SPANISH PLANE, LEADER IS REPORTED FOUND

Estevez Not Mentioned, However, in Midnight Dispatch From Bagdad.

LONDON, April 13 (AP).—Captain Rafael Martinez-Estevez, missing leader of the Spanish aviators flying from Madrid to Manila, P. I., has been found 208 miles to the east of Amman, an Exchange Telegraph dispatch from Bagdad reports.

A Reuter dispatch filed about midnight at Bagdad makes no mention of Captain Estevez being found, but says that the search which was continued throughout the day will be resumed tomorrow.

BAGDAD, April 13.—Another of three Spanish pilots who are engaged in the flight from Madrid to Manila is down.

This machine was forced to land today near Samawah, on the Euphrates River, about 150 miles south of Bagdad.

The last machine has passed Basra on its way to Bushire.

The pilots apparently regard their flight as individual rather than a team event. One of the two pilots who arrived here yesterday said the three machines flew together from Cairo toward Amman, where they did not alight.

Shortly afterward, however, the leader diverted his machine slightly from the prearranged course and turned south. His colleagues suggested that possibly his compass went wrong.

As they did not agree on his course, they signed to each other not to follow him and continued toward Bagdad. Subsequently they also separated, the first plane arriving here at 3 o'clock yesterday, having made a record trip from Cairo to Bagdad in seven and a half hours, while the second arrived four hours later.

The two pilots spent Monday visiting the flood areas of Bagdad, apparently not perturbed by the fate of their leader, who they think will turn up somewhere between Bagdad and Basra.

The leader had no rations, but plenty of petrol, whereas one of the machines which arrived at Bagdad carried six days' rations. They left Bagdad this morning, but one of them had to land 150 miles out.

JOURNALISTS END CAPITAL SESSION

PEACE DOVES ARE SET FREE

Daniels in Address Assails the Consolidation of Newspaper Properties.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, April 13.—With the official congratulations of Vice President Charles G. Dawes, the first Pan-American Congress of Journalists ended its business sessions this afternoon. Twenty-one doves, symbolic of the twenty-one American republics, were released from in front of the Pan-American Union hall and fluttered away, bearing messages of peace as the final speeches were delivered.

For its concluding business the Congress adopted resolutions looking to the establishment of a definite policy of friendship, cooperation and freedom for the press of the American continents. Seeking to create ethical standards as well, the Congress recommended suppression of intimate details of crime or scandal, and elimination of suggestive or deceitful advertisements.

"We hold that every editor," the Congress declared, "has it in his power to do his share toward instilling international distrust and we declare it to be the sentiment of this Congress that its members should discharge their duty as a matter of professional service, as patriotism and as a contribution to the welfare of all mankind."

The organization of a Pan-American Association of Journalists, together with a press association, was voted, and a mandate was given for negotiations with cable companies and the investigation of the practicability of the interchange of news between members of the organization on the two continents.

Endorsement was also given to a suggestion first made by Jorge Mitre, proprietor of La Nacion of Buenos Aires, that an art salon for promotion of Pan-American art be established in New York City.

Vice President Dawes spoke extemporaneously in his farewell address to the delegates, explaining that he had no doubt they would be relieved by the absence of manuscript after the round of speeches to which they had been treated in Washington.

Dawes Stresses Value of Contacts.

"I consider it my duty to see if I can impress upon your minds," he said, "how much we have appreciated your visit and how sorry we are to see you go.

"I had one of the most beautiful tributes paid to you by an American who came all the way from the Pacific Coast.

"He told me what he had got from contact with you. For the first time he had come to know what great countries to the south there were, because he had met you, and had seen what men they produced.

"I would not value the ideas about another nation of any man who had not actually met the people of it. Contact and understanding mean everything in international affairs. When I was in Europe I learned the value of contact. You cannot hope to come to any permanent agreement without such knowledge and acquaintanceship, without knowing what the other man would think and do in your place and you would think in his.

"Nations can agree on a common path just in proportion as they have had the experience of contact with one another. With contact, too, comes humility. Humility, sincerity, sympathy—that will bring progress in the world toward higher peaceful things."

Daniels Attacks Consolidations.

An attack on newspaper consolidations and the use of newspapers as purely money-making businesses was made in a paper presented earlier in the day by Josephus Daniels, former Secretary of the Navy and now publisher of the Raleigh (N. C.) News and Observer.

"The day when a man with small capital could establish or buy a newspaper has gone, more's the pity, for it is journalistic debate which keeps the current of opinion active and clear," he said.

"Plant and other expense of running a daily newspaper makes starting a new one so hazardous that we are now in an era of consolidating rather than founding new papers.

"If Mr. Munsey had lived and kept up his gait, we might have come to the day in New York, as in St. Louis and Detroit, where there would be a single morning daily in our metropolis. Mr. Curtis has reduced the number in Philadelphia.

"Most consolidations have come about because the mounting costs of publication have made it an economic necessity. Even then the tendency is to be deplored, and it is a calamity when consolidations have no basis except desire to increase profits and dividends to owners or publishers.

"It is debasing to journalism when consolidations are made to deny open discussion and end the life of a journal whose policy was not agreeable to the powers that be. Such journalism has no ethics. It is not even journalism. It is trade and barter in what should be the palladium of the people's rights, and, when a journal changes hands to douse the light or to strangle utterances not acceptable to any selfish interest, business or political, the transaction destroys by that much the freedom of the press, guaranteed by the Constitution."

Mr. Daniels insisted "if journalism is a trade and publishing a newspaper is a business, they have no more right to constitutional protection than selling fish or dry goods." The newspaper must remain a public institution, he said, and keep free the channel of discussion. The aim of making large dividends, he said, was inconsistent with service to humanity.

"If the trend in that direction," he said, "which cannot be denied, should become general, if newspapers are chiefly business concerns, not only will power go out from us, but the people will look for help and deliverance from other sources, and the sceptre will and should depart from the press."

Use of Schools of Journalism Told.

Three professors of journalism, Dr. James M. Lee of New York University, Roscoe C. E. Brown of Columbia University and Dr. Nelson A. Crawford, President of the American Association of Teachers of Journalism, discussed the benefit of schools of journalism in the establishment of newspaper work as a true profession.

Dr. Crawford predicted that the study of the newspaper would soon be a part of the curriculum of every institution of liberal learning, and spoke of the value that should come from having well-trained men in journalism to teach the public to face facts.

The congress adjourned after speeches by representatives of each delegation, all of whom voiced faith in future American accord. The delegates will start on a trip tomorrow which will take them to Virginia, north to New York, and then to cities of the Middle West.

CHRYSLER IMPERIAL "80"

UNRESTRAINED ENTHUSIASM

THOSE who are familar with the Chrysler Imperial "80" are unrestrained in voicing their enthusiasm. In stating that the Imperial "80" is so far in advance of anything in the fine car field as to be beyond comparison, Chrysler has simply voiced a conviction heartily concurred in by everyone who has experienced its unprecedented performance. While it is gratifying to hear the competent judgment of those who have owned the world's finest cars proclaim its merits so lustily, we are, for our part, content to rest our case in a demonstration of the Imperial "80", knowing full well that, once you are acquainted with its phenomenal qualities, you will unhesitatingly pronounce it "as fine as money can build."

Daily Style Hint For Well-Dressed New Yorkers

NEW YORK, April 14—The query—should sporting jackets be plain or pleated?—reminds one of the venerable question about the zebra. Is it a white quadruped with black stripes or a black quadruped with white stripes? The answers is, "Yes!"

Both the plain back and the pleated back are in vogue. It is an affair of personal preference, not fixed fashion. The 4-garment suit, composed of jacket, waistcoat, trousers and knickers, is a turnout that men still fancy for its astonishing convenience.

Soft-woven cheviot cloths and rich-texture Scottish Shetlands are the thing this spring. Knickers are not so low-swung. Exclusive, but not expensive.

HOLIDAY TO ROUSE ARMY AGAINST VARE

Foes of Pennsylvania Wet Ticket Will Send Workers Out Today.

TO INDUCE REGISTRATION

Mellon Forces Will Canvass Those Unregistered in Philadelphia, Pittsburgh and Scranton.

Special to The New York Times.

PHILADELPHIA, April 13.—While the whole State of Pennsylvania is aroused over the battle between the wets and drys and the Vare and Mellon forces, the opponents of the machine are centring their efforts now to qualifying for the Republican primary battle on May 5 and the army of unregistered, independent voters in Philadelphia, Pittsburgh and Scranton.

This battle is to decide the wet and dry issue, whether Secretary Mellon of the Treasury or Representative Vare is to be the Republican leader of the State and whether Representative Vare, Senator Pepper or Governor Pinchot shall be the candidate for the United States Senate.

In these cities tomorrow will virtually be a holiday. Lawyers, church members, bank clerks and the radical temperance advocates have formed themselves into a volunteer army of workers to induce the stay-at-home voter to register. Reports received here tonight indicate that strenuous preparations have been made to combat the efforts of the machine workers, largely supporting Representative Vare and his wet associates.

Today Last Registration Day.

The Mellon forces are impressed with the fact that unless the independent vote is registered there is no chance of overcoming the machine vote which qualified last Fall. Tomorrow is the last day of registration in these three cities, and it is estimated that more than 175,000 dry and anti-machine voters will be qualified. Dry leaders say that Philadelphia will enroll 100,000 and about 75,000 are expected to be placed on the lists in the other cities. Fully 75 per cent. of this unregistered vote is known to be opposed to Vare and his ticket.

In Philadelphia the large corporations are on the side of the drys for economic reasons. Many of them have declared a holiday for tomorrow so that their workers can enroll. They are insistent, as far as they can be, that their employes shall make a demonstration against the wet movement and the attempt to place Philadelphia machine methods over the State Government.

As the situation becomes more crystallized it is evident that Pennsylvania is going to be the next State where the national wets and drys will contest for supremacy. Word has come to the leaders that national Anti-Saloon League speakers and workers will be transferred at the end of the week from Illinois to Pennsylvania.

At present the drys appear divided, with the radical prohibitionists now behind Governor Pinchot and the conservatives with Senator Pepper. As soon as the national W. C. T. U. and Anti-Saloon League leaders decide which of the two dry candidates for the Senate nomination is the stronger orders will be issued to concentrate on him. If the choice should fall on Senator Pepper his strength will be greatly increased, and many persons think he can then easily defeat Representative Vare.

Vare Desertions Predicted.

Behind Representative Vare stands what is announced as a united organization in Philadelphia, with many of the machine workers in Allegheny County on his side. The prediction is made that many of these practical and professional politicians will desert him. Already, it is reported, some of these workers are seeking financial support from the other side, believing that Secretary Mellon and the big interests behind Senator Pepper and Mr. Fisher will be liberal in their expenditures.

This is a phase of the fight that is interesting. The Mellon forces, it was declared here tonight, intend to expend only what would be approved by the Federal Corrupt Practices act. They have the Newberry case before their eyes and warning has come from Progressive Senators that they are ready to bring about an investigation without delay if it is evident that money is used corruptly and flagrantly in the primary fight.

If a direct referendum were held on the question of prohibition Pennsylvania would go wet. But the voters are asked to show their position on this question and at the same time place Representative Vare in the United States Senate and make him the State Republican leader.

Pepper Leading Pinchot.

If there is a registration of 175,000 in the three cities named tomorrow and the smaller cities and towns qualify in a like ratio on the next registration day, the wet cause will be defeated. That is, there will be a predominant vote against modification. But unless Senator Pepper, who is now leading Governor Pinchot, captures a great proportion of the dry vote and breaks down Representative Vare's strength in Philadelphia he cannot be nominated.

Representative Vare's leaders are counting upon Philadelphia giving him a plurality of 100,000 and Allegheny about 20,000. This, with what he would claim in other wet counties would be sufficient to make him the victor.

Another important meeting of the Mellon leaders will be held here tomorrow when plans to overcome the defection of State Chairman Baker to Representative Vare and gain more harmony in their own ranks will be considered. The Mellon faction is not presenting a united front against the wet machine. Those supporting Mr. Fisher for Governor in some counties are not with Senator Pepper and vice versa.

M'KINLEY BEATEN BY WORLD COURT FOE

Disorder in one west side ward became so pronounced late in the day that hundreds of extra police were dispatched there after nearly a score of reports of violence were received from nearly every polling place in the ward within two hours before the polls closed.

One man was shot and seriously injured by a policeman who tried to stop a factional fight and was set upon by both sides in the controversy.

One of the boldest ballot box thefts occurred in the Twenty-fourth Ward, scene of disturbances throughout the day, when twelve armed men in three automobiles entered a polling place, forced all the occupants into another room and scooped up all the ballots in sight and fled. Later election officials said most of the ballots were blanks. Almost simultaneously seven armed gangsters raided another precinct in the same ward and took all the ballot boxes.

In another outbreak earlier in the day, a policeman was severely beaten while trying to quell a disorder in another polling place. A balmy Spring day aided in bringing out what election officials considered as a heavy vote for an off-year primary, although it was believed that not more than half of Cook County's nearly 1,200,000 registered voters had gone to the polls.

RITCHIE DEFIES DRYS, INVOKES JEFFERSON

CHAMPIONS A FREE PRESS

Seven Governors Send Messages and Speakers Extol Monticello Sage at Banquet in Capital.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, April 13.—Facing a mahogany chair in which Thomas Jefferson sat more than a century and a quarter ago, Governor Ritchie of Maryland demanded tonight, in the name of the author of the Declaration of Independence, by what authority the prohibitionists attempted to deny him the right to fight the Volstead law.

The occasion was the dinner of the Thomas Jefferson League at the Mayflower Hotel, in honor of Jefferson's 183d birthday. Telegrams extolling his memory were read from John W. Davis, Governor Alfred E. Smith of New York and others.

"It is in the field of human conduct and morals that the greatest difficulties lie in maintaining the Jeffersonian ideas of freedom and toleration," Governor Ritchie said in his speech on "Jefferson and the Freedom of the Press."

When Governor Ritchie announced his defiance of those who would curb his opposition to the dry laws, loud applause rang out in the room where 500 diners sat, and at the conclusion of his speech the company rose and cheered him.

Referring especially to the press, Governor Ritchie declared that in spite of recent legislative and judicial acts which set lovers of liberty somewhat aghast, he did not believe that the work of Jefferson would be undone. The idea that liberty of thought could be suppressed from above could never survive before the political democracy of America, he asserted.

Holds Issue Is Reopened.

"You will find no other agency touching the press in importance or in results. It is the chief source of public opinion, the chief bulwark and protection of our liberties. It must be kept free," declared the Governor.

Thanks to prohibition, the war's aftermath and new conceptions of law, the old issue of human freedom is being fought over again, said Governor Ritchie, but he was confident that in the battle between truth and falsehood truth would prevail.

The message sent by Mr. Davis read: "The teachings of Thomas Jefferson remain the axioms upon which all free government must rest, and nothing is more important than to have them constantly called to the minds of the American people. So long as we follow their guidance the Republic is secure. I commend the effort the Thomas Jefferson League is making to see that they are proclaimed throughout the land."

In his telegram Governor Smith declared the dinner had for its purpose "the reaffirmation of the principles of one of whose accomplishments and sincerity in the preservation of our united country too much could not be said."

Governors Byrd of Virginia, McLean of North Carolina, Moore of New Jersey, McLeod of South Carolina, Winant of New Hampshire and Walker of Georgia sent laudatory messages, as did Mayor Kendrick of Philadelphia.

Responding to toasts from Henry E. Davis, who sat in the Jefferson chair, Senator Bayard of Delaware spoke on "The Bill of Rights," former Senator Stanley of Kentucky on "The Rogers-Clark Expedition Authorized by Jefferson," Senator King of Utah on "Jefferson's Vision From Sea to Sea," Representative Oldfield, Chairman of the Democratic Congressional Campaign Committee, on "The Louisiana Purchase," Representative Connally of Texas on "Jefferson's Visit to Texas," and Mrs. Livingston Rowe Schuyler of New York on the "Home Life of Jefferson."

Governor Ritchie's Speech.

Governor Ritchie spoke, in part, as follows:

"Jefferson put the freedom of the press first among the essentials of political liberty. No man in our history ever had more newspaper calumnies heaped upon him, but still he said, 'Were it left to me to decide whether we should have a Government without newspapers or newspapers without a Government, I should not hesitate a moment to prefer the latter.'

"He had to marshal and lead his hosts against the alien and sedition laws, which, under the guise of suppressing revolutionary propaganda, were intended to muzzle the press, to silence criticism of the ruling powers and to crush the Irish who sought asylum here.

"It is not too much to say that in all the essentials which go to make a free people, this contest was the most crucial in our history.

"When the smoke of battle cleared away, the Federalist party lay wrecked and prostrate, but Thomas Jefferson had saved the Republic.

"It is in the field of human conduct and morals that the greatest difficulties lie in maintaining the Jeffersonian ideas of freedom and toleration. Witness the fateful issue of prohibition. Those who advocate this as a great moral issue are prone to denounce those who differ from them as lacking regard for law and order and for the binding sanctity of the Constitution of the land—are prone even to pin the badge of treason upon them. They argue that all good men should be of one mind—and that mind theirs.

"Even were I a minority of one, still, in the name of temperance and of the individual freedom which is guaranteed the citizenship of this land, I would oppose that law.

"And to those who question my right to do this, while still revering the Constitution of my country, I summon the memory of Thomas Jefferson when he demanded the first article of our Bill of Rights as a shield against intolerance and a sword for the conquest of liberty, and I ask by what right would you abridge my freedom of speech against a law I oppose and my right to petition my Government for a redress of the grievances I believe are caused by it?

"I close with the stately words of Milton, whose plea lay unanswered for over a century until Jefferson vitalized it with the breath of political life:

"'Though all the winds of doctrine were let loose to play upon the earth, so Truth be in the field, we do ingloriously, by licensing and prohibiting, to misdoubt her strength. Let her and Falsehood grapple; who ever knew Truth put to the worse in a free and open encounter.'" martial law. Troops are guarding the John Smith garage, where today's shooting started; the Masonic Temple, where several were killed; the Methodist parsonage, where the Rev. P. Glotfelty lives, and the Christian Church parsonage, where the Rev. J. E. Story lives.

SIX KILLED AT POLLS IN HERRIN KLAN RIOT

Clash at Polls Starts Rioting.

Election day had opened quietly. Major Robert Davis of the Illinois Guard, who has been detailed for more than a year to keep his eye on the Herrin situation, arrived just after noon and, following a survey of the town, reported there had been nothing more serious than a few fist fights.

Then while John Smith, Klan leader and garage owner, was challenging the votes of Italians in the Fourth Ward, he was attacked by an anti-Klan precinct worker. Police and deputy sheriffs restored order.

Apparently this episode had been enough to bring back all the old enmities. A few hours later the town was plunged into rioting, which broke out sporadically in various parts of the downtown districts.

Smith later said that the first shot of the day was fired at him by a man whom he identified as "Blackie" Arms.

Smith and his brother-in-law, Gene Vincent, and two other men then barricaded themselves in Smith's garage.

A few moments later two closed cars drove up and a fusillade of bullets from pistols and machine guns was poured into the garage. Smith and his men returned the fire, but none was wounded. The cars then were driven away.

From his office, three blocks away, State Representative Sneed, a mine union official, heard the firing and telephoned to Springfield for troops.

"There must have been a thousand shots fired," he told the Adjutant General's office.

Orders were immediately sent to the headquarters company at Carbondale and the infantry company at Cairo to rush to Herrin. The company at Salem was ordered to be ready for instant duty.

A short time later the Carbondale outfit was in Herrin. It was assigned to duty at the Smith garage. Then the shooting started at the Masonic Temple. When troops reached there the killers' automobiles were gone, a few bodies littered the streets and all was quiet again.

WILLIAMS SOBER, OFFICERS TESTIFY

Deny Colonel Staggered, One Asserting Drinks Were Only Fruit Juice.

TRY TO IMPEACH WITNESS

Defense Declares Affidavits on Cocktail Party Were Made to Gen. Butler Under Duress.

Special to The New York Times.

SAN DIEGO, Cal., April 13.—Attempted impeachment of a defense witness in the court-martial of Colonel Alexander Williams and endeavors to throw out affidavits of guests at the Williams cocktail party because they were obtained under duress were the features of the marine officer's trial today.

Captain George F. Stokes, whose impeachment was sought, had testified that he saw nothing unusual in the conduct of Colonel Williams at the Hotel Del Coronado on the night of March 6. Later, however, when Colonel Williams was leaving the hotel, the witness said that the colonel appeared unsteady on his feet and may have been sick or slightly intoxicated."

Judge Advocate Leo Hermle produced a written statement submitted to Brigadier General Smedley D. Butler some weeks ago by Captain Stokes, in which it was said that Stokes had seen nothing unusual in the colonel's behavior at the hotel. Captain Stokes denied that his written statement contradicted the testimony he gave today.

"Before I prepared the statement the General told me to confine myself to what happened at the hotel," said Stokes. "I took this to mean what happened in the hotel. Naturally, I did not mention what I saw outside the hotel on the grounds."

Oppose Written Statement.

Arguments followed, the defense asserting that the written statement should not be admitted because it had been "obtained under duress."

Captain Clifton B. Cates and Lewis R. Kirby of defense counsel finally told Judge Advocate Hermle to do as he pleased. The statement then was admitted in evidence.

Captain Stokes, continuing his testimony, declared that the first statements submitted to General Butler by officers at the hotel on the night of March 6, were handed back with the remark:

"You boys know what is wanted. Now go back and write new statements."

When he appeared in the lobby of the Hotel del Coronado on the night of March 6, Captain Stokes testified that he had four or five cocktails, served on trays which were passed about to the guests. He said he did not feel any effects from drinking them and that at no time during the party did he notice Williams acting in an unusual manner.

Major Russell F. Davis, Quartermaster at the marine base, declared that he believed that Colonel Williams was sober and that the drinks served were nothing more than fruit punch. The Major declared he did not believe the drinks contained alcohol in any quantity.

Lieut. Commander Harold W. Willett, dental officer, testified that he saw Colonel Williams at the hotel that night and saw nothing to indicate that the Colonel was intoxicated.

Says Colonel Was Normal.

Willett declared that no man can tell, by observation alone whether another is sick, doped or drunk, and his opinion, when the Colonel passed him and said, "Good evening, doctor," was that the Colonel was not drunk; he did not stagger, he said. The Colonel's eyes were normal and he smelled no liquor on Williams's breath.

During the cross-examination by the prosecutor Captain Hermle was accused by defense attorneys with browbeating the witness. The Captain assured the witness and Court that it was not his intention to argue or intimidate the dental officer.

Walter O. Poor, manager of the Coronado office of the National City Company of New York, said he talked to Colonel Williams at the hotel on the evening of March 6.

"The Colonel looked pale, feeble and worn," declared Poor.

"State anything you noticed regarding the accused's gait," the defense said.

"It was feeble, but not the staggering gait of a drunken man, and in my opinion the Colonel was not drunk," Poor testified.

Details of happenings at the hotel were given by General Butler.

"As the accused left he was staggering. His feet were not under his body and I got the distinct impression that he was literally carried out. His coat was rumpled up behind his neck as if he was being supported."

"Wasn't it possible that the accused might have been sick, instead of drunk?" defense counsel asked.

"He may have been sick, too; they generally are from drinking this liquor. He looked to me like he was drunk, too," the General said.

The General insisted that he had done all he could to avoid the present situation.

"People at the hotel know me," he asserted. "What could I do after spending two years as a cop? Beating other people's heads off for being drunk? I could get away with the affair at Colonel Williams's home, but what would be said had I let the hotel matter go?"

Draft Evader Said to Be in Surly Mood While Waiting to Face Seduction Charges.

MOSBACH, Baden, Germany, April 13 (AP).—Excitement prevails in this village over the trial tomorrow of Grover C. Bergdoll, who has been in trouble ever since he evaded the American Draft law. He is charged with seduction and impairing the morals of minors.

Hundreds of Badenese are traveling to Mosbach in all manner of conveyances in expectation of exciting scenes even though the trial will be held behind closed doors before one Judge and two jurors. Bergdoll's escapades, his lavish squandering of money and his high-powered automobile have made him a familiar and in some quarters a popular figure throughout the province. Speculation is running wild among the villagers because the desire of the State appears to be to prevent a scandalous sensation.

Secrecy shrouds the State's preparations. It was learned that the prosecution has seven witnesses, the chief one being Liesel Schmidt, a 17-year-old Heidelberg girl, whom Bergdoll is charged with having seduced three years ago.

Bergdoll is reported to be in surly mood while awaiting trial. He is permitted to move about the spacious prison gardens and enjoys special meals which are supplied to him from a near-by hotel.

Liesel Schmidt, who was born in Cairo, Egypt, of German parents, and is a student of chemistry in Heidelberg University, is reported to be extremely nervous. Some sympathy for Bergdoll is manifested, because the original charges were brought against him by a private detective, formerly of Philadelphia, Robert P. Sachs, who left Germany some weeks ago and is now believed to be in America.

LIKENS OUR HISTORY TO THAT OF SOVIET

Educator Says Revolutionary Committees Were as Harsh as Those Now in Russia.

The perverting and "debunking" of American history was discussed last night by Dr. James Sullivan, Assistant Commissioner of Education of the State of New York and formerly State Historian, in an address at the McMillan Academic Theatre, Columbia University, in connection with historical exercises in commemoration of the 300th anniversary of the founding of the City of New York.

Speaking of the difficulty in maintaining poise in history, Dr. Sullivan, whose address followed that of President Nicholas Murray Butler, declared that the committees of correspondence during the American Revolution were almost exact counterparts of the present Russian system.

"Outside of the executions, however," said Dr. Sullivan, "for practically all of the years covered by the first two-thirds of the revolutionary period our Soviets ruled with much the cruelty, rigor and summary justice that the modern Russian Soviet has practiced."

His remarks were met by a show of opposing sentiment from the gallery, and a well defined hiss, which was quickly silenced. The incident caused some stir in the large audience.

"To advance the principles of the Declaration of Independence," Dr. Sullivan went on, "whose anniversary we are about to celebrate, against our oppressors, but to extend them to peoples subject to us is a painful test to our fairness of mind.

"Just at present we are wont to speak with a kind of horror of the Soviets of Russia without realizing that our own committees of correspondence during the Revolution were almost counterparts of the present Russian system. To be sure, we never went to the extremes in the matters of executions, and our education in self-government led us to use our soviet system merely as a temporary expedient until we could establish a permanent Government.

"A true historian appreciates this fact. The bigoted, ignorant and narrow-minded citizen condemns the Russians and forgets that his own ancestors did much the same as they. Letters of Washington on the subject of the Tories are as cruel in tone as were the actions of a Robespierre."

Dr. Sullivan pictured Washington riding into New York just 150 years ago yesterday from Boston to take charge of the army.

"If he followed his usual custom, as he probably did, he had his grog at each of the taverns where he stopped for the night, admired the pretty women whom he saw, and conducted his daily life like any ordinary human being. What difference does it make whether Washington drank grog or not? We cannot judge eighteenth century customs by the highly prohibitive if not temperate standards of our own days."

He told of the methods of the perverters in writing history up to about fifty years ago, a triumphal march of heroes from the Pilgrims to Garfield, and then of the "debunkers," who tried their hand in making out the Colonial and Revolutionary leaders as black as they could.

Dr. Butler, in his address, linked Kings College, now Columbia University, with the growth of the city, saying that the culture emanating from the university had greatly aided the spread of mental, moral and physical culture that was so much in evidence. From its early days to the present, the university, he said, had "served man and the State to the very best of its ability."

Pier Watchman Fires on River Pirates Caught Stealing Silk.

A single United States Customs guard drove off a band of river pirates who were attempting to steal silk valued at $1,000,000 from the upper loft of Pier 57, North River, at the foot of West Fifteenth Street early yesterday. Martin Carroll, the guard, heard a noise near the outer end of the pier and creeping forward saw a thirty-foot motorboat with a ladder leading to the pier floor.

The robbers were loading a bale of silk into the boat as Carroll fired. While several of the band hastily pulled the ladder into the boat, others fired back at the guard. The bale of silk fell into the water. Carroll said he believed he wounded one of the thieves.

A few bales of silk were stolen, the exact value of which was not learned. The silk was awaiting loading on the French liner De Grasse, scheduled to sail for France today.

EQUALITY DEMANDS RENEWED IN CHINA

SERIOUS SITUATION AHEAD

SHANGHAI, April 13.—Hope that Chinese feeling about national issues, including the foreign position in Shanghai, had subsided was dispelled by publication today in important full-page advertisements signed by the Chinese General Chambers of Commerce calling attention to the anniversary of the shooting on last May 30, and stating that nothing has been done to effect an adjustment of the issues involved to satisfy the Chinese sense of justice.

The manifesto outlines the attitude of the Chinese on local and national questions growing out of the shooting, and demands, first, racial equality, with all foreigners; second, full civic rights in the foreign settlements of Shanghai; membership in the Municipal Council—a protest against the arbitrary allotment of a number of Chinese seats by foreigners—in proportion to the amount of taxes paid by the Chinese; third, immediate and unconditional establishment of mixed courts under Chinese control.

Regarding foreign affairs, the demands are for an early adjustment to secure China's full sovereign rights and for a revision of all unequal treaties.

Publication of this manifesto shows that the Chinese do not intend to abandon their efforts to secure a complete revision of the treaties, also a radical reorganization of the Government. These concessions presage a serious situation in the coming months unless the powers proceed promptly to take up the various questions and attempt to adjust them amicably in such a way as to satisfy the Chinese.

News from Peking is meagre and indicates that the situation there is uncertain and wavering; evidently secret conferences are going on among the leading Generals, all of which makes it impossible for private trade to calculate the outcome.

Tuan Defies Opponents.

PEKING, April 13 (AP).—It has been definitely established that Tuan Chi-jui has been in refuge in a business building in the Foreign Legation Quarter since he was removed as Chief Executive of China in last Saturday's coup d'état.

Tuan has issued a warning saying that he will not be responsible for any mandates issued during his absence from office.

Chi Teh-yao, the former Premier who is in refuge with Tuan Chi-jui, has notified the dean of the diplomatic corps that the Chief Executive did not resign but was forcibly ejected. Tuan Chi-jui has instructed the provinces to maintain order and disregard instructions purporting to come from the Central Government, saying he expects action will be taken to check the movement.

General Tien Wi-chin, one of the lieutenants of General Wu Pei-fu, who was invited to take charge of affairs in Peking, has arrived in the capital. He informed the newspapers that his troops intended to occupy the Nanyuan military camp. The arrival of many of Tien Wi-chin's soldiers seems to indicate that an agreement has been reached between his leader, Wu Pei-fu, and the Kuominchun or National army.

Kuominchun troops repulsed General Li Ching-lin's forces beyond Fengtai yesterday, and drove back other Mukden troops around Tungchow.

Chang Only Against Bolshevism.

MUKDEN, April 13 (AP).—Marshal Chang Tso-lin, dictator of Manchuria, interviewed by various representatives of the press today said:

"My whole object in the war [referring to the recent struggle with himself and Wu Pei-fu on the one side and Feng Yu-hsiang on the other] is to eradicate Bolshevism in China. As soon as that is accomplished I will withdraw to my own territory north of the Great Wall and my entire attention henceforth will be devoted to the reconstruction and development of Manchuria along the lines of industry and peace."

Chang seemed to be embittered against Feng. He declared he was not interested in who would be the next President of China, although he said a big man was needed.

"I shall keep out of politics in China, my business being entirely in Manchuria," he stated.

BRATIANO FAMILY DOMINATE RUMANIA

Founders and Leaders of the 'Liberal Party' Hold Economic and Political Control.

SUPREME IN KEY INDUSTRIES

Oil, Coal, Gas and Metals Are in Hands of Their Group as Well as the Banking System.

CROWN ALSO IN THEIR GRIP

In view of the conflicting reports concerning the troublous political situation in Rumania, and its threatened repercussions in Southeastern Europe, The New York Times recently sent a staff correspondent to Bucharest to ascertain the exact facts. The third of a series of articles from the correspondent follows.

Special Correspondence The New York Times.

BUCHAREST, April 1.—The dangerous struggle between the old kingdom and the new territories in Rumania began at once to undermine the prestige of the country's key institution, the Crown. King Ferdinand had both promoted that struggle and identified himself with one side by putting the old régime into power, in complete disregard of the usual rules of Parliamentary Government.

The issue has grown sharper in the last four years under the Bratiano Cabinet.

The Bratiano family, originally radical, but now conservative and wealthy, has long been one of the most powerful in Rumania and a ruling influence at Court. There is a public monument in Bucharest to Jon Bratiano, the father.

He was one of the leaders in the revolutionary movement of 1848 and in the deposition of Prince Cusa in 1866. He had much to do with replacing him with the present Hohenzollern dynasty. He was one of the founders of the Liberal Party, which soon became the strongest in the country and is now quite conservative.

Leadership of the party descended to his eldest son, the present Jon Bratiano, who grew up with King Ferdinand. He has two brothers, Vintula, Minister of Finance in his Cabinet, and Dino, a Deputy.

The brother-in-law of Jon Bratiano, the wealthy Prince Barbu Stirbey, has for years been reputed the favorite of Queen Marie.

Bratianos Prevail in New Kingdom.

The Bratianos and the interests they represent are accustomed to rule in Rumania. Their power was threatened by all the elements introduced into the kingdom since the war: the new territories, the great mass of new voters allowed by the substitution of universal suffrage for the previous highly restricted system, and the division of land among the peasants.

The one thing which remained in their hands was their influence at Court, and it was but natural that they should exert it to continue their domination. It sufficed.

The way was prepared by General Averescu's Government. Although of Bessarabia origin, he is identified with the old kingdom rather than the new territories. He and his People's Party are generally considered the puppets of Bratiano.

When Bratiano and his party replaced them, there was no disguising the fact that the old régime was in control at the Palace. As the result of that control Bratiano in his four years in office has given his family and his party a strangle hold on the new kingdom such as it did not enjoy even in the old, under more favorable circumstances.

They control the army, the gendarmerie and the governmental machine throughout Greater Rumania. Economically and financially they are supreme.

They have used the law nationalizing the country's natural resources, meant to prevent their exploitation by foreigners, to put them securely in the hands of individual Liberals.

Finance and Industry Controlled.

The State's petroleum lands have been divided, either definitely or in form, and distributed to companies placed under Liberal control. The natural gas of Transylvania has been monopolized by the Liberals by companies they have formed for this purpose.

The railroads have been made autonomous under a board composed of Liberals. The fisheries in the Danube Delta and Black Sea have been given, by a monopolistic law, to companies controlled by Liberals. The coal companies, "Petrosani" and "Lupeni," are also theirs. So, too, are the important metallurgical works of Transylvania, the "Resita," which is now branching into the production of munitions in connection with Vickers.

Financially the National Bank of Rumania is in the hands of Liberals and they have prolonged its privilege. They dominate most of the other private financial institutions. Through the Credit Industrial, a banking institution supported by the State, they have worked their way into many industries, by the power to impose conditions of existence in granting loans.

Their power is the greater in that it is centralized, through interlocking directorates, in the hands of a few. Prince Stirbey, for instance, is President of the Steuea Romana Oil Company, Vice President of the General Bank and the Resita, and Director of several other concerns. Though estates are limited to 1,000 acres, through various jokers he still owns 20,000.

Ascendency Over King Maintained.

To this enormous power must be added the ascendancy of the Liberal leaders, especially of Bratiano personally, over the King. It derives, indeed, directly from that ascendency. It is therefore highly essential for the Liberals to remain the dominating influence with the Crown.

They have little to fear so long as King Ferdinand lives. The Liberals compose the palace coterie. The King, who still prefers to speak in his native German in private, is accustomed to seeing most of Rumania through their eyes. It is but natural that the King should have more confidence in the men of the old kingdom whom he has known for years than in comparative strangers from the new territories.

The Liberals, it is believed, have further fortified their position by getting the King to invest his capital in their enterprises.

Carol early showed that he was self-willed and impulsive. He left his military post during the war to elope with Zizi Lambrino, the daughter of a Rumanian officer, to Odessa, where their morganatic marriage was celebrated.

The attitude of his parents embittered and estranged Carol. In reply to their criticism he denounced the influence of Bratiano over his father as nefarious and the relations of Prince Stirbey to his mother as scandalous.

Opposition Looks to Crown Prince.

The Opposition, especially the Transylvanian Nationalists, saw their opportunity. The Liberals were powerful through the favor of the King; the Nationalists were encouraged by their example to gain the favor of the Crown Prince. They sympathized with Carol. They gained influence with him.

When Carol abdicated in 1919, angered at the way in which he was kept separated from his morganatic wife and interfered with even in his correspondence with her, the Transylvanian Nationalist leader, Alexander Vaida-Voevod, got the King to let him mediate. He easily persuaded Carol not only to withdraw his abdication but to consent to the nullification of the marriage.

Later the Transylvanians coalesced with th Nationalists of the old kingdom, whose leader, Professor Nicholas Jorga, had, as the tutor of Carol, also gained strong personal influence over the Crown Prince.

On his side, Carol, like many another Crown Prince was not loath to play politics against the King and the party in royal favor. As he grew older and as the grasp of Bratiano settled more tightly on the kingdom he would inherit, he sided more and more openly with all the elements of the Opposition, but especially the Nationalists.

He took a particular interest in Transylvania and he became popular there even with the Hungarian minority. Their leaders have told me that they would favor a personal union of Transylvania and Hungary under Carol, or an independent Transylvania with him as King, and they still hope for this.

Thus, the Crown itself became involved in the struggle between the old and the new in Rumania, the King and the Crown Prince becoming identified with the opposing sides.

SIAMESE TWINS IN COURT.

Coney Showman Prosecuted for Employing Pair of Minors.

Mary and Margie Gibb, so-called Siamese twins, 13 years old, of 12 Portland Street, Holyoke, Mass., appeared in Coney Island Court with their father, John Gibb, yesterday, when David Rosen of 2,155 East Eighth Street, Coney Island, proprietor of a freak show and museum at the Bowery and West Fifteenth Street, Coney Island, was arraigned on a charge of employing minors. Rosen was paroled for further hearing Wednesday and the Siamese twins were given into the custody of the Children's Society by Magistrate David Hirshfield.

Mary and Margie arrived at Coney Island last week and were exhibited publicly for the first time in their lives at the museum last Sunday and yesterday. Their father told the Magistrate that he was with them at all times and could see no wrong in exhibiting them, as he was their guardian. Complaint was made against Rosen by Lester Bockover, an agent for the Children's Society.

WORK ON NEW ROME BEGINS NEXT WEEK

State Advances 90,000,000 Lire to Start Restoring City's "Augustan Glory."

SLUMS WILL BE TORN DOWN

Public Buildings Will Be Erected and Ancient Structures Excavated Under Mussolini's Plan.

By Wireless to The New York Times.

ROME, April 13.—The full details of the grandiose plan for the beautification and development of Rome, which will be begun on "Rome's birthday," April 21, were made public today.

This work will be undertaken in obedience to the commands of Premier Mussolini, who, in his speech at the inauguration of Senator Cremonesi as the first Governor of Rome, ordered him to make Rome again "as vast, well-ordered and powerful as in the days of Emperor Augustus." The State is advancing 90,000,000 lire to the City Administration for meeting the first expenses of putting the plan into effect.

The plan worked out by the City Administration contains much that is highly interesting from an archaeological viewpoint. It includes the demolition of ramshackle houses and huts clustering round the Theatre of Marcellus, the excavation of the Forum Olitorium and the Circus Maximus and the restoration and beautification of the ancient Appian Way.

Slums Will Be Demolished.

The Theatre of Marcellus, which was one of the finest buildings of Imperial Rome, now rises in the midst of a slum district, inhabited by many poor families who have turned into unsanitary homes the boxes in which the Emperors and Rome's patricians once used to sit. It is proposed to demolish all those unhealthy houses and cut a large open space around the theatre, which will then remain revealed to view in its full splendor.

The remains of the Forum Olitorium and the Circus Maximus are now completely buried, though plans for their excavation have been considered for years. The Circus Maximus is of especial interest, as it was Imperial Rome's greatest arena and in the height of its glory was capable of seating 100,000 people. The excavation of the Circus Maximus is an event keenly looked forward to by all archaeologists, who believe it will furnish much wonderful material.

The Appian Way, the "Queen of Roads," will be rid of some of the modern buildings rising near it. Some of its monuments needing repair will be restored and many trees will be planted along its borders.

New Streets to Reveal Past Glories.

The City Administration's plan also includes the cutting of two new thoroughfares, the first connecting Trajan's Forum with the Roman Forum, and the second leading to the Colosseum.

Though both of these new streets have been decided upon for reasons of traffic, both have considerable archaeological interest. The first will run directly through the zone of the Imperial Forums and will expose to view the entire left flank of Capitoline Hill, and the second will render the Colosseum, which now rises in the centre of a saucer-like depression, visible from the centre of the city.

The City Administration also proposes to build an "artisans' quarter," with homes, workshops and stores. This new quarter should rise at the foot of the Aventine Hill.

Finally, it is proposed to construct a new Academy of Fine Arts, a new exhibition hall, and new School of Architecture, and to complete the new university building.

Premier Mussolini, who by next week will have returned from Tripoli, will inaugurate most of these projects.

DEPICTS JEWS' PLIGHT IN EASTERN EUROPE

United Campaign's Commissioner Tells of Conditions—Rabbis Pledge Aid to Drive.

After listening to miss Irma May describe the condition of the "starving, freezing and despairful Jewry of Poland and Bessarabia," the Rabbinate of Greater New York, convening at the Biltmore yesterday afternoon, adopted a resolution pledging its "speech, strength and leadership" to the United Jewish Campaign for $6,000,000 to be raised in this city.

Miss May, the campaign's special commissioner to Eastern Europe, painted pictures of children left destitute through parental suicides, men fighting and snarling like animals to get bread tickets, banks that were closed or refused to extend credit, and craftsmen without licenses to practice their crafts and without money to pay for licenses.

"In Lodz, the largest industrial centre in Poland, nearly all the factories are closed, and 20,000 Jewish laborers and dependents numbering 780,000 are slowly perishing," said Miss May. "I have seen men lying in bed all day because they realized that walking would whet appetites that could not be satisfied," she went on.

David A. Brown, National Chairman, declared that the $6,000,000 for New York and $15,000,000 for the country could be raised only through the unceasing efforts of all concerned. "We need man-power, and again man-power," he said. "If we fail it will be through lack of 'salesmen.'"

LAWYER FOR MISS GIBSON.

Relatives of Mussolini's Assailant Chose Deputy Ferri to Defend Her.

ROME, April 13 (AP).—Lord Ashbourne and Lady Constance Gibson have chosen Deputy Enrico Ferri as counsel for their sister, the Honorable Violet Albina Gibson, who last Wednesday shot and wounded Premier Mussolini.

Deputy Ferri is considered one of the greatest exponents of Italian criminal law. Lord Ashbourne and Lady Constance hope he will succeed in proving Miss Gibson irresponsible, owing to her mental condition, and obtain her acquittal at the conclusion of the preliminary investigation.

She would thus avoid being brought to trial, being turned over to her relatives for proper care.

DICTATORSHIP MOVE GAINS IN GERMANY

The Three Leading Militarist Leagues Unite Under Aegis of Fatherland Societies.

REBEL AGAINST WESTARP

Organization Entitled 'Horticulture' Formed to Elevate Prestige of the Hohenzollerns.

By LINCOLN EYRE.

By Wireless to The New York Times.

BERLIN, April 13.—The Nationalistic consolidation designed to bring about a German dictatorship which, as revealed in The New York Times a week ago is being promoted indefatigably by Dr. Alfred Hugenberg, Germany's most powerful newspaper Croesus, is fast approaching its realization. Signs of a merger uniting the three foremost militarist leagues, the Steel Helmet, the Young German order and the Werewolf into a compact unit under the aegis of the United Fatherland Societies are recorded in today's Berlin papers.

The Berliner Tageblatt also discloses the creation of a new organization aesthetically entitled "Horticulture," the object of which is to elevate the prestige of the Hohenzollerns in face of the crushing blow delivered to the ex-German rulers by 12,000,000 of their former subjects who recently voted in favor of expropriating them by popular referendum.

The Steel Helmet organs and other mouthpieces of the younger Nationalist element openly stress these militants' dissatisfaction with Count Westarp's leadership of the Nationalist party in the Reichstag. Westarp is too moderate for the followers of Hugenberg, who seek union with the ultra-reactionary Voelkische on a common platform aiming at the establishment of a dictatorship in the immediate future. To this end the Steel Helmet and Werewolf bands have buried the hatchet with the Young German Order, whose leader, Mohraun, had antagonized them by urging a military alliance with the Western powers against Bolshevist Russia.

This proposal originally aroused a storm of criticism against Mohraun as a "tool of France," but he has persuaded the Steel Helmet and Werewolf that a solid Nationalist front against the Third Internationale is more imperative than continued hostility toward the Entente.

General Count von der Goltz, Commander of the Fatherland Societies, emphasizes this view tonight in a statement to the effect that his organization "not only rejects any fighting alliance whatever with the Bolsheviki but considers a fight against Bolshevism one of its foremost tasks."

Politically Hugenberg's movement is not pointed squarely at Chancellor Luther. The German Northcliffe has convinced the Nationalists as a whole that if the Luther Cabinet can be overthrown in the Reichstag no successor able to obtain a parliamentary majority will be found among the present Deputies, and that consequently President von Hindenburg would be obliged to dissolve the Reichstag and order a new general election.

NORGE STARTS OUT FOR NORWAY FLIGHT

stay there for a day. He will time his stay so he will reach the hangar at Tsarskoe-Selo, near Leningrad, in the daytime.

Interviewed tonight, Colonel Nobile said:

"It may be a victory—it may not. Anyway, I have the satisfaction of knowing I have done all that is humanly possible. Maybe we shall be compelled to land on the ice or maybe we shall come down in the sea. In the latter case we will have to rely on the fleet of light boats which I had made in Rome. We are taking eight of these boats with us, each capable of holding two or three persons."

The big airship brought twenty-one men to Pulham from Rome, but she now goes on with twenty, two of whom joined the party here. The two Englishmen who made the trip stayed here, and Professor Eredia, the Italian Government meteorologist, was left behind to go by train and boat to Leningrad to make arrangements for weather reports in Berlin and elsewhere. He will rejoin the expedition at Leningrad. His place in the Norge was taken by Commander K. Prestrud, the Norwegian Naval Attaché in London. Prestrud commanded the ship in which Captain Amundsen made his dash to the South Pole.

The other new passenger is Dr. Cesco Tomaselli of the Milan newspaper Corriere della Serra. He made the trip to Pulham in a great rush from Paris, and arrived shortly before its departure.

The Norge was getting ready to start on the second lap of her perilous voyage to Alaska by way of the North Pole when Colonel Nobile, who had announced he would start to Oslow this evening, received a message from Oslo asking him to delay the start from Pulham so as to reach Oslo on Saturday or Sunday, when preparations for a reception by the Norwegian King have been made. As the weather was excellent Colonel Nobile did not wish to tarry, and if Oslo is not ready to receive him he may not stop there, but go direct to Leningrad.

On the trip from Rome he had intended to halt at Toulon or Rochefort, but changed his mind en route.

The airship trip from Rome to Spitsbergen was said today by observers to be more dangerous than the one from Spitsbergen over the Pole because of the sudden changes in temperature. The change from the warm climate of Italy to the chill atmosphere encountered over the Bay of Biscay was exceedingly ticklish because the hydrogen gas in the Norge is likely to explode if the changes in the temperature are too rapid.

Temperature Even in the North.

From Spitsbergen over the Arctic the danger of explosion will be practically over, since the climate will be about the same from Spitsbergen to Alaska. The chief difficulty will be with sudden storms, which may damage the non-rigid part of the dirigible. If the Norge strikes a snowstorm it will be necessary for the members of the crew to go on top of her and keep the dirigible clear of snow. As there is nothing but the top of the gas bag to stand on, this will not be an enviable post. The men would have ropes tied about their bodies, so if they slipped over the side they could be hauled in again.

Outside the engine gondolas and the control car the footing of the interior of the dirigible is not too secure. A frail, wabbly passageway a foot wide runs the whole length, suspended in the trough of the airship, which is shaped like a fish. Of this passage there are six or seven sections, and only one person is able to stand on one section at a time.

During the storm which lasted from Rochefort till the passage over the English Channel, when the Norge wabbled in the wind like a whale in a hurricane, Colonel Nobile found it necessary to distribute the members of the party along this passageway, one man to a section. There they sat in silence with their arms crossed for fifteen hours, with nothing but a few wires and sheets of canvas between them and a plunge to death.

When the Norge started she had forty quarts of drinking water and a few quarts of coffee. This, with the two sandwiches allotted to each man, was gone at the end of the first half of the journey, so hunger and thirst were added to the hazards of the voyage.

Before embarking tonight the veterans of the voyage were better prepared as regards food. Coming up they had two sandwiches apiece, but tonight most of the men had sandwiches and boiled eggs in their little kits. One Italian made a sandwich of a large and tough piece of Pulham steak, which will probably keep him chewing all the way to Oslo. On board were also seven vacuum bottles of tea and coffee. Although allowed five kilograms this Italian had about twenty excess baggage. Colonel Nobile's idea of baggage were too scant for him after the trip from Rome.

Another acquisition here was a small typewriter for the use of your representative, who is also the historian of the expedition. As soon as the Norge strikes the coast she will go up it till she reaches the latitude of Oslo and then will cut across to Norway. Colonel Nobile said he would not be able to grant the request of the Danes that he fly over Copenhagen. It is 600 miles to Oslo and if the Norge flies with the wind she may reach there in ten hours.

When told of criticism in the German press by German flying experts that the Norge was unsuited for Captain Amundsen's undertaking, Major Scott, the British pilot who came on her from Rome said he thought her excellent for the polar flight. However, compared with the frame of the Zeppelin in the adjoining hangar the Norge is as frail as an eggshell.

No mention of the German criticism was made to the members of the party because it was thought it would make them more nervous. On the giant Zeppelin there is almost as much room as on a small steamer deck. The materials from which the Norge is made are of the slightest, and at one place a piece of cotton string is used to tie the parts together. She undoubtedly is able to cross the Pole in good weather, but in case of a terrific storm it is doubted whether her fragile canvas and silk could stand such buffeting.

Asked why the Norge had no non-inflammable helium gas, it was said that helium was too costly and difficult to procure. The reason for the Norge's three hours of circling over Pulham before landing was to allow the gas to cool gradually. The journey from here to Spitsbergen will involve the same difficulty.

There was no liquor aboard the Norge.

The Norwegian members of the crew are true descendants of Norse giants of old. All are big fellows and they contrast oddly with the Italian members of the party, few of whom are above five feet.

The seven Italian enginemen seem to be made to order for the tiny cocoon-like engine rooms. Dressed in their baggy brown overalls, they resemble brownies. Each has his life insured for 100,000 lire, the premiums being paid by the sponsors of the expedition. The Norge originally cost 22,000,000 lire, but was sold to Captain Amundsen for 2,500,000 lire. Twenty-five Italian machinists are en route to Spitsbergen by train with spare parts, to be ready to overhaul the Norge upon its arrival there. They are taking with them supplies for the expedition. As five or more of the present party will be dropped at Spitsbergen, the Norge will be able to carry more supplies than she has now.

Proposed Flight Is 600 Miles.

Wind and weather permitting, the Norge will fly directly from Pulham, England, to Oslo, on the coast of Norway, a journey of approximately 600 miles, mostly over the waters of the North Sea, during which, in addition to the hazard of such flying, the semi-rigid dirigible will undergo a severe test in the action of cold on the gas in the ship.

However, should the climatic conditions appear unfavorable, the Norge has made arrangements for an alternative journey in two flights via Seddin, in Pomerania, Germany, on the Baltic coast. The dirigible in the event this alternative journey is undertaken would fly slightly northeast instead of almost due north, over the Netherlands and to Seddin, a journey of approximately 700 miles, but all, excepting for a brief over-water flight from England, above land.

At Seddin there is a landing field to which 150 soldiers have been sent by the German Government to help the dirigible to land and to guard it. The second flight on this alternative trip would be northwest from Seddin, across the Baltic, over either Sweden or Denmark and the North Sea to Oslo, a distance of about 625 miles.

The cavalry are ordered to remain in readiness on the flying field throughout the night.

MOSCOW, April 13.—The news that the Amundsen airship successfully completed the first lap of its long journey to the North Pole aroused great interest in Moscow and this morning's papers carry long dispatches from Leningrad about the preparations for its reception there.

A mixed committee appointed by the Leningrad Soviet and the Academy of Sciences under the presidency of M. Yasverdlof, Vice President of the Academy, announces special excursions to welcome the dirigible on its arrival at Samsi hangar, thirty miles from Leningrad.

The following day there will be a "festal reception" in the Academy assembly hall to 500 persons and "all the speeches will be translated into the Italian tongue so that the crew may understand."

The third day there will be visits to points of interest and a special theatre and gala performance, including scenes from "Rigoletto," "Prince Igor" and other Russian favorites. There will also be a banquet, to say nothing of visits to various technical and engineering institutes and any festivities planned by the Italian Embassy.

Meanwhile a cable from Oslo that an American flag has been given to Amundsen to plant on new land he may discover moves Moscow's evening paper to vehement denunciation of the plans of American capitalism to insure domination over the future centre of world traffic between America, Russia and the Orient.

MOSCOW, April 13 (AP).—The Government and the Russian Academy of Sciences are keenly interesting themselves in the expected visit here of the dirigible Norge of the Amundsen-Ellsworth arctic expedition.

The Academy of Sciences has suggested that the commander of the Norge, if he should meet with difficulty while over the Arctic and be forced to come down on the water, arrange for a tremendous explosion which would affect the academy's seismic stations and thereby permit aid to be sent to the distressed airship.

AMUNDSEN LEAVES OSLO FOR SPITZBERGEN

OSLO, Norway, April 13.—Captain Roald Amundsen and Lincoln Ellsworth entrained for Trondhjem at 6:30 P. M. today, cheered by an enthusiastic throng of friends and admirers, including numerous Government officials and members of Parliament. From Trondhjem tomorrow morning they will take a coastwise mail packets arriving in Tromsoe on Friday, where they will be joined by other members of the expedition and proceed to Kings Bay, Spitsbergen, about Monday aboard the chartered supply boat Knut Skaaluren.

Just before the train pulled out Captain Amundsen received a bulletin saying that the Norge would leave Pulham, England, tonight. He expressed the highest satisfaction at the Norge's performance on the Rome-Spitsbergen flight, it being considerably ahead of the most optimistic schedule.

All preparations for receiving the Norge on her arrival here tomorrow morning have been completed several days and experienced Norwegian and Italian crews will be on the ground to assist in mooring the airship to the specially constructed steel and concrete mast at Ekeberg, an Oslo suburb.

Tonight when the news spread throughout Oslo of the Norge's expected arrival the expedition's officers were besieged by thousands of applicants for admission to the aerodrome. The police, however, as well as the expedition authorities have rigidly denied entrance except to officials and the press. The police have arranged to handle the immense crowds and will watch the airship's arrival from vantage points on neighboring hillsides.

SALES EXECUTIVE AVAILABLE

Record of Results:

My first job after graduation from college in 1908 was with a Minneapolis wholesale house, as stock-boy and floor-salesman.

Entered the employ of a New England manufacturer in 1909; after one year in the factory, I spent two years traveling in New England, with several trips through the Middle West.

In 1912, with another salesman, formed a selling agency for this concern, marketing its lines in eight states. The business increased from $68,000 to $450,000 in three years. At this point the manufacturer took over our selling agency as a direct branch. As sole manager of this branch, increased sales to $1,40,000.

I was entirely responsible for hiring and training salesmen, planning and supervision of sales and advertising campaigns, also office and personnel; directed credits and had charge of a $300,000 stock.

Due to economical management and sound merchandising this branch ranked unusually high in net profit per dollar volume. Personally handled 125 accounts and was acquainted with a large portion of the customers on our books. Promoted 10 original ideas to increase the salability of our products.

Average earnings over last three years in bonus and salary, $17,000.

Personal Information:

40 years old, married, Christian.

Resigned from the business mentioned above to develop a specialty machine, the sale of which has been arranged for, leaving me a free agent. Am interested to make a connection with headquarters in New York. Compensation can be in the form of salary, plus bonus. Would consider a nominal salary with a share in the business as a bonus in the case of a well-established enterprise, where the product, the management and the finances are right. TCHITCHERIN NOTE DERIDES LEAGUE

CALLS POWERS INSINCERE

And Says League Need Never Invite Soviet Unless Its Presence Is Really Desired.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

GENEVA, April 13.—M. Tchitcherin, Russian Commissary for Foreign Affairs, has informed the League of Nations that Moscow refuses to participate in the preparatory disarmament conference. He accuses the League of bad faith in inviting Russia to come to the meeting at Geneva, and finally asks the League "only to trouble to invite the Soviet Government to conferences in which those who direct the League's policy genuinely desire it to take part."

The letter alludes to a remark attributed to the American Ambassador to London, Mr. Houghton, when he was in Washington recently to report to the President on political conditions in Europe.

This allusion follows M. Tchitcherin's charge of insincerity on the part of the European nations in calling the preparatory disarmament conference. He says:

"In other words, as a leading American diplomatist put it, the preliminary conference on disarmament will meet at Geneva, if it ever meets, to examine proposals on which agreement is nelt r desired nor expected, and which have been put forward for the specific purpose of insuring failure of the enterprise."

It is the opinion of the League authorities that M. Tchitcherin's letter will in no manner influence the League Council to change its decision in regard to the time and place of the preliminary conference. However, this is a matter which is strictly in the hands of the Council.

Text of Tchitcherin's Note.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, April 13.—The text of M. Tchitcherin's letter to the Secretary General of the League of Nations is as follows:

"I have the honor to acknowledge receipt of your letter of March 13, in which you kindly informed me of the confirmation by the Council of the League of Nations of its previous decision concerning the selection of Geneva as the meeting place for the Preparatory Disarmament Commission.

"The declaration of the Swiss Government to which you allude and which contains its assurances as to its disposition to treat the Soviet delegates on a basis of equality with the delegates of other countries was known to the Soviet Government before the sending of its letter of Jan. 16 to the League of Nations. This declaration can have no influence whatever upon the decision which the Soviet Government has already taken in this question.

"When in 1922 the Swiss Government admitted the presence of Soviet delegates to the Lausanne conference by granting them diplomatic visas, it was likewise understood that the Soviet delegates would enjoy the same rights and privileges as the delegates of other countries. Nevertheless the Swiss Government, although warned in time of threats made openly in extreme circles against M. Vorowsky, the Soviet delegate, not only took none of the measures required under the circumstances to ward off a criminal act, but once the crime had been committed did all that was in its power to ensure impunity for the criminals.

"The fact the Swiss Government obstinately refused to fulfill its elementary international duty and to manifest by sufficient official action its disapproval of the crime committed destroys the whole value of the assurance given by it to the League of Nations and allows the supposition that the Swiss Government still allows itself to be governed in its attitude toward the Union of Socialist Soviet Republics by the mentality of the same circles which had first encouraged and then applauded the assassination of M. Vorowsky.

"Therefore the Soviet delegates cannot expect, any more than in 1922, efficacious protection on the part of the Swiss authorities.

League's Letters Criticized.

"Your letters dated March 18 and Dec. 12 contain no positive argument in favor of a meeting of a preparatory disarmament commission in Geneva. International conferences, even when they were organized by the League of Nations, have ofttimes been held in various European cities outside of Switzerland. It is impossible for the Soviet Government to understand the motives for which a disarmament conference in which the participation of Russia might be presumed to be desirable could not be held elsewhere than in Switzerland.

"The last session of the League of Nations, which was held in Geneva, does not at all prove the existence in that city—the seat of the League of Nations—of an atmosphere particularly favorable to a solution of international questions in a spirit of peace, of disinterestedness and of mutual concessions.

"If at the time of its last decision concerning the choice of Geneva for the commission's meeting the Council of the League of Nations could not have supposed beforehand the existence of objections to such a choice on the part of the Soviet Government, this was no longer so when it confirmed this decision on March 18, when it already had in its hands the categorical and formal declaration of the Soviet Government on its decision in no case to send delegates to Swiss territory.

"If the Council of the League of Nations thought it must nevertheless stand by its anterior decision, it is necessary to conclude that from the start it deliberately aimed to prevent participation of the Soviet Union in the work of the Disarmament Commission and that all the formal declarations on the averred enormous importance of the Soviet Union's collaboration in the task of disarmament were devoid of sincerity and real value.

"Inasmuch as the non-participation of the Union of Soviet States of Russia in the disarmament conference—determined definitively by its absence in the Preparatory Commission—may give a pretext to other States—in conformity with anterior declarations of some of them—to wreck the work for general disarmament or for reduction of armaments, one might reach the conclusion that the League of Nations or those who direct it are not at all interested in seeing the conference achieve positive results.

"In other words, as a directing personality in American diplomacy has justly expressed it, 'the preliminary disarmament conference will meet in Geneva, if it ever meets, to examine proposals on which an agreement is neither desired nor anticipated, and which have been formulated for the specific purpose of insuring the failure of the enterprise.'

Proposed Disarmament in 1922.

"One of the means used to insure this failure is precisely to exclude the Soviet Union from the conference, although it was first to present in full the question of general disarmament at the Genoa Conference in 1922, and had called a conference of bordering States with the purpose of examining this very question and presented therein concrete and quite realizable proposals—later spontaneously reducing its forces to the minimum figure acceptable to the Soviet Union in presence of the refusal of other States to reduce their armaments.

"Having thus furnished numerous proofs of its pacific spirit and its sincere desire to see the realization of the task of universal disarmament, or at least to lessen the military burdens imposed upon the peoples, the Soviet Government has never concealed its skepticism as regards the conference called by the League of Nations. Despite this it consented to participate, even though the chances of success were infinitesimal.

"The attitude of the directors of the League of Nations by the choice of the same place for the conference has definitely convinced the Soviet Government of the lack of seriousness and insincerity of this initiative of the League of Nations as well as the latter's incapacity and inaptitude to carry out so important a task as calling a universal disarmament conference.

"With the deepest interest and intention of collaborating in the fullest degree, the Soviet Government will await the day when the initiative is taken by a commission especially created to that effect and which, foreign to the atmosphere of traditions and intrigues of Geneva, can offer better guarantees of success than the League of Nations.

"The considerations expounded above dispense with my answering your letter of March 18. In conclusion, I allow myself to express the hope that the League of Nations in future will bother to invite the Soviet Government to conferences only in cases where directors of the League of Nations truly wish to see it participate in them."

SLATTERY WITHDRAWS PROTEST ON TREATY

Bishop Says Later Information on Lausanne Compact Caused His Change of View.

Special to The New York Times.

BOSTON, April 13.—Bishop Charles L. Slattery has withdrawn his name from the list of 110 Bishops of the Protestant Episcopal Church who sent a documentary protest against ratification of the Lausanna Treaty with Turkey to every member of the United States Senate on April 4.

"My reversal of attitude was influenced by a letter sent to the Secretary of State and Senator Borah by the American colony at Constantinople," said Bishop Slattery. "The letter, of which I received a copy after signing the protest, urged ratification of the American-Turkish treaty. Believing that the Americans in Constantinople knew more of the situation than I, I felt it just to immediately withdraw my name."

Two Oth rs Expected to Recant.

WASHINGTON, April 13. — Aside from Bishop Slattery, it is the understanding here that at least two other signers of the Lausanne Treaty protest will recant in statements to be made in a day or so.

REICH ACCEPTS INVITATION.

Will Join League Inquiry Concerning Reorganization of the Council.

By Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

BERLIN, April 13.—Germany tonight formally accepted the League of Nations' invitation to participate in the inquiry concerning reorganization of the League Council. A note to that effect was drafted by the Luther Cabinet and sent by special courier to Foreign Minister Stresaman at Locarno After he has affixed his signature the communication will be forwarded to Geneva and presented to the permanent Secretariat of the League there on Thursday by the German Council General.

The German Government in its note announced its decision to be represented on the international committee charged with studying possible alterations in the Council and that the German representative—who it is expected will be von Bulow, Wilhelmstrasse's League expert—will receive full instructions as to his course of procedure. It is the Government's opinion that the method of assigning permanent and temporary Council seats and the process of election to such seats should be dealt with by the committee.

That Germany regards reconstruction of the Council from the standpoint of the League's interests as a whole and not from those of only one power, or group of powers, is reiterated.

OPPOSES WIFE'S PLEA FOR OPERATION FEE

Dr. Mandelberg Says He Cannot Afford $482—Offers to Find Another Surgeon.

Dr. Joseph Mandelberg, a physician connected with the United States Veterans' Bureau and living at 317 Dahill Road, Brooklyn, yesterday opposed an application by his wife Gertrude for an allowance of $482 to defray the cost of an operation for appendicitis. The case came before Justice Carswell in the Brooklyn Supreme Court. The couple have been separated since October, when $35 a week was awarded to Mrs. Mandelberg.

Mrs. Mandelberg said that Dr. John Erdman of 30 West Fifty-second Street would perform the operation at the request of the physician who is attending her, and that the sum she asked would cover the cost.

"How can a man whose net income is $43 a week pay for the services of Dr. Erdman, one of the great specialists in surgery?" Dr. Mandelberg asked in opposing the petition. "It was he who operated on J. P. Morgan and Caruso. I can get Dr. William Lindar of 699 St. Mark's Avenue, Brooklyn, chief surgeon at the Jewish hospital, to perform the operation at a lower figure. It has been intimated to me that it would be dangerous if Mrs. Mandelberg was operated upon by a surgeon selected by me. I think the court may best decide whether a surgeon of Dr. Linder's prominence can be trusted in such a case."

Justice Carswell reserved decision.

"The greatest machine of all"

"A systematic, medical examination once a year should be a regular routine. The wise engineer does not drive his machinery constantly until a breakdown disorganizes his whole plant. Why do we persist in treating differently the greatest machine of all—the human machine?"
—SIR NAPIER BURNETT, K.B.E., M.D., in the London Lancet.

Inspect Your Human Machine

The human machine benefits from a frequent inspection just like any other machine. Long before the kidneys—those sponges which absorb and separate the waste products from the blood—are seriously impaired, laboratory tests will reveal any signs of weakness or overstrain. Your heart is a pump which forces the blood through a system of elastic tubing—the arteries. If this tubing is overstrained, it deteriorates and frequently it bursts, causing death by apoplexy if the affected tube happens to be in the brain.

Inspect Your Human Machine

The founders of the Life Extension Institute believe that fifteen to twenty years can be added to the life of the average human machine by frequent inspections and proper adjustment and care. Since the Institute was organized in 1913, nearly half a million men and women have had the benefit of its examinations. No medical treatment is given by the Institute. Back of its scientific policy is its Hygiene Reference Board of leading physicians, scientists, and public health authorities.

Inspect Your Human Machine

The Institute's examinations are available at its offices in New York City, Boston or Chicago, or at the office of the Institute's medical examiner in the subscriber's home town or city. PUT PRIVATE LOANS ABOVE REPARATIONS

Germans Likely to Meet Business Obligations Before Making Payments to Allies.

DAWES PLAN NO OBSTACLE

Economic Rather Than Legal Considerations Held to Govern Reich's Capacity.

By EDWIN L. JAMES.

By Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, April 13.—American investors in German industrial or other private securities have a better chance of being paid than have the Allies to whom German reparations are due.

That statement will prove to be true, no matter how much discussion there may be about whether reparations come before private German commitments abroad or do not. It will prove to be true notwithstanding the provision in the Treaty of Versailles saying reparations represent a first charge on all German resources. Things will surely turn out that way, regardless of the Dawes plan and all its machinery for safety first transfer of mark reparation payments.

Although the public in Europe has not yet realized it, leading bankers not only on this side of the Atlantic but those in control of the New York securities markets as well, know perfectly well it is true.

Will Pay Charges on Loans First.

Whatever resentment it may bring, whatever criticism it may cause to be leveled against the Americans and British who helped to make the Dawes plan, it remains a fact that practically reparations must wait on the Germans having met their ordinary business obligations abroad. In other words, if payment of interest and charges of the hundreds of millions Germany has been borrowing abroad, largely in the United States, absorbs the capacity of Germany to make foreign payments, France and other Allies will have to wait for reparations, at least for that part they expect to get in cash.

The reason is economic rather than legal. It may well be asked how it will happen that with such machinery as the Transfer Committee for sending abroad the maximum of possible reparation payments the Allies will not be put before American investors whose profits benefit from no such treatment. The answer is this:

German industries borrowing in America must meet their interest obligations to preserve their credit, and to do so will buy foreign exchange at the market price, even if they have to pay the price, which means even if they drive down and endanger the mark. They must pay to keep going and to continue to do business with the United States. Furthermore, they will be buying exchange continuously and these purchases will naturally largely determine the situation with regard to further transfers, for example, those for reparations.

Transfer Agent Restricted.

On the other hand the transfer agent will buy foreign exchange for reparation payment only up to the point where such purchases endanger the standing of the mark. This is quite plainly laid down in the Dawes plan. If at any given time it meant paying a considerable premium in repurchase of gold exchange the transfer agent would not buy, whereas a private concern would in all probability do so unless the price had reached a very high level.

Anyhow the private German borrower abroad would be buying foreign exchange before the transfer agent, and after the transfer agent. It is therefore plain that if private German purchase of foreign exchange ate up Germany's ability to transfer marks abroad at par the transfer agent would be handicapped, if not blocked, in making reparation payments in gold to the Allies. Therefore, reparations will come after private German commitments abroad.

Of course if Germany develops ability to make foreign payments which will meet her private obligations and her public or reparation obligations all will be well. If on the other hand she reaches the other extreme, a stage where she can pay nothing abroad, all will be bad.

But it is just because her experience will lie somewhere between those two extremes that the correlation of her private and public foreign obligations is interesting. If she can pay both, everyone gets paid. If she can pay neither, none of her creditors will be paid.

But considering the true situation, reparation claims appear due to suffer to the advantage of private investments in Germany.

There is, of course, an answer to this criticism. It is this—private loans are made to Germany for productive purposes, and if borrowers and lenders did not think they would produce more than they cost these loans would not be made. The surplus that they produce over their cost represents strengthening of German national economy and therefore increases the ability of that country's Government to meet its foreign obligations.

In other words, private borrowers in Germany will pay their commitments abroad before the transfer agent pays reparation cash abroad. It may be said that it has to be this way, otherwise loans to Germany would cease in the next few years.

And so, however immediately disagreeable this relegation of the rights of reparations payments may seem to the allied creditors, they may be comforted by the argument that in the long run private loans increase their chances of getting paid.

New Athletic Club to Be 25 Stories; Governors Approve $7,500,000 Contract

The Board of Governors of the New York Athletic Club, at a special meeting last evening, unanimously authorized Major William Kennelly, President of the club, to sign a contract with the architectural firm of York & Sawyer for the new $7,500,000 clubhouse that is to be built at Seventh Avenue and Fifty-ninth Street. The new building will rise twenty-five stories above the street and occupy the entire block frontage on the east side of Seventh Avenue between Fifty-eighth and Fifty-ninth Streets.

It was announced that the work of tearing down the present structures on the site will be begun as soon as possible and the work of erecting the new clubhouse will be pushed as soon as the land is cleared.

The plans call for what the members of the club say will be the finest building of its character in the world. There will be 850 living rooms besides the many rooms that will be used for club activities. The building frontage on the avenue, 200 feet, and the 100-foot frontage on Fifty-eighth Street and Central Park South will give ample space for club activities. There will be a large swimming tank that will take up most of the space of the lower floor. There will be handball courts, a running track and a well-equipped gymnasium.

It is expected that the work will be well under way by Oct. 1.

ACCUSES BARON OF FRAUD.

Rumanian Has German Financier Arrested.

PARIS, April 13.—The arrest in Zurich of the German financier, Baron Emil Sternberg, caused astonishment in financial and social circles of Paris, where he is well known and his son is studying now.

Baron Sternberg was detained at the request of the Milan courts on the charge of a Rumanian, Siegfried Lieblein, who alleges that he was the victim of a swindle to the extent of $650,000.

The Baron in January, 1923, sold him a coal mine gott mit uns now called Valeska, situated at Mittel acisk, Poland, for 3,347,000 francs Swiss.

Contract stipulated that while Lieblein became holder of all the Valeska shares the Baron retained control of the company until the total amount due was paid. This, it is alleged, enabled him to hide the fact that he had defrauded both German and Polish Governments of large amounts of money.

Having become the owner of the mine Lieblein was forced to denounce frauds to the Government or himself assume responsibility for them. Choosing the former way out, he lodged a complaint in Berlin which has resulted in Baron Sternberg's arrest.

POLICEMEN RESPOND TO NEW CHIEF, HE SAYS

Ready to Sacrifice Their Lives in Fighting Crime, Declares Association President.

Patrolman Joseph P. Moran, President of the Patrolmen's Benevolent Association, at a meeting of the organization yesterday in Maennerchor Hall urged the men of the force to suppress hold-ups and other crimes "to the limit of your endurance." Moran, during the Enright administration, frequently was transferred to inconvenient precincts, after having fallen into disfavor with Enright.

"You have a Commissioner who is polite, affable and one who leans kindly toward us," Moran said to the patrolmen. "The men are responding to the right kind of treatment. They ask only the treatment that should be accorded men willing to make every sacrifice of life and limb and convenience for the public welfare. Commissioner McLaughlin knows this, and he is willing to help us where he can do so consistently with present conditions."

Patrolman Christian Weckerly of the Butler Street (Brooklyn) Station was promoted yesterday by Commissioner McLaughlin to detective as a reward for noting the license number of a taxicab, the two occupants of which had aroused his suspicions. He turned the number over to detectives, and the two men and five others were arrested last Saturday night. The five, according to the police, have confessed participation in seventeen hold-ups and burglaries.

Mr. McLaughlin denied the report that he was about to appoint State Senator James Higgins of Brooklyn as a Deputy Police Commissioner.

BERLIN NEGOTIATING TREATY WITH RUSSIA

WAY TO GENEVA KEPT OPEN

Russo-German Trade Project Is Abandoned by Berlin as Bankers Demand High Interest.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, April 13.—Germany is negotiating with Soviet Russia a treaty providing for closer relations between the two countries, according to good sources of information here.

The new treaty, it is stated, will be so designed as to adapt the terms of the treaty concluded between the two countries at Rapallo in 1922 to the terms of the Locarno treaty of last Autumn.

During the past few days the Governments of Great Britain and France have been informed of the projected treaty, it is declared, Britain through the British Ambassador at Berlin and France through the German Ambassador at Paris. Italy also has been informed.

The new treaty is described as a "reinsurance" treaty. Though it is explicitly declared that the new German-Russian agreement does not conflict in any way with the treaty of Locarno, it must be borne in mind that the Russians have been consistently hostile to the Locarno agreement and anxious to counteract its effects by drawing closer to Germany.

Therefore, if the new treaty is concluded it will seem, in Russian eyes, an antidote for Locarno, even though the Germans maintain there is nothing in it detrimental to the Locarno agreement.

It is also interesting to remember that the German Ultra-Nationalists have consistently advocated a German-Russian reapproachment, possibly culminating in a military union of the two countries.

In quarters from which the information concerning the new treaty comes it is also pointed out that the idea of a rapprochement between the Germans and Russians has become stronger among the German Nationalists since the recent Geneva meeting of the League of Nations, the upshot of which was a refusal to admit Germany to the League.

The German Government, to be sure, has not officially favored a rapprochement with the Soviet, but is said to be keeping the road open for amicable relations with Russia, while at the same time fulfilling the prescribed policy toward the Western European nations.

Additional interest is lent to the new treaty, if it becomes a reality, by the fact that the Soviet Foreign Minister, George Tchitcherin, is clearly aiming at creating a Continental European bloc against British and American influence.

Trade Project Hits Snag at Berlin.

By Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

BERLIN, April 13.—The German Government's Ministrial Commission, charged with studying the application of Chancellor Luther's Russo-German trade project, has abandoned its task, it was learned tonight, owing to a deadlock having been reached between the Soviet authorities and the German banks.

This, the direct result of the State Department's veto on W. Harriman's proposition for financing German exports to Russia, plus many rumors as to America's increasingly adverse attitude toward European credits in general, caused a sharp fall of values on the Berlin Bourse today.

While the stocks of the bigger industries held up or showed only a slight depression, the smaller firms were hard hit, averaging a drop of 5 per cent. This is considered ominous in view of the similar fall during the past few days.

The point at issue between the Soviet spokesman and the big Berlin bankers is the rate of interest, aggregating nearly 11 per cent., demanded by the latter for guaranteeing the 40 per cent. left uninsured by the Government's project.

The banks now allege that the Russian security is not enough and that pledges of a material character must be forthcoming if the interest charges are to be reduced.

KIDNAP TRUCKMEN, GET $25,000 LOOT

Thieves Force Four Victims Into Car as Confederates Drive Off With Tobacco.

KICK THEM OUT LATER

Boss Truckman Had Placed Extra Men on Vehicle to Avert Such an Occurrence.

The plan of Michael Pillnick, boss truckman, of 475 East Seventy-first Street, to put three or four employes on each of his trucks to scare off robbers did not work yesterday. Five men held up Pillnick and three employes on one vehicle at First Avenue and Sixty-third Street and got away with the truck and its contents, $25,000 worth of tobacco. Pillnick was employed by the P. Lorillard Tobacco Company to transport the tobacco from a warehouse at Avenue A and Seventy-second Street to the Bush Terminal in Brooklyn.

William Kral, the driver, of 420 East Seventy-seventh Street, and two helpers, Andrew Huricisak, 1,318 Avenue A, and Harry Simmick, 445 East Seventy-eighth Street, were starting with the tobacco from the warehouse at 11 o'clock in the morning, when Pillnick decided to accompany them.

Kral was going south on First Avenue when an automobile containing five men, each armed with a pistol, blocked his path. Three of the men in the car jumped out and ordered Pillnick and his employes into the automobile with the two others. The captives were forced to lie low in the car while they were driven to Boscobel Avenue and 169th Street, in the Bronx, and kicked out.

The men in the car sped north and disappeared before Pillnick could summon the police. In the mean time the other three gunmen had driven off with the loot. The police sent out a general alarm for the robbers but up to a late hour last night not even the truck had been traced.

E. H. Blankfield was alone in the Regal Shoe Company's branch store, at 104 Delancey Street, of which he is manager, at 11 o'clock in the forenoon when two well-dressed young men entered. One asked to be shown a pair of shoes. Blankfield took a pair from a shelf, but when he turned around he found himself facing a pistol in each visitor's hand.

He was ordered to throw up his hands, and, while one robber covered him with both pistols, the other took $96 from the cash register. They walked out with a warning to Blankfield not to attempt to give an alarm and they got away in an automobile.

SEIZE RADIO BURGLAR AT BASEBALL GAME

developed physically, with a strong and wiry build, he appears little better than an animal mentally, although he has criminal cunning and courage. Born in the Williamsburg section of Brooklyn, he was left an orphan as a boy, and has been living in institutions off and on since he was 11 years old. He left school after the sixth grade.

Hilton admitted the following police record:

1909—Sent to the Catholic Protectory for juvenile delinquency.
Sept. 17, 1916—Burglary, sentenced to Elmira Reformatory by Judge May, Brooklyn.
Dec. 24, 1918—Burglary, sentenced to Blackwell's Island penitentiary by Judge Malahy, Manhattan.
April, 1921—Unlawful entry and larceny, sentenced to five years in Cranston (R. I.) prison by Judge Blodgett, Providence, R. I.

When he was arrested in 1918, Hilton gave his name as Frank Merriwell, a character in boys' fiction famous as a college baseball player. On his arrest in 1921, he said he was William Cody of Denver, Col., evidently referring to Buffalo Bill, the famous scout and Indian fighter.

Baseball Traps Him.

It was Hilton's fondness for baseball that caused his arrest. The police discovered his identity last Friday. Seeking all the information they could about him, they learned that he was a baseball "fan" and that he had played third base on the prison teams during his imprisonment at Elmira, Blackwell's Island penitentiary and Cranston Prison.

Detectives have been watching the Polo Grounds box office since Sunday. Meanwhile, Hilton had gone to Providence after his last burglaries in Queens, which were last Thursday, two days after the death of Patrolman Kenny from his wounds. Hilton returned to New York on the boat from Providence Monday night.

Among the detectives at the Polo Grounds yesterday afternoon were James A. Pyke and William A. Jackson of the Homicide Squad. They are young third-grade detectives who had not originally been assigned to the case but had begged Deputy Inspector Arthur Carey, commanding the Homicide Squad, for permission to work on it during their time off duty. They had some of the 250 police circulars with Hilton's photograph and description, which Inspector John D. Coughlin, commanding the Detective Division, had printed as soon as Hilton's identity was discovered.

Detectives Pyke and Jackson arrived at the Polo Grounds at 1:30 and found that all the reserved seats had been sold. Then they decided to watch outside the gates. While they were waiting, Detective George Chiquette of the West 123d Station joined them.

After waiting about forty-five minutes, Pyke saw a man approaching, whom he thought he recognized from Hilton's photograph.

"That looks like the man, Chick!" he told Chiquette.

When Hilton was about ten feet from one of the gates which he was about to enter, the three detectives closed in on him. Pyke confronted him, while Jackson seized his right arm and Chiquette his left.

"What's your name?" Pyke demanded.

Hilton stopped, scowled, wrenched his right arm free, and took an identification card from his pocket. It had a name and address in Brooklyn written in pencil.

"My name is Donnelly," he replied in a surly tone. (Donnelly is the name of one of the policeman he shot.)

The detectives started to walk Hilton toward the curbstone, but he held back.

"Who are you, anyway?" he demanded. "I don't know you. Show me something."

Before the detectives had time to reply he burst out again:

"I'm legitimate. I'll show you who I am."

Tries to Draw His Pistol.

Chiquette seized Hilton's left wrist and Pyke, following the burglar's movement with his own hand, seized the handle of the gun at the same time Hilton grasped it. Hilton and the detectives struggled for the weapon for two or three minutes. Pyke finally tore it from the pocket with a lunge that ripped out the lining of the man's coat. Then the detectives dragged Hilton under the elevated steps, threw him down on the ground and beat him until he ceased his resistance.

He required treatment by a police surgeon for wounds on his head when taken to Police Headquarters.

"We had to do it," the detectives said. "He's as strong as an ox, and he's tricky."

Meanwhile hundreds of baseball fans had surrounded the struggling men. About a dozen detectives and uniformed policemen ran to the scene. Among them were Detectives John Cordes and Frank Walsh of Inspector Coughlin's staff, who took the other detectives and their prisoner to Headquarters in an automobile. Hilton was shackled with two pairs of handcuffs.

The detectives found fourteen cartridges, three pearl-handled penknives and a string of rosary beads in his pockets. He also had a gold Odd Fellows medallion with the name "Benjamin J. Markff" and the inscription, "presented by Williamsburg Lodge No. 880, May 22, 1913," and some stationery with the name and address, Leon Russin, 1,445 Fifty-fifth Street, Brooklyn.

Hilton apparently is religious. In addition to the rosary beads in his pocket, the police found in a handbag he had checked at an orangeade stand at 101 East Fourteenth Street yesterday morning, after arriving from Providence, a small gold-plated medal of St. Christopher, the patron saint of travelers, such as devout Catholics often fix on their automobiles. The medal is a little smaller, but is about the same shape as a policeman's shield, and may have been the object Hilton flashed on several occasions when he escaped capture during his burglaries by pretending to be a policeman.

Find Prisoner's Outfit.

The police also found most of Hilton's "working outfit" in the bag—a box of cartridges, a jimmy and wooden brace used to open windows, a flashlight and two extra batteries for the light. They also found a dark gray overcoat and a black and red silk muffler, which Detective McCarthy said Hilton wore when he shot McCarthy. Several dozen stolen neckties also were found in the bag. The proprietor of the orangeade stand said that Hilton had checked the bag there about eight times in the last few weeks.

A wallet which Hilton dropped the night he shot McCarthy led to the radio burglar's identification. This was about 2 o'clock last Tuesday morning. Hilton stole the wallet from the home of Bernard J. Toole of the Consolidated Gas Company on the night of March 17.

McCarthy and two other detectives were looking for the radio burglar last week. On Tuesday morning they saw a man at 135th Street and Eighty-seventh Avenue, Woodhaven, and stopped their automobile near him. McCarthy got out and walked up to him.

"Is this Eighty-seventh Avenue?" McCarthy asked.

"I don't know; I'm a stranger here," Hilton replied.

"Where do you live?" McCarthy asked.

"South Brooklyn."

"What are you doing here at this hour?"

"I'm legitimate," Hilton said, using the same words he used to the detectives yesterday.

"I'm Toole, of the gas company."

He took a wallet from his pocket with his left hand and flipped it open, showing McCarthy a card with Toole's name. McCarthy, who had been drawing his pistol, released it and took the card. Dropping his wallet, Hilton drew his own pistol and shot McCarthy in the neck. As McCarthy fell, the burglar fired another shot, which missed. Then he ran. Detectives Richard T. Siegert Jr. and John Mirsan, who were in the automobile, chased Hilton, but he escaped. Siegert and Mirsan were reduced from detectives to uniformed patrolmen on Monday.

Hilton Is Ambidextrous.

Hilton, incidentally, is ambidextrous. He shot McCarthy with his right hand, but used his left hand in shooting Donnelly and in trying to shoot the detectives yesterday.

In the wallet dropped at the scene of the McCarthy shooting, the police found two pawnticksts for loot from the radio burglar's robberies, signed with the name of George Ebert. The police investigated six George Eberts before they found one, through a process of elimination, who identified the radio burglar for them. They had to trace this one from Flushing, where he formerly lived, to another part of Queens. He admitted he was an ex-convict.

After they found that his signature did not match the signature on the pawn tickets, they asked him if he knew anybody who had used his name. He replied that a man named Paul Hilton, whom he had met in Elmira, had given his name in buying an automobile last November, which was just after Hilton was paroled from his Rhode Island prison sentence. Hilton had a collision some time ago, Ebert said, and insurance adjusters visited him (Ebert) about it, because his name had been used. He also charged Hilton with stealing clothes from him after he had befriended him.

Find Hilton's Record.

The police then found Hilton's record and photograph in the Rogues Gallery. The policemen he had shot, except Kenny, identified the photograph as that of the radio burglar. If he had not been caught at the Polo Grounds he probably would have been arrested in Providence, for a New York detective was sent there to look for him yesterday morning.

Hilton admitted his burglaries readily at Police Headquarters, as well as the shooting of Detective McCarthy. He refused to admit the killing of Patrolman Kenny or the shooting of the other policemen until he had been questioned for several hours and had been identified by Patrolmen Donnolly, Biegel and McCarthy. Then he made a complete confession, according to Inspector Coughlin.

(The Dukoff and Schoen burglaries were committed two days after Detective Charles H. McCarthy was shot by the radio burglar at 135th Street and Eighty-seventh Avenue.)

Purchaser of Loot Arrested.

Hilton told the police he had sold most of his loot to Morris Reiff, who has a radio shop at 134 Third Avenue, near Fourteenth Street. Inspector Coughlin ordered Reiff's arrest last night on the charge of criminally receiving stolen goods, after he had admitted he had bought from Hilton twelve radio sets and some silverware, which he had carted down. Reiff turned over the twelve sets, which had been dismantled, to the police, who will ask persons robbed by the radio burglar to identify them today. Reiff told the police he had served a term in the House of Correction, Philadelphia, on the charge of non-support.

Inspector Coughlin announced last night he would recommend the promotion of Detectives Pyke, Jackson and Chiquette from third grade to first grade, with an increase of pay from $2,500 to $3,300 a year. Police Commissioner McLaughlin, who assisted in questioning Hilton, said he would follow Inspector Coughlin's recommendations and commended Inspector Coughlin himself very highly.

Representatives of the Queens County District Attorney took a statement from Hilton at Police Headquarters last night. He wrote it in his own handwriting. Assistant District Attorney Charles W. Froessel said Hilton would be indicted and tried without delay.

The murder of Patrolman Kenny occurred at 2 o'clock on the morning of March 25, after the radio burglar had escaped from a house surrounded by policemen. The burglar pretended to be the man of the house as he came out of the back door and was confronted by Kenny and Donnolly. Donnolly, who had him covered, dropped his gun an instant, and the man shot him in the neck. The burglar ran, pursued by Kenny. Some blocks away the burglar ran into an alley. Kenny pursued, but was met by a man who said: "Don't shoot, I'm a policeman," and then told Kenny that the fugitive had gone another way. When Kenny turned away to look, the burglar shot him in the chest. Kenny died in Post Graduate Hospital on April 6.

SAYS MERGER PLANS OF ST. PAUL FAILED

Other Roads Spurned Offers, Harkness, a Director, Tells Federal Investigators.

DENIES BANK DOMINATION

Terre Haute Purchase May Have Been "Bad Judgment," He Admits —Pryor on Stand.

Edward S. Harkness, capitalist, director and one of the largest bond and share holders of the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railway Company, testified yesterday at the Interstate Commerce Commission's investigation of the receivership of that railroad that many attempts to merge the St. Paul with other railroad systems had met with refusals from the railroad companies approached. The hearings are being conducted before Commissioner Frederick L. Cox in the offices of the Port of New York Authority at 11 Broadway.

"We inevitably ran up against the same thing," said Mr. Harkness. "Nobody wanted to consolidate with us because they did not believe we had anything worth while to contribute toward the advantage of such a consolidation."

Among the railroads Mr. Harkness named as having been approached with a view to merging with the St. Paul, or, in some cases, with a proposal for an outright purchase of the St. Paul, were the Union Pacific, the Illinois Central, the Nickel Plate, the Southern Pacific, the Kansas City Southern and others. He said he talked with the Van Sweringens with a view to the creation of a great cross-country system through a merger of the Nickel Plate and the St. Paul.

Tells of Terre Haute Deal.

Walter L. Fisher, special counsel for the Interstate Commerce Commission, drew from Mr. Harkness an admission that the acquisition by the St. Paul of the Terre Haute Railroad for $22,000,000 had been due, in all probability, to bad judgment. It had been contended that the purchase of the Terre Haute was a prime factor in bringing about the receivership.

Mr. Fisher, in attempting to bolster up his previously stated opinion that the directors of the St. Paul, for the most part, had done very little directing, questioned the witness about the St. Paul's revenues, expenses and operations, financial and physical. Mr. Harkness testified he had obtained most of his information along these lines from Samuel Fisher, a director, and from H. E. Byram, former President and now one of the three receivers. He admitted that had he known certain facts in connection with electrification of the road, particularly figures upon which comparative costs of operation had been based, he might have formed different opinions.

Mr. Harkness said that as far as he knew no attempt had been made to get suggestions from the holders of the 1925 maturities as to a possible solution of the road's difficulties. He did not know, he testified, that W. K. Sparrow, Vice President of the St. Paul, who made a trip to Europe to locate foreign holders of the securities of the road, had reported having located 90 per cent. of them.

The 1925 maturities, a Government loan amounting to $48,000,000, were said to have been the immediate cause of the railroad's receivership. Mr. Harkness said he had not known until the receivership became imminent that the loan was so arranged that no extension could be obtained.

Was Also a Bank Director.

The witness said that when he was made a director of the St. Paul in 1916 he was also a stockholder in the National City Bank and had a very substantial holding in the New York Trust Company. He told Mr. Fisher he had never noticed a "tendency to elect as St. Paul directors the directors of banks." His familiarity with the St. Paul Railroad, he said, was acquired by "sometimes one trip and sometimes two trips a year over it." He admitted that his attempts to increase its revenues in various ways had been unsuccessful.

The witness denied that, so far as he knew, the Rockefeller interests had dominated the St. Paul.

"Did you know," he was asked by J. J. Hickey, special examiner, "that the interest on $6,000,000 of Terre Haute bonds had been paid before the purchase of that road by the St. Paul?" The answer was no.

Mr. Hastmann testified that the most active members of the Board of Directors, when he became a member, had been William and Percy A. Rockefeller, Donald G. Geddes, Samuel H. Fisher, G. G. Mason and H. E. Byram. He insisted that, while several of the directors were directors of big banking institutions, they had not, in his opinion, been influenced by this fact in their dealings with the St. Paul.

Samuel F. Pryor, business partner of Percy A. Rockefeller and Frederick Adams in the Owenoke Corporation, was a witness again yesterday. He was asked how he reported in his income tax return the $150,000 commission he received for selling the Gary line to the St. Paul.

Mr. Pryor said the $150,000 had been reported as income of the Owenoke Corporation and had not been referred to in his individual return.

John D. Ryan, formerly a St. Paul director and Chairman of the Board of Anaconda Copper Company, will be recalled this morning.

CHICAGO, April 13 (AP).—The reasons why the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railroad acquired the Chicago, Milwaukee & Gary line were recited today in Federal Court by H. E. Byram, former President of the parent system, in the concluding testimony of the effort of receivers of the St. Paul to get court permission for payment of interest in the subsidiary's bonds.

Mr. Byram is now one of three receivers of the road who ask Judge Wilkerson's sanction for payment of $400,000 in interest on securities of the Gary Road and the Chicago, Terre Haute & Southeastern, also acquired by the St. Paul.

The saving in time and money in moving freight past Chicago to Western points from Eastern railroads was cited by Mr. Byram as the major reason why the purchase was the good business venture which the receivers contend it was. The junior bondholders of the road, representing $16,000,000 of the St. Paul securities, say acquisition of the Gary and Terre Haute routes was unwarranted.

After Mr. Byram's testimony the bondholders' counsel obtained adjournment of the case to April 26. When the hearing is resumed, Judge Wilkerson insisted, the litigation must be completely finished.

A petition for foreclosure on the St. Paul made by the principal creditors of the company is now before Judge Wilkerson.

ON TRIAL A WEEK AFTER KILLING TWO

Waiter's Confession Related to the Jury—Defense May Be Emotional Insanity.

Special to The New York Times.

MINEOLA, L. I., April 13.—Karl Kieferle, who confessed that he shot Mrs. Nellie Watson and Henry Kothe in Tuesday in the Three Hundred Club in Freeport, where he was employed as a waiter, was placed on trial in the county court today before County Judge Lewis J. Smith and a jury on an indictment charging him with the murder of Mrs. Watson.

Police Lieutenant Peter Elar of Freeport testified that Kieferle on the day of the shooting told him that he was humiliated because Kothe had discharged him for refusing to care for Kothe's dogs.

Jacob Makofske, who had been employed but one day at the club which Kothe and Mrs. Watson owned, testified that when Kieferle came out of the house after the shooting the latter said to him: "I got the two of them." John Nicolas of Woodhaven, the manager of the club, testified to having heard Kieferle make a similar remark after the shots were fired.

Former District Attorney Franklin A. Coles, who is representing Kieferle, said today that he would ask alienists to examine his client and that the question of whether he would introduce emotional insanity as a defense would rest upon their report.

BRITISH MINERS DELAY COAL PEACE

STRIKE IS NOW POSSIBLE

Catastrophe Feared on May 1 When Government Withdraws Subsidy to the Industry.

By Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, April 13.—The British coal crisis remains as serious as ever. Hopes that at least some of the clouds hovering over the industrial horizon would be cleared away by this afternoon's conference between the coal owners and the coal miners have been crushed.

Leaders of the miners, in their reply this afternoon to the recent report of the Coal Commission, emphatically oppose several of the report's principal clauses, which were drafted by members of the commission as essential to obtaining peace between the owners and the miners and prosperity for the British coal industry.

The mine leaders declared:

No settlement will be acceptable which does not provide at least a wage enabling the miners to get a decent standard of living.

The suggestion that "the minimum percentage" on wages should be settled in the various mining districts and not nationally is not acceptable.

Redistribution of present daily hours of labor over a week of five days instead of six is impracticable.

Thus there is something like a deadlock at the present between the owners and the miners. This would be serious enough itself, but when one bears in mind that only seventeen days intervene until May 1, when the Government will withdraw its subsidy to the coal industry, then the true seriousness of the situation emerges.

If no agreement has been arrived at on that day the withdrawal of the subsidy may provoke the catastrophe of a general strike, with affiliated labor unions supporting the miners.

But there are silver linings to the industrial cloud.

First, the mine leaders today carefully left the door open for further negotiations. Second, the Government is prepared to do its utmost toward persuading the owners and workers to come to an agreement before the fateful May 1.

Regarding the affiliated unions, the silver lining workers today hinted that they are prepared to consider the introduction of multiple shifts as an alternative to longer working hours.

It is considered most likely that Stanley Baldwin and members of his Cabinet will summon the chiefs of the warring coal factions to a conference, probably tomorrow, and seek to pound into their heads the terrible responsibility that will rest upon them if they do not arrive at a solution at their conference before May 1.

Still another silver lining to the threatening industrial cloud is the resistance on both sides not to let things get to the breaking point. It has been apparent all along that the miners, though objecting to portions of the Coal Commission's report, have not wished to go on record as repudiating it entirely. This is taken by optimists as a sign that the conciliatory wing of the miners will prevent the hot-heads from pushing matters to the extreme.

The same is true regarding the coal owners. The extremists among them who are willing to go to the mat with the miners have so far been kept in the background by cooler heads, preferring argument to action.

The disquieting feature in the crisis was an announcement today by "Emperor" Cook, the most fiery hothead among the mine leaders, that he had received a letter from the Secretary of the International Transport Workers Federation, promising all possible support to the miners should the conflict actually break out between them and the mine owners.

Whether a general strike will be possible depends on the action of other big labor unions.

PLANS TREASURY AID TO RELIEVE FARMERS

gram provides for legislative creation of an Advisory Farm Council and a Farm Board or Commission. The board would have broad powers in finding markets for the disposal of surplus crops, with the revolving fund, appropriated from the Treasury, to be used in extending loans to finance the handling and storage of surplus crops.

The so-called corn belt bill of the Senate committee provides for similar bodies in addition to authorizing the imposition of the equalization fee to carry out the purposes for which these bodies are to be created.

The first farm relief program of the Administration was embodied in the cooperative marketing bill which has passed the House. It does not provide for any big appropriation of public money. The farm representatives were not satisfied with this legislation alone, and for some time Secretary Jardine has been conferring with them to see if some common ground of agreement on the surplus farm product problem could be worked out.

Several weeks ago the Administration made a concession to farm sentiment by agreeing to a proposal to create a Federal Farm Board, with behind it an advisory commission. These two bodies would deal with the surplus question.

The more radical farm groups from the West were not satisfied. The Corn Belt Commission called for its equalization fee plan. That far the Administration would not go, but today's developments show that it was willing to concede the establishment of a revolving fund from the United States Treasury to finance the marketing of surplus production and overcome low prices.

It is assumed that the Jardine plan has the approval of President Coolidge.

DANZIGER INDICTED AS GRAFTER IN MILK

Accused of Taking $7,000, Part Payment of Nickel a Can on "Bootlegged" Fluid.

NET TIGHTENS ON OFFICIAL

A Former Health Officer Linked to Graft by Accusations of Danziger's Secretary.

Harry A. Danziger of Middle Village, Queens, was indicted yesterday by the Bronx Grand Jury on a charge of extortion. He was arrested last month after he received $7,000 from milk dealers, according to the indictment. His story to the authorities led to an investigation of graft in connection with the bootlegging of milk and cream into this city for the past two years.

Danziger, who is out on $10,000 bail on a short affidavit charging extortion, will be freed on that complaint tomorrow and rearrested on the indictment.

The specific charge against Danziger is that he received a check for $7,000 from members of the Individual Milk Dealers' Association in Ebling's Casino, 156th Street and St. Ann's Avenue, on March 17. The check was part payment of $14,000, which the milk dealers agreed to pay Danziger, it was said, amounting to 5 cents a can on all loose milk sold in the Bronx.

Seven Dealers Testified.

The indictment was returned yesterday before Supreme Court Justice Aaron J. Levy, after Prosecutor McGeehan asked the Grand Jury to excuse former Commissioner of Accounts David Hirshfield, who carried out a milk investigation under Mayor Hylan, and who said he had nothing to add to his report. The bootleg milk which Danziger is alleged to have permitted to be sold here did not undergo the inspection required by law. Seven milk dealers testified before the Grand Jury.

Important information linking a former Health Department official to the graft in the bootlegging of milk has been obtained by District Attorney Newcombe and Peter Daly, his assistant in Queens, it was learned yesterday. This information bears on the story of Danziger concerning the man with whom he shared the proceeds of the income derived from permitting milk and cream to come into the city from unauthorized sources.

Helen Sprey, secretary to Danziger, who accompanied him on visits to Queens, is understood to have furnished extremely important information to the authorities.

Young Women Questioned.

It became known yesterday that one of the two former Health Department officials whose acts are being investigated made places for several young women in the department and gave them themporary licenses. One received a license to inspect beauty parlors. It was rumored that as many as twelve young women were placed in the Health Department by that official. Three of these young women have been questioned by the Queens authorities.

The second former employe whose career is being scrutinized, it was learned, was financially interested in a milk distributing concern while he was in the department.

Mrs. Salvatore Cocuzza of 176 Newton Street, Newark, with her 7-months-old infant in her arms, left her home late yesterday to shop for the evening meal. As she went out she called to Joseph Cocuzza, 12 years old, to watch over his sister Catherine 4, who was lying in a crib.

A short time after the mother left the boy ran into the street. He was white and obviously frightened. As he ran around the corner he shouted to neighbors:

"I shot my sister. She's bleeding. She don't talk. Get a doctor."

Edward Picora of 174 Newton Street and Thomas Catalda of 178 Newton Street entered the house. They found the little girl in the crib with a bullet wound near the heart. They carried her to a near-by drug store, and in Newark Memorial Hospital Catherine was pronounced dead.

The police found a pistol in a closet in the Cocuzza home. One shell had been exploded.

Joseph was found at dinner time in the home of Mrs. Lewis D. Chamberlin at 98 Quitman Street, where he had been brought by Mrs. Chamberlin's son Floyd, 7 years old, who had met him in the street and invited him in when Joseph said he was hungry. Mrs. Chamberlin, who had read the story of the shooting, recognized Joseph and telephoned Police Headquarters.

"I was playing with my father's pistol," Joseph explained to the police. "Some of the boys wouldn't believe it was a real pistol, and I pulled the trigger to prove it. It went off and hit my sister; then I got scared and went away."

Ernest Friedrich Wilhelm Jaeckh of Berlin, Germany, and Miss Martha Rubens, also of that city, were married yesterday at the Municipal Building by Deputy City Clerk J. J. McCormack.

In applying for their marriage license, Mr. Jaeckh, who is 51 years old, said he was President of the University of Political Science in Berlin, and that this was his second marriage. In papers attached to the affidavit it was shown that he had been divorced by Bertha Klein Jaeckh in Berlin last November.

The bride is 34 years old. She was born in Breslau, Silesia, and is the daughter of Julius Rubens.

TOMORROW IS LAST DAY OF STATE TAX RETURNS

J. J. Donovan Warns He Has No Power to Accept Excuses and That Penalties Are Positive.

The time limit for filing State income tax returns ends tomorrow. This warning was issued yesterday by James J. Donovan, director of the New York office of the State Tax Commission. The State exemptions are the same as the Federal, namely, $3,500 for married persons, with $400 for each child, and $1,500 for single taxpayers. Twenty-five per cent. should be deducted from the net tax due.

"Thursday," said Mr. Donovan, "the curtain goes down on our collection period. Those who find themselves somewhat startled the next day by finding that they overlooked this important act must remember that the law is very positive in its penalty provisions: We have no power to accept excuses of neglect, absence from the city or engagements in other activities as authorizing the waiving of these penalties.

"Our auditors at our offices, 220 West Fortieth Street and Room 200, Municipal Building, Manhattan, and at the Bergen Building, Tremont and Arthur Avenues, the Bronx, expect a full day tomorrow. Those whose returns are held up for valid reasons promptly communicate with our district offices and secure the necessary extensions of time."

DEMAND $8,547,935 BACK FROM WARD

Stockholders of General Baking Co. Say Payments to Him Were Unauthorized.

STOCK DEAL IS CHARGED

Ward Interest Liquidated Its A Shares Before Market Went Off, Committee Asserts.

FEAR BANKING CONTROL

Board Action Would Give Chase Securities Dominant Place, They Declare.

Demand that William B. Ward return $8,547,935 to the General Baking Corporation was made yesterday by a committee of stockholders, headed by William Deininger, former Chairman of the board of the corporation.

The action is an aftermath of the failure of the Ward interests to go through with the formation of a $2,000,000,000 nationwide consolidation of baking companies. Plans for the organization of this corporation were abandoned recently in a consent decree, following objections by Federal authorities.

The stockholders committee also seeks to prevent the consummation of a tentative agreement under which the Chase Securities Corporation, bankers for the Ward interests, would acquire control of the General Baking Corporation.

Demand Through Counsel.

The demands were made in the following letter from Rabenold & Scribner of 61 Broadway, counsel to the stockholders' committee:

New York City, April 13, 1926.

To the Board of Directors of General Baking Corporation:

On behalf of the Committee for the Stockholders of General Baking Corporation we hereby request:

1. That you rescind the resolution of April 6, 1926, reading as follows: "Resolved, That the Board of Directors by unanimous vote ratify the purchase by the officers and directors of 119,900 shares of the Class A stock of this corporation, which took place during January and February."

2. That you procure the resignations of the individuals who participated in the disbursement of $8,547,935.90 in the alleged purchase of the foregoing stock.

3. That you take steps to recover this money.

4. That you reject the tentative agreement with Chase Securities Corporation, as submitted by Acting Chairman Helms and incorporated in the minutes of March 30, 1926, or any similar agreement.

May we have an early response?

For the Committee,
RABENOLD & SCRIBNER,
Counsel.

Payments to Ward Company.

The committee charges that on Jan. 19, "at the request of W. B. Ward, and without submission of the matter to the directors, checks of General Baking Corporation for a total of $5,005,000 payable to the Ward Securities Corporation, were signed by the Treasurer and Vice President of the General Baking Corporation (J. W. Rumbough and R. E. Peterson), and delivered to the Ward Securities Corporation. On Jan. 23, further checks for $2,679,855 payable to the Ward Securities Corporation were signed by the same officers and delivered to Ward Securities Corporation.

"We are informed that against these payments, amounting to $7,684,505, the Treasurer received a 'refund' of $26,-219.10 and 106,900 shares of General Baking Corporation A stock."

"On Feb. 9 and 15," it is added, "there were additional payments of $889,650 from the corporation's funds for 13,000 more shares of its A stock, at least 10,000 shares of which were acquired through Ward Securities Corporation."

The committee further charges that "the transactions were not submitted for action by the Board of Directors until last Tuesday, April 6, when a resolution to ratify them was adopted. The result of these transactions for the corporation was to deplete its cash by $8,547,935.90. This money has not been restored.

"The result for W. B. Ward was to enable him and his personal corporation to liquidate what they had left from their dealings in A stock of General Baking Corporation at an average of 71⅝, after which the stock resumed its downward course in the market, now selling around 50. The legality of these transactions, the consequences for them, and the steps to be taken by the stockholders, are being investigated by counsel for the committee."

Control for Chase Securities.

While the attorneys for the committee would not comment upon the tentative agreement entered into with the Chase Securities Corporation, it was said in responsible quarters yesterday that if the agreement were carried out it would give the bankers "25 per cent. of the voting stock" or "working control."

At the time of the formation of the General Baking Corporation, it was said, W. B. Ward acquired a block of 5,000,000 shares of the company's Class B stock as "compensation for certain agreements or contracts." Of this stock, it was added, Ward turned 3,750,000 shares back into the treasury of the company and continued to hold 1,250,000 shares. Later it was alleged that Ward turned back an additional 1,000,000 shares in exchange for 70,000 shares of the corporation's Class A stock.

This block of 70,000 shares of General Baking Corporation Class A stock, it was said, was deposited by Ward with the Chase Securities Corporation, but whether as collateral for a loan or in outright sale was not made known. Rumors of this transaction were circulated in the financial district at the time it was said to have occurred, but executives of the Chase Securities Corporation denied that any stock had been taken over from Ward.

Tell of Exchange Option.

It was further alleged by the Stockholders' Committee that Paul H. Helms, President of the corporation, at a recent meeting of the Board of Directors proposed an agreement under which the Chase Securities Corporation would be permitted to exchange 7,000 shares of the General Baking Corporation Class A stock, which it was said to have acquired from Ward, for 100,000 shares of the company's Class B stock, and at the same time the Chase Corporation was to be given control of the financial supervision of General Baking. In addition the Chase Corporation was to have the option of exchanging additional blocks of 7,000 shares of the Class A stock for 100,000 shares of Class B until the entire 70,000 shares said to have been acquired from Ward was exchanged, within a year, for the 1,000,000 shares of Class B stock, which Ward originally deposited with General Baking in exchange for the 70,000 shares of A stock.

This agreement, it was said, was presented to the Board of Directors subject to the approval of the attorneys of the Chase Corporation. The matter came up for discussion at the General Baking directors' meeting on April 6, but was held over for a future meeting, as the attorneys of the Chase Corporation had not prepared the tentative contract.

The committee, which represents, according to its letter, stockholdings exceeding $9,000,000, is composed of William Deininger, President of General Baking Company, the operating company, for eight years, and Chairman of the board of the General Baking Corporation until his resignation, on March 23; Louis J. Kolb, a director and member of the Executive Committee of General Baking Company until General Baking Corporation was formed, Vice President of the Pennsylvania Sugar Company and a director in Real Estate Trust Company and Guarantee Company of Philadelphia; John U. Weber, a former director of General Baking Company, President of the Liberty Trust Company, Newark, and Vice President of the American National Bank and the City Mortgage, Title and Guaranty Company of Newark.

Ward on Way Home.

William B. Ward left Ashville, N. C., yesterday, and is expected to arrive in this city this morning when he will issue a statement in answer to the committee's charges. Ralph S. Kent, attorney for Mr. Ward, made the following statement yesterday:

"I have just seen a printed letter to the stockholders of the General Baking Corporation, under date of April 12, 1926, purporting to be signed by a self-appointed committee of stockholders and asking for proxies. The statement is so framed as to indicate a definite design to create by inference and innuendo a false impression among the stockholders. The statement indicates that Mr. Deininger, one of the signers, was Chairman of the Board of Directors at the time the transaction took place, and I am safe in saying that he knew all about it and gave his consent to it. I know there was no profit in it.

"Mr. Ward at present is on his way to New York City and will arrive here tomorrow and will personally prepare a statement of his own. So far as I can see the stockholders should sit tight, because J. Fred Frazier, for a long time the operating head of the General Baking Company, is now Chairman of the board, and this effort of Mr. Deininger appears to be only an attempt to gain control of this prosperous company."

Government Prevented Plan.

The Ward Food Products Corporation, the formation of which was prevented as a result of Government action, was incorporated in Maryland on Jan. 30, 1926, with a capital of 20,000,000 shares, or nominally $2,000,000,000. The Government filed suit enjoining the formation of the company, and in this action the General Baking Corporation, General Baking Company, Ward Baking Corporation, Ward Baking Company, Continental Baking Corporation, United Bakeries Corporation, William B. Ward, Howard B. Ward, William Deininger, Paul H. Helms, J. W. Rumbough, R. E. Peterson, George C. Barber and George B. Smith were named as defendants.

As a result of a consent decree entered into between the various defendants and the Government, the proposed formation of the Ward Food Products Corporation was dropped and the securities which were issued in connection with the proposed consolidation have since been returned.

The filing of the charter of the Ward Food Products Corporation attracted considerable attention at the time because of the "welfare fund" provided for in the certificate of incorporation which gave the directors authority to provide funds at their discretion for the establishment of hospitals and child welfare purposes. The charter gave the management unusually wide powers in dealing in, buying and selling securities and "to aid in any manner any corporation or firm or individual of which this corporation was a creditor."

THREE PLEAD GUILTY AS BROOKLYN ROBBERS

Three Others Deny Guilt and Will Stand Trial—Lawyer Says Police Beat One.

The arraignment for pleading yesterday before Judge W. Bernard Vause in the Kings County Court of six Brooklyn men arrested early Sunday morning on suspicion of having had a part in several robberies in Brooklyn led to a charge by Samuel Lisbowitz, a lawyer, that one prisoner had been beaten by the police.

The Grand Jury indicted three of the men for robbery in the first degree and each pleaded guilty. They were John O'Donnell, 319 Snediker Avenue; John A. Bates, 114 Nostrand Avenue, and Julius Brand, 1,774 East Seventh Street. Not guilty pleas were entered by Joseph Chalowsky, 720 Ellery Street, and John Cheffo, 461 De Kalb Avenue. Frank Dambrosio, 124 Throop Avenue, pleaded not guilty to violating the Sullivan law. The first two were held in $10,000 bail each and Dambrosio in $10,000.

Lisbowitz appeared for Dambrosio. He asked to have inserted in the record the account of the physical condition of his client. He said the defendant had been questioned by detectives for several hours and that when he left Police Headquarters he had a broken nose. His attorney alleged that a pistol had been "planted" on his client so he could be held with the other prisoners.

The seventh man arrested, Bernard Schiff, of 121 Wallabout Street, was held in $15,000 bail by Magistrate Reynolds in the Gates Avenue Court, for examination on Thursday. He was charged with assault, robbery and violation of the Sullivan law.

The Living Room Rug

THE mounting of a picture may be rich, but if too lavish, it will detract from the major theme.

So it is often advisable to employ a rug for a room, which simply mounts the picture provided by the furnishings. For this purpose we know of nothing more acceptable than a two-tone plain or figured rug.

Chenille Rugs

produced on American looms are deservedly in high favor for Living Rooms. Rugs with line borders, perfectly plain, or in two-tones may be had in any standard shade and grade.

They can be supplied in seamless widths up to 30 feet, thus covering well the floor of the average Living Room.

DISTRIBUTOR WANTED

FOR ELECTRIC REFRIGERATION

One of the largest and most firmly established manufacturers of electric refrigeration has available a distributor opportunity in New York.

An organization already established and prepared to handle electric refrigeration on a large scale is desired, or a capable individual with the financial resources to build such an organization.

Electric refrigeration is one of the country's fastest growing industries and offers large financial rewards. Sales for 1926 are conservatively estimated as five times greater than in 1925.

This is a big proposition. It will require a substantial investment. The product has proven itself in thousands of homes. It is being backed by an advertising campaign in national magazines and local newspapers. Every cooperation is assured the concern or individual chosen.

FICTION is the magic art of giving life to inanimate things and illuminating dark facts with imagination

Americans who go to London always feel at first that it is hardly more than a series of illustrations to Dickens' novels. And the people are his creatures. The Tower and The Abbey remind them of novels they have read. They do not see mighty historical personages like Sir Thomas More and Lord Bacon and John Bright haunting the streets. They see Micawber, Pecksniff, Pickwick, Peggotty, Barkis, Sam Weller, Becky Sharp.

In Paris the towers of Notre Dame remind them of Victor Hugo's Hunchback. On the Waterloo battlefield they seek the sunken road which never was, according to some historians, but which can never be forgotten. They look for the characters of Balzac, De Maupassant and Eugène Sue.

In Florence they flock to the place where the heroine of Dante's three-volume novel in terza rima walked in fiction as she never walked in fact.

In New York the Jumel mansion was almost ignored until "The Golden Ladder," published in The Red Book Magazine, made Betty Jumel live. Since then throngs have flocked there. And the little hut where Edgar Allan Poe wrote immortal fiction is a shrine.

Dry Act Causes Drunkenness and Immorality Among Youth, Committee Is Told

tionnaires covering other phases of dry law enforcement will be addressed to various persons concerned.

SHIRK SUBMITS FIGURES.

Mr. Shirk's testimony was largely based on his pamphlet dealing with prohibition conditions from 1914 to 1925 and published by the Moderation League of New York, of which Austen G. Fox is the Chairman and Mr. Shirk the Research Director.

"My attention was first called to this matter by figures which Judge Gimmill of Chicago compiled some years ago and which were published in THE NEW YORK TIMES," said Mr. Shirk. "They showed a very considerable decrease in arrests for drunkenness during the war, culminating in the lowest point in 1920, the first year of constitutional prohibition.

"Shortly after that the World League Against Alcoholism compiled similar figures, but more of them, and two years ago the Judiciary Committee of the House of Representatives held some hearings on beer bills, and at those hearings Wayne B. Wheeler made an estimate that there had been, I think, 500,000 less arrests for drunkenness per annum subsequent to constitutional prohibition than there had been before that time.

"One of the members of the House Judiciary Committee pressed him for the facts on which he based that estimate, and Mr. Wheeler submitted figures for, I think, about one hundred cities over a period of years, those figures being the ones that had been compiled by the World League Against Alcoholism.

"After I read the proceedings of those hearings it seemed to me that Mr. Wheeler had used a very misleading basis on which to make his estimate, and I thought the matter ought to be investigated and a more comprehensive survey made."

Mr. Shirk, continuing, said there was no question but that there was a large decrease in the number of cases of alcoholism between the years 1917 and 1920, which, he said, undoubtedly was due to a greater respect for law in that particular period.

Explains Method of Survey.

Next Mr. Shirk explained how the survey had been made, and submitted a sample questionnaire, which was submitted to the proper authorities in about 300 American cities and towns. He gave a sample questionnaire and the answer to it by the Chief of Police of Atlanta, Ga. The answer gave the number of arrests for intoxication in Atlanta as 2,995 in 1914, with a gradual increase in 1915 and 1916 and then in 1917 a sudden drop to 2,266, and in 1918 to 2,196. Then the number began to increase, being 3,136 in 1919, and 4,941 in 1921, while in 1923 the total was 7,003 and in 1924 it was 7,975. There were no figures for 1920.

Replies from other cities, Mr. Shirk said, would be submitted in authenticated form for the record. He explained that in addition to the 300 cities referred to, a subsequent questionnaire was submitted to the authorities of every city in the United States of a population more than 5,000. The answers covered 355 places for the period 1914 to 1924, and 457 places for the period 1920 to 1924.

"As you know," Mr. Shirk continued, "1920 was the first year of constitutional prohibition, and the low point was reached that year. In 350 places in 1914 there were 506,736 arrests for drunkenness, in 1915 about the same number, and in 1916, which was the high point, the number was 539,176. Then it began to drop, and continued going down until 1920, when the figure was 226,070. Then the rise immediately started and it increased each year after that and reached in 1924 the number 498,752.

In the answers from 457 places for the years 1920 to 1924, inclusive, the arrests in 1920 totaled 258,974, and in 1924 this was more than doubled, the total being 565,026 arrests. The increase in former dry States, he added, was greater than in the States that were dry before the Eighteenth Amendment was ratified.

"Have you any figures," Senator Harreld asked, "to show whether or not the violations of other laws increased or diminished in the same proportion during these years?"

"I have not gone into that at all," replied Mr. Shirk. "That is, I mean general crime or general arrests."

Senator Harreld—Is not the outstanding fact illustrated that as respect for law and order diminishes crime becomes more rampant, and as increases crime becomes less? Is not that fact illustrated by your figures? A.—I suppose that is true.

Q.—This applies as well as to violations of other laws? A.—I take it that is true, that as respect for law decreases crime increases.

Q.—Yes, crime increases as respect for law decreases. That is all right. I beg pardon for interrupting you. A.—That is all right.

"I notice in my own State," said Senator Harreld, "you have taken the towns of Lawton and Guthrie. Why did you select these two?"

"We sent to the Police Departments of all cities over 5,000," Mr. Shirk answered, "and those were the only two in Oklahoma to reply."

Arrests of Drunken Drivers.

"In addition to arrests for drunkenness," Mr. Shirk continued, "I went into the question of drunken drivers and sent a questionnaire to the Police Departments of the principal cities. There were about 100 cities, as I recall it now, cities of over 100,000 population.

"By the way, before I go on that: I forgot to say in the matter of general arrests for drunkenness that all the figures for arrest for intoxication are published in Schedule A of the survey by years and in detail. I will also say that they are practically the same as those published in the anti-saloon year book of 1925. Of course, we have more figures than they have, but the ones that are duplicates are practically the same.

"Now to return to drunken drivers. We found after we had got the figures over a period of years that we could take an average for twenty places, and there the arrests of drunken drivers increased from 1,322 in the year 1919, the last year, to 6,006 in the year 1924, an increase of 354 per cent.

"Meanwhile the number of motor vehicles in the United States had increased only 132 per cent. The number of drunken drivers in those twenty places had therefore increased 222 per cent., faster than the number of automobiles increased in the United States.

"In New York City the arrests of drunken drivers from 1916 to 1919 averaged 161. In 1920, the first dry year, they rose to 334, dropped slightly in 1921, and then rose again to 944 in 1924, resulting in an increase of 484 per cent. above the pre-prohibition level.

"Chicago shows substantially the same result. The arrests for drunken driving there were 282 in 1919 and 1,523 in 1924, an increase of 440 per cent.

"Washington shows 53 arrests for drunken driving in 1918, and by 1924 had reached 616, an increase of 1,062 per cent.

2,534 Per Cent. Rise in Milwaukee.

"In Milwaukee the arrests for drunken driving were 10 in 1918 and 11 in 1919, but they reached 292 in 1924, which represents a rise of 2,534 per cent.

"Other cities show increases in 1924 over 1919, the last wet year, as follows: In Boston, 364 per cent.; in Scranton, 578 per cent.; in Providence, 244 per cent.; in Atlanta, 500 per cent.; in Worcester, Mass., 448 per cent.; in New Haven, 712 per cent.; in Hartford, 378 per cent.; in Minneapolis, 916 per cent.

"I was able to obtain the figures for the entire State of Massachusetts, and in that State the number of automobiles increased steadily but uniformly, as in the United States as a whole. The number of licenses revoked for drunken driving increased slightly and uniformly until the Volstead act became effective, when they suddenly jumped outrageously.

"Reducing the figures to percentages, the number of automobiles increased 161 per cent. from 1919 to 1924, while the revocations for drunken driving increased 693 per cent. during the same period. In other words, the revocations for drunken driving in Massachusetts increased 532 per cent. more than the registration of automobiles during the same period."

DRINKING AMONG CHILDREN.

Next Mr. Shirk took up the question of drunkenness among children and young people. He pointed out that about a month before the survey of the Moderation League was released, which was in November, 1925, the Federal Council of Churches released its report on prohibition.

"It appeared from that report," said Mr. Shirk, "that they had sent questionnaires to 2,700 social workers, and a majority of the replies received stated that those social workers observed more drinking among young people as compared with pre-prohibition times. Recently Liberty, published in Chicago, sent a questionnaire to ninety correspondents in various parts of the country, and the replies were almost unanimous that young people are drinking more than ever."

Reading, Pa., Jan. 27, 1926.

Dear Sir:

Your letter of Jan. 23 relative to information and statistics on arrests of minors and young people on charges of drunkenness at hand.

We keep no records of arrests for intoxication according to ages and I regret that I cannot furnish you with statistical records.

However, I will say that there is more drinking of intoxicants by minors today than ever before. This drinking by minors and young folks is carried on at private dances and parties, where it is usually brought in hip flasks. I also know of instances of mere schoolboys having been taken from the schoolroom intoxicated.

Very truly yours,
HARRY H. STROBE JR.,
Chief of Police.

Intoxication Arrests in Capital.

Continuing, Mr. Shirk said:

"I found that there are very few places that classify arrests by ages, so there is very little on the subject statistically. However, here in Washington they do classify by ages. In Washington the arrests of persons under 22 years for intoxication averaged 44 a year for the four pre-prohibition years 1914 to 1917. In 1918 the figure rose to 73 and by 1924 reached 297, an increase of 575 per cent. above the pre-prohibition level, an increase which is far greater than drunkenness among all ages.

Colonel Codman, counsel for wet organizations, asked "Have you some figures down to 1925, in certain cities?"

"I have," replied Mr. Shirk, "and think this is more or less in answer to the challenge which Mr. Wayne B. Wheeler made recently. He was quoted as follows:

"'We request the proponents of the plan to point to any place in our country where their system has worked in the interests of true temperance and effective enforcement.'"

Colonel Codman—What plan does he refer to there? A.—I think he refers to beer and wine under a dispensary system. Then he goes on to say: "The experiment was tried and discarded before the Eighteenth Amendment was adopted."

Q.—What figures have you got on that? A.—I have a graph showing arrests for intoxication in Atlanta, Ga., commencing 1902 and ending 1925.

"You will notice," explained Mr. Shirk, "that there was a rise in drunkenness going on from 1902 to 1907, not uniform, but a general increase.

"Now commencing Jan. 1, 1908, Georgia got what was then called prohibition, State-wide prohibition. Under that law the saloon was closed, but not the licensed saloon. The law prohibited manufacture, sale and keeping liquor on hand at places of business. It did not prohibit importation into the State for personal use. Such importation was lawful in unlimited quantities until May 1, 1916, during the World War, when the amount was limited as follows:

"'Within any thirty consecutive days not more than two quarts of spirits, six gallons of beer or one gallon of wine.' This continued until March, 1917, when a bone-dry State statute went into effect.

Figures Rise With Bone Dryness.

"Now under that so-called prohibition law of 1907, commencing Jan. 1, 1908, you will notice that in 1908 there was a very considerable drop in drunkenness. Another large drop in 1909, and after that it stayed down practically level, running along with a very slight tendency to increase, and went some lower in 1917, which was the first year of bone dryness; about the same in 1918, and then started up at a very rapid rate, until the high point was reached in 1924, and in 1925 it sagged very slightly.

"So that we see that from Jan. 1, 1908, until bone dryness went into effect, drunkenness went down and stayed down, and as soon as they got bone dryness, or practically as soon as they got bone dryness, it went up very fast."

"To what do you attribute that?" Senator Harreld asked.

"Every one is entitled to their own views," Mr. Shirk replied, "but I feel very strongly that the reason for that is this: People want temperance and people will go a long way to get it. That is to say, people will submit to restrictions and all that sort of thing in the interest of temperance, and you get the so-called better element to support a law like that. But as soon as you close it down entirely you lose a large element of that support, and everybody begins breaking the law."

"Do you not think," Senator Harreld asked, "these two things are partly responsible for it: That perhaps there was a letting down of strict enforcement by the State authorities when the Federal law was passed, and, further, that the general inclination to have disrespect for the law has increased during this period of which you have been speaking?"

"In the first place," Mr. Shirk replied, "arrests for intoxication in Atlanta started upward very violently in 1918, which was some time before we got bone dryness nationally. You will see it started up right after 1918. That was the low point; in 1919 it went up and so on. It may be that the matter you state has some influence, but I have the strong feeling that under the old system they had the support of the better element almost to a man, and I feel that they have lost a large part of that."

"Do you think the statement in this morning's paper then, that the wet forces are recruited now by the criminal element and by an uppercrust of the better element, as combined against a middle class—somebody stated it that way—is true; you think that is true, do you?"

Sees Temperance Forces Divided.

"I would hardly say that, but do think that what you call the uppercrust under a restrictive law stand more or less with what we call the prohibition element and back the law. But as soon as you impose bone dryness, all that element begins to break the law as they are doing today.

Senator Harreld—You think bone dryness has divided those who favor temperance? A.—It has put them in the other camp among the law-breakers. Naturally they do not feel so badly toward the criminal classes as before.

Q.—I do not want to intimate that I agree with you, but wanted to see what you had to say about it. A.—Some time ago I wrote a letter to the Governor of the Federal Reserve Bank in Atlanta, about the time I was making this chart. You will recollect that he not so long ago wrote a letter to Mr. Upshaw in reply to some letters which Mr. Upshaw sent to Georgia requesting testimonials for prohibition, and Mr. Wellborn's letter was not a testimonial, and the first we heard of it was when some one else released a copy to the press.

"I wrote to Mr. Wellborn making an inquiry about conditions in Atlanta, and he wrote me that he had only lived there eleven years, and therefore could not answer my question, but had referred my letter to an old friend of his who was a Georgia prohibitionist and shortly thereafter I received a letter from his friend," Mr. Shirk continued. "That letter, written by Martin F. Amorous of Marietta, Ga., is dated March 29, this year. After stating he replied as a result of the request made of Mr. Wellborn, Mr. Amorous gave a history of the prohibition movement in Georgia for the last forty-eight years."

Mr. Shirk quoted Mr. Amorous as follows:

"Several years before the passage of the Eighteenth Amendment liquor, wines and beer could and was brought into the State by any and all individuals that wished to use it, from Florida, Kentucky and other States. No increase in illicit stills or bootlegging everybody was satisfied to obey the local State law. Our jails were still empty—no increase in crime. While not strictly total abstinence, temperance prevailed to a very large extent. Arrests for drunkenness were low in number.

"No increase in illicit stills or bootleggers. Following this period came the enactment of the Eighteenth Amendment which I personally favored and would not change today.

"Then the Volstead act by Congress. Following its passage a host of bootleggers came into active life, illicit distilleries were erected in every county in Georgia—in sections never dramed of before. Minors, male and female, who never before, in all walks of society, were permitted to buy or possess liquor, became regular customers for 'stiller and bootlegger. Liquor that cost 50 cents a gallon to produce could be sold readily for $8 and $10.

"Drunkenness, disorder and crime have largely increased in country and city. My solution for better conditions is, repeal the Volstead act. Let each State control and enlist the active aid of clergy and church by a personal total abstinence pledge of all individuals. The clergy have abandoned the moral control of the people to the State."

CONDITIONS IN BIRMINGHAM.

"The records also show," continued Mr. Shirk, referring to Birmingham, Ala., "that prior to 1915 Alabama had a county local option law, and that a county voting wet could elect either the dispensary or license system. Then in 1915 they got a restrictive law prohibiting manufacture and sale of liquor, but permitting the limited importation for personal use (within periods of fifteen days) of two quarts of spirits, five gallons of beer or two gallons of wine. Home made wine was permitted, and this was the law until it was superseded by national prohibition.

"The arrests for drunkenness fell sharply as soon as they got this State restrictive law, or semi-prohibition; went way down in 1916, and stayed down, the same as in Atlanta. Then the Volstead act became effective, and drunkenness stayed low in 1920, but after that started up very sharply, and is still going up very rapidly.

"They had also a State restrictive law in Virginia permitting certain quantities to be imported each month. The low point of intoxication was reached in 1919, and immediately as soon as they got Federal bone dryness it went up. The high point was 1923. It sagged off a little in 1924, and the 1925 figure I did not have when I made the graph. As a matter of fact, I got it since, and it sags a little in 1925. But the level is still very much above what it was under State restriction."

"Have you made any investigations," asked Colonel Codman, "in regard to the widely spread claim of the Prohibitionists, at the time when the amendment was had, that some 95 per cent. of the United States area was under prohibition, and 68 per cent. of the population lived under prohibition? Have you got any figures on that, and any explanation of it?"

"I have," Mr. Shirk answered. "I had heard so often the argument that the Volstead act was merely an extension to a small part of the United States of what already existed in the balance of the United States, presumably by the will of that balance, that I determined to look into it. I was a little doubtful about its truth or substantial truth. I heard that so often, especially from persons very much interested in prohibition—those who had connections with prohibition organizations and so on—that I looked into it and I found that in the Anti-Saloon League Year Books and other sources of that character it was stated that 95 per cent. of the area of the United States was dry and 68 per cent. of the population lived in dry territory.

"That argument was made on the theory that people who had lived under dry laws wanted those or they would not have had them. So I determined to find out what the various State laws were at the time the Eighteenth Amendment was ratified. I could not find anybody that knew. I wrote around to various organizations, but no one knew.

"I decided I would look up the law myself, which I did. I looked up the State law as of Jan. 16, 1919, the date the Eighteenth Amendment was ratified. I selected that date because of various States that had various laws at that time that were supposed to indicate the will of the people in those States. At least that was the theory on which the argument was based.

"I divided the States into two groups—those in which you could not get a drink without breaking the law and those States in which you could. I got a result on such a classification very different from the other result I spoke of.

Says Maine Was Never Dry.

"Maine, for instance, is the old historic prohibition State. We have heard that so often that everybody takes it for granted. As a matter of fact, Maine never had prohibition if we use the word in the sense in which we now understand it. I think Maine has had restricted liquor law since 1850, but it was not until about 1884 that Maine put a clause in her Constitution prohibiting manufacture of intoxicating liquors, not including cider, and sale and keeping for sale of intoxicating liquors.

"So that in Maine, under the State law, it was always lawful to send down to Boston and get anything you wanted, from one-half pint to a carload. You were not breaking any law in doing it. Of course, that took care of the city folks and the town people. The Constitution expressly excepted cider, and that took care of the farmer.

"Maine, as you know, is an apple State. It gets very cold up there in Winter, and they tell me the farmers put the barrel of hard cider out by the woodshed and it freezes, but alcohol doesn't freeze, as you all know, because you put it into your radiator, and along about the first of February you get a nice big auger, go after the barrel, drill a hole into it, and they tell me there are about five gallons of stuff inside that is awful. Maine never had any trouble about prohibition, even though called a prohibition State.

"That continued to be the State law of Maine until we got national prohibition. I say the State law, however; the Reed amendment, which you know about, being a Federal statute, went into effect the middle of 1917. That was an exercise by Congress of its power, under the clause with reference to interstate commerce, and that prohibited shipments of liquor into any State where manufacture or sale was prohibited by the State law. So I suppose it is true the Federal law cut that off as of 1917. But that was a Federal law, thrust upon Maine from the outside."

"In other words, Maine took no action either for or against that, and the fact of its passage is no evidence either that Maine did or did not want it. We have to look at the State law to find out what the people wanted.

"I will say incidentally that as late as 1910 Maine held an election on the question of repealing that restrictive law which they had, the rather weak prohibition law, and the repealer failed to pass by the slender margin of under 800 votes.

"I make that statement on the authority of the Anti-Saloon League year book. I have not verified it otherwise. But I merely mention Maine to show that this idea that the States were dry of their own volition, and, therefore, wanted the bone-dryness of the Volstead act, is an argument which to my mind is not a very good one.

Twelve States Had Bone-Dry Laws.

"I found that on Jan. 16, 1919, when the Eighteenth Amendment was ratified, there were twelve States which had bone-dry State laws.

"Those States contained 11.8 per cent. of the population as of the 1920 census. That means that in these States, to put it baldly, you could not get drunk without breaking the State law. I think it is also true that all those States acquired their bone-dryness during the period of the World War."

"There were, though, a good many of the other States which you designate as solid black that had laws restricting the sale somewhat similar to Maine," interrupted Senator Harreld.

"Oh, yes," Mr. Shirk replied, "and some of them were quite severe."

"Take my State, Oklahoma, for instance," said Mr. Harreld. "At that time it had absolute prohibition, except the dispensary system. I see you have got it listed as a black State. But under the present law under which liquor could be sold only on prescription. That is exactly what could be done in Oklahoma before.

"I did not quite get that, Senator," said Mr. Shirk.

"I say," repeated Senator Harreld, "under the present national prohibition law whisky can be sold under doctors' prescriptions, and that was exactly the situation that existed in Oklahoma, and yet you have listed it as a black State."

"Well," replied Mr. Shirk, "I say in my notes here under Oklahoma: 'The original Constitution of Oklahoma prohibits the manufacture, sale, gift or furnishing in part of the State, namely Indian territory, Osage Indian Reservation and other Indian reservations. This same provision was later extended to the entire State by the voters. As a record of that in State vs. Hooker, 22 Oklahoma 712. In 1917 the Legislature made it a crime to possess alcoholic beverages received from a carrier. That is the law of 1917, Chapter 186.'"

Still Differ on Oklahoma.

"Prior to that law and contemporaneous with it, the only way you could get whisky legally in Oklahoma was by a doctor's prescription," said Senator Harreld, "just like you can now under the national prohibition law. So I think you have Oklahoma classified wrong."

"I think you will find," said Mr. Shirk, "that you could bring it in yourself. I have here in my notes that after this law of 1917 it was lawful personally to bring alcoholics into the State for personal use."

"Except in Indian territory or in the reservations," said Senator Harreld.

"Yes. And my authority are the cases of Crossland vs. State, 176 Pacific 944, and Baldridge vs. State, 194 Pacific 217."

Senator Harreld—Oklahoma is noted as having been born dry, because it is the only State in the Union that has a constitutional provision limiting even the transporting and possession of liquor except on doctors' certificates. A.—I think you will find, Senator, that those two statutes hold you could bring it in.

Q.—You could in certain parts of the State, but not into the Indian territory part. A.—I think that is true. You could bring it in to other parts of the State for personal use, but could not ship it in.

Q.—No, that law of 1917 stopped that. A.—So Oklahoma was one of the States that had restrictions that were quite severe, but fell shortly of bone dryness.

Q.—They were about the same in severity that the present national law is? A.—Oh, that is quite speaking of time prior to the Volstead act.

Q.—Well, I say they were about the same in severity then that the Volstead act is now. The passage of the Volstead act did not work much of a change in Oklahoma. A.—No, not a great deal, because Oklahoma undoubtedly was very severe. But now, of course, in the Southern States they had as much a month allotted them.

Q.—Yes, I know, and I lived in Kentucky, was prosecuting attorney there four years. They had what is called local option law, and they allowed distilleries to sell in five-gallon quantities, nothing less. There were exceptions in various States, and perhaps as a general thing your chart may be correct, but I do not believe Oklahoma ought to be classed in the black, do you? A.—You could get a drink without breaking the law. You are going to look up the law, you have got to have certain classifications.

Q.—You can get a drink now without breaking the law? A.—Of course, but you would have to tell a lie to the doctor.

Q.—That is what you do today in Oklahoma if you get it legally. You have to get a doctor's prescription. A.—Well, I found you could bring it in under those two cases, Senator, perhaps not into Indian territory.

Q.—It was a penitentiary offense to bring it into the Indian territory.

PRIEST TAKES THE STAND.

The Rev. Francis Kasacsun, pastor of the Holy Family Church at Sugar Notch, Luzerne County, Pa., was the next witness. The Catholic priest described Sugar Notch as a mining community, where he had been in charge of a parish for fifteen years. Asked by Colonel Codman to make a statement of conditions in Sugar Notch as a result of the enactment of the Volstead law, he proceeded:

"We found that conditions have been very much corrupted among the mining families from previous times. Before prohibition the head of the family went to the saloon and drank, and at times got drunk, especially around pay days.

"He came home, had a little quarrel with his wife, and after a few strong remarks from one side or the other it blew over. They settled their troubles, but at least the children were not the victims as they are today of prohibition.

"Saloons have been padlocked in some larger towns of the anthracite region, but in suburban towns I do not recollect any being closed. In Sugar Notch all the saloons are still open. In addition they have opened up poolrooms, cigar stores, lunch rooms and candy stores, where they sell hard liquors.

"And you can find stills in practically every other home. They make it, drink it, sell it. Anywhere from $1.50 a quart to $2.50 a quart, the private families that make it sell it. In some cases they sell it to the saloon keeper."

Children Drunk at School.

Colonel Codman asked Father Kasacsun to describe the stills.

"Why, they are copper kettles with a whole lot of coils, and the women folks take care of that," he said. "The men are at work, the women folks take care of it, drink it themselves; in very many cases the children drink.

"Now, never in my occupation as a Catholic clergyman have I found children drinking hard liquors, he continued. "I have never found the youth, anywhere from 14 years old to 18 or 19, that drank hard liquors. Now you see children drinking, you see them drunk. I have seen them drunk myself. There were a few children last year found drunk in the schools of the towns, public schools, and had bottles of it in their pockets.

"Last year there was a girl around 14 in the town arrested drunk. About two weeks ago there was a boy in another small suburban town that was caught on the street drunk.

"The school teachers have been complaining about children coming to school under the influence of liquor. Before, the men, as I said, drank. Now the women are drinking and children are drinking.

"They have star boarders. In fact the company imports labor and crowds them in these small mining homes because they are short of miners at present in the anthracite region. The strike and many other different things drew people out of the anthracite regions. Some got tired of the work and went to look for work outside.

"So they bring in men by the hundred each month, and use practically moral force to bring them into these mining homes. In practically, as I say, most of the homes they brew their own hard liquor. And, of course, the women are taking to it. Drinking it. And you can imagine the results.

"They are unfaithful to their husbands. I know of cases where women have run away with other men, especially with star boarders, leaving the children behind without any care, without any worry about their aftermath. I have had cases in my own congregation where one man went insane, also one married woman went insane.

Many Children Abandoned.

"I am also interested in charity, interested in an orphan asylum in Sheatown, Nanticoke. We find the number of orphans increasing right along. We opened this institution in 1917. We started with around sixty orphans. Today we have over 220 orphans. Many, due to these people drinking, lose their health, lose their work, and in some cases run away one from another, in other words, break up their homes.

"I have a few cases of such kinds, where a woman ran away, and one woman ran away and took two girls with her and left the boy with the husband, who is sickly and cannot do any hard work. She simply ran away with the star boarder.

"Now these cases happen quite often in the mining districts because of the fact that they have right on hand the liquor they did not have before.

"We also find that young girls, anywhere from thirteen or fourteen years up, love to go out joy riding and expect the boys that take them out to treat them with liquor. They do not think they are sports, and do not care to go with them unless they can take them somewhere where they can get it, or they have it with them and treat the girls.

"In the case where they are treated with hard liquor these girls don't care what happens to them. Immorality among the youngsters in the anthracite region is on the increase very, very much and it is pretty hard to interest the youngsters to attend church.

"They have lost respect in many cases for decency and self-respect, and are just looking for a thrill in this world. In other words, prohibition has made itself very attractive to the youngsters.

"They hear so much about it; they read so much about it, and they think there must be something in it. They think, 'We have got to try it out for ourselves.' They just love to go out on wild parties! Seldom do you ever hear of a wild party without drink and that drink causes other immorality.

"Now, the roadhouses, from my experience, are on the increase, and any girl, almost, is willing to go into those roadhouses today. They would not think of going into them years before prohibition.

"You could not find them in those times. Girls would not go into a saloon. A young girl would not associate with a man addicted to drink, but today girls won't go with those who can not get it or do not have it with them.

Insanity Is Increasing.

"This is my experience in my clerical line of work. I have also found that insane asylums in our district are on the increase as to numbers of inmates. That is due also to excessive drinking. They are drinking much more now than ever before.

"The people make it usually around Christmas, around Easter, just before a christening, before a wedding and in some cases before a funeral. They make at least from five to ten gallons at a time. Usually the woman looks after the distilling.

"Furthermore, we have had cases of explosions where they were not experienced in making liquor. They had not learned to make moonshine in the first year of prohibition. But in the second and third years they learned how to make it, and are making, comparatively speaking, a pretty good liquor, a liquor which does not affect them so badly as it did in the first year of prohibition when they first began making it. They have learned how to distill, have been told how. You can find it in every other home.

"Just for the sake of curiosity, before I left for Washington I asked one of my committee, a married man, whether I could safely say that one out of five homes was making and drinking moonshine. 'Why,' he said, 'Father, you can safely say that one out of five families are not making moonshine.'

"And you will find this situation among the miners. Heretofore the time when they would get drunk would be around pay day, or a christening, or a wedding. But now you can go into the homes and find them drunk at any time. And you will find very many women drunk.

"I have heard of one case where a woman was so drunk that she fell downstairs and was found at the bottom dead.

"I go into the homes at least twice a year. I visit the homes. Many times I find mothers around 45 and 50 years of age drunk, so drunk that they cannot stand on their feet; and youngsters anywhere from 3 to 7 years of age who have to do their own cooking because the mothers are drunk.

"I have also found some grass widows making moonshine and selling it, and also inviting people to their homes, selling the whisky, treating them, and also selling themselves at the same time.

"So there is an increase in immorality in the private homes.

Scandal at Lake Resorts.

"Then take your Summer resorts, such as the small lakes to which people go every Summer to get a little rest. We hear very much scandal and a whole lot of debauchery going on at such places. The reason I say that, for one thing, is this: I had a young brother who always used to join these parties. I would ask him what he knew about conditions existing at the lakes.

"'Well, he would tell me, 'they make up with young girls, coming from respectable homes, and Saturday night maybe six or seven boys, having gathered six or seven girls, working in stores, respectable girls, from up-to-date families, would go out to the lake and stay over Sunday, coming back early Monday morning, or sometimes late Sunday night. And they have these Fatty Arbuckle parties.'

"They had one where it was freely said, 'Fatty Arbuckle has nothing on us.' They were absolutely naked. 'That is about the size of it,' the boy said. And they think nothing of it.

"And you can go into the dance halls—and I have this from the people who owned the dance halls and from the Chiefs of Police of the different suburban towns of the county.

"They tell me that you can go into a dance hall and you will find the youngsters drinking hard liquor. At some places they are watching the youngsters and will not allow them to drink in public, but then go to the washrooms and drink and they find empty bottles there.

"One of the squires told me that people would come to his office to answer to some offense, and they would drink in the anteroom and would leave empty bottles there. That situation is on the increase right along.

Tells of Liquor Joy Rides.

"You also will find cases where the people, even the miners today, the working people, go out for a little joy ride on Sundays. They always—in most cases at least—take liquor with them.

"We had one case of that character where a father took out a few of his friends. He was the head of a family and took out a few friends, and also took out one of his children, a child 5 years old. They had liquor with them. He got into a jam somehow on the mountains, and did not notice that he struck a post sharply, which knocked his child out of the automobile, and so kept on going, being afraid the police would catch him, and did not know he left his child on the road until some detective, who got wind of the accident, held him up and arrested him.

"Luckily for him he was not under the influence of liquor, the owner of the car, but the others in the car had liquor in their pockets. So, of course, this man, the head of a family, was arrested and put in jail for about a month. Then his wife came to me and asked me if I could not see the Judge and ask his release, because they needed his support at home.

"We also have cases where young girls today who have any respect for themselves are ashamed of their own mothers and fathers because they drink so much; and this goes so far that the young girls run away from the fathers and mothers—have to leave them and go out looking for a better home.

"I have one in mind where a young girl 16 years of age left her father and mother because they drank to excess. It was unbearable to her to stay with them.

Parents Drunk As Boy Died.

"I also know of another case where a young boy was injured in the mines. He had his leg crushed and, finally, the doctors thought it necessary to amputate his leg. A few hours afterward this young boy died. The parents were notified and came to the hospital drunk. The nurses and doctors could not do anything with the family.

"So they sent for me. I said: 'What do you want me for if the boy is dead?' They said: 'Well, we have the parents of this boy here, and they are causing a whole lot of trouble. They are boisterous, and we cannot do anything with them, and the father is threatening the arrest of the doctor for amputating his leg, saying that caused the boy's death.'

"So I went there, but in the meantime the father and mother had left. The party who took me in the machine said we better go to the home of this young boy. It was bad for the family, and we better go and find out what the trouble is all about; so we went on and we found them on the way, and there they were both with black eyes and bloody noses. They must have had a scrap between themselves.

"But that was not all. A brother of this young boy who was killed was afraid to go home for fear that his father and mother would beat him up, and he asked me for help, for advice as to what he should do. I said: 'Under present conditions, inasmuch as your father and mother are drunk you better go to your nearest relatives and stay overnight until your father and mother can sober up.

"Just think of that situation. The father and mother were drunk the day this young boy met with the accident. They were drunk the day that he died, and they were drunk the next day, and not until the day of the funeral did the father and mother sober up.

"These cases are also on the increase. You find very, very many of them. So prohibition has not improved conditions of family life, but instead it has corrupted family life.

"And that is not all. They think nothing of running away with another man's wife, and even a wife thinks nothing of running away with another woman's husband. They think nothing of having wild parties at home. While the husband is in the mines at work many times he comes home and does not find his wife at home, because she is out somewhere with another man.

Child Cried for Moonshine.

"And think of the influence on the youngsters. I went into one home where a child three years of age was crying for moonshine.

"He was saying, 'Mamma, moonshine.' I asked the mother: 'What is the idea of this child asking for moonshine; have you ever given the child any?' She said: 'Well, I suppose when we have had guests in the house and everybody was drinking, the child was hanging around and asked for some, and they handed the child some liquor.'

"I had never heard of any case in my past clerical life of a young boy and girl getting drunk together, and now you very often hear of young boys and girls, anywhere from 8 years of age up, drinking and even getting drunk. I have seen boys, for instance, 11, 12 and 13 years of age, who would go out and play dice, play cards, and the first thing you know some one of the gang would pull out a flask—as he had seen others do—he gets up and pulls out a flask and takes a mouthful of whisky and hands the flask over to the other boys.

"You will find that that habit is on the increase and that very much immorality is going on among the youngsters, due to prohibition. I think it would be a blessing for this country if prohibition were modified in some way.

"I do believe in regulation. I do believe in and I am a supporter of temperance, but I do not think that prohibition has solved that problem properly. I do not think that prohibition prohibits and I do not think it has improved the family life. I do not think it has helped the youngsters; in fact, I think it has corrupted the youngsters and has corrupted more especially the young girls, the future molders of society, builders of society, especially among the working class of people. It certainly has with them brought on a whole lot of corruption, and the women complain about it."

VIEWS ON ENFORCEMENT.

Colonel Codman asked whether the liquor came from stills operated in own homes or from the outside.

"Most of it comes from stills they have in their own homes," replied Father Kasaciun. "I would say that 90 per cent. of it comes from their own stills. Yet you have no trouble in getting liquor in the anthracite region. You can go into saloons and can get liquor there."

Senator Harreld—You still have eighteen saloons in your town that run wide open, besides candy stores, drugstores and other places where liquor is sold, but you do not think that contributes to the situation; it is the Federal prohibition that causes the trouble? A.—It is purely prohibition. Of course, the saloons do not give them the liquor they make at home. They make liquor also at these small saloons, but it is poor; in addition, they charge exorbitant prices, and the people do not go there so much for it.

Colonel Codman—Would the situation be better if the law were so modified that the mining people in your district could get beer or wine? A.—Absolutely.

Senator Harreld—And do not you think that conditions would be better also if the law were enforced sufficiently to shut down the saloons and all stores that sell liquor? A.—They cannot close them. And if they did close them, it would only open up more places in the private homes. And then you would have to have enough police officers to watch all the private homes, and even then you cannot depend upon the police, because they go into homes and drink themselves, and sometimes get a rake-off.

"Then your opinion is that the prohibition law is not enforceable," Senator Harreld asked.

"I do not think it is possible," was the answer. "These six or seven years' experience have given enough opportunity to show that it cannot be enforced. And you can go anywhere through the country and you can get liquor at any place at any time if you know half decent and if they are sure that you are not a revenue man.

"I have got it in every city every time I wanted it and asked for it. Not that I was anxious for it, but I just wanted to prove to my own satisfaction that I could get it. When I landed in a hotel only last week I asked a bell boy if I could get it and he said: 'Sure,' I said: 'For how much?' He said: 'Fifteen dollars a bottle.'"

PROBATION OFFICER HEARD.

The final witness of the day was Mrs. Viola M. Anglin, Deputy Chief Probation Officer, City Magistrates' Courts, New York City. For the past three years she has been assigned to the Family Court in East Fifty-seventh Street, Manhattan, to manage its probation department.

"I believe that is the largest Family Court in the country," she said. "We have over 10,000 complaints a year. We take in and give out in alimony, or we did last year, over a million and a half dollars. The Family Court in Manhattan takes care of purely nonsupport cases, cases where the husband gives no support, or at least inadequate support, to his wife and family, or where people are morally or legally obliged to take care of old people or sick people and are not doing it.

"That court is in existence simply to prevent the citizens of New York from paying the expenses of people who should be supported by others who are legally and morally responsible, mostly legally responsible, I will say."

"Can you state from your own knowledge the conditions of family life, especially bearing upon moral conditions of children in families in the district?" Colonel Codman asked.

"Before prohibition," Mrs. Anglin replied, "there was very much talk about the good the prohibition law was to do the family. The assumption had been that it was simply excessive drinking of alcohol that brought many families to the Family Court. We find now the cases have not decreased. They have increased. I cannot give you exact figures, but can get and send them if you want them. But the cases, as I say, have increased, and the only conclusion you can come to is that the children are suffering more, the wives are suffering more than before.

"We have many cases at the present time where the men who are on probation are heavy drinkers. They report to the probation officers very often under the influence of liquor, something they never did before. And they come into court very boldly under the influence of liquor, and lately the Judge has had to order men out of the court room, and we have to order them out of the halls, and out of the corridors."

Children Familiar With Stills.

Colonel Codman read a clipping of March 30 quoting Mrs. Anglin as saying:

"As for the young people, children who never in former times had the least curiosity about alcohol are now appallingly familiar with it and the many forms of immoral license that it leads to."

"Is that statement correct?" he asked.

"Why, yes," Mrs. Anglin said, "the probation officers under my supervision, and there are sixteen of them, tell me that in each one of their districts, I mean each one of their probation districts, you can find from 100 to 150, and in some of them 200 stills.

"And these stills are not operated alone in cigar stores, delicatessen stores, and all kinds of places, but they are also operated in the homes of the people who live in the tenements. You open the door of a tenement and walk in, and the first thing you get is a whiff of liquor, of some kind of alcohol or whatever it is they use.

"Probation officers, of course, are not engaged in running down stills, so they do not feel that they should trace the matter to its destination, or wherever it comes from; but they do know that the children are living in droves in the houses.

"The children can not help but know that stills are running in the houses, and they cannot help but know that their own parents, the people to whom they must look for guidance and everything, are disregarding the law and laughing at it.

"Any child in New York, who knows anything about the city at all, can point out a still in his own neighborhood, can point out a speakeasy.

"Formerly a saloon would exist on the corner. Now the saloon has been closed, and what used to be the backroom of the saloon is used for the still or speakeasy, and everybody knows it. The children point it out to you."

STATE SENATE VOTES REFERENDUM BILL

wets are perplexed and worried, even though the verdict of knowing Republicans is that, with the active backing of Senator Wadsworth and many other Republican leaders, the measure "should" finally receive a favorable action, even in the Assembly. Others say that the change of date for the poll from June to November, for which Speaker McGinnies is responsible, has given a black eye to the bill, from which it may not recover.

The Karle-Phelps bill was on the calendar as a special order. In the debate the opposition took the stand that the proposal was futile, that the vote on the referendum would be binding on no one and would merely represent a waste of the people's money.

Three Republican converts, Senators Fearon of Onondaga, Webb of Dutchess and H. D. Williams of Oneida, joined the five Republicans already committed against prohibition in supporting the measure, which received the vote of every Democrat. The other five Republican Senators who voted for the bill were:

Nicoll of Manhattan, Karle of Queens, Whitley of Monroe, Lipowicz of Erie and J. F. Williams of Rensselaer.

This quintet helped the Democrats to bring about the defeat of the Wales-Jenks bills a couple of weeks ago.

Two Hours' Debate in Assembly.

More than two hours debate, which at times was spirited, preceded the passage of the enforcement bills in the Assembly. The wets urged their time-honored reasons for defeating the measures and in addition advanced the plea that favorable action in the Assembly would be useless in view of the attitude already manifested by the Senate.

"We have no more right to adjourn this session without passing this bill to carry out the intent of the Eighteenth amendment than we would have to adjourn without carrying out the intent of the short ballot amendment to our own Constitution by enacting the Hughes reorganization bill," said Assemblyman Jenks of Broome, sponsor for the two bills.

The venerable Assemblyman pleaded vigorously for the passage of his bill and was the only one of the orators to arouse fellow-members and spectators to applause.

There were only two absentees. One of these was a dry Republican, Assemblyman Knapp of Sullivan, the other a wet Democrat, Livingston of Kings.

These Republicans voted against the two Wales-Jenks bills:

Bernhardt and Borkowski of Erie; Cuno of Monroe; Dyckman, Blumberg, Fay and Ricca of Kings; Grenthal, Hofstadter and Phelps of Manhattan; Shonk and Garnjost of Westchester; R. B. Smith of Onondaga and Brooks of Rensselaer.

The question proposed in the Karle-Phelps bill which the Senate passed is this:

"Should the Congress of the United States modify the Federal act to enforce the Eighteenth Amendment of the Constitution of the United States so that the same shall not prohibit the manufacture, sale, transportation importation or exportation of beverages which are not in fact intoxicating as determined in accordance with the laws of the respective States."

Nicoll Starts Senate Debate.

The debate on the Karle-Phelps bill occupied a little more than an hour. It was opened by Senator Courtlandt Nicoll of New York City. He said the fact that an official straw vote was being sought only went to emphasize the difference between the Volstead law and other criminal statutes.

"No one has suggested that we have a referendum on other criminal laws," Senator Nicoll said, "such as those against murder, stealing and arson. Those laws are supported by every one and we need no referendum to ascertain that fact. When a strong public sentiment arises to demand a test with regard to whether a majority of the people are for or against it, we may accept this as an indication that as far as the community is concerned that law is dead.

"This referendum is nothing but an invitation to a funeral—the funeral of prohibition in this State. The corpse has been kept unpleasantly long with us. It has reached a stage of decay where the stench fills the home. There are those who have tried to breathe life into the nostrils of the cadaver, not recognizing that a law cannot live without the support of those whom it affects and not recognizing that while a Legislature can give form, it cannot give life to its enactments. Where, as in this case, there is a reasonable doubt as to the propriety of a law, the whole structure of jurisprudence fails. This referendum cannot kill the prohibition law. It died long ago. I doubt if it ever lived.

Senator Nicoll read from a Court of Appeals decision to show that tribunal had recognized the right of the Legislature to order an advisory referendum at any time it considered this necessary or desirable.

"That is a referendum advisory to the Legislature," Senator Knight suggested.

"That is exactly what this referendum would be," Senator Nicoll replied, calling attention to the many measures pending before the law-making body which deal with prohibition and in some instances provide for petitions to Congress for action to temper the severity of the Volstead law.

The debate brought to his feet a member whose voice is rarely heard, Thomas C. Brown of Schenectady.

"Some would have it appear that Elihu Root has given his approval to this measure," Senator Brown said. "I do not think Mr. Root had any more to do with this proposal than he had to do with the ten commandments.

"It is a very bad thing for our own party," he went on, "and our own party is the only party concerned. The other party is committed to everything that is loose and liberal when it comes to prohibition. Do not let us gumfoot as we are proposing to do. Let us come out straight and above board for the repeal of the Eighteenth amendment. Let us elect some 300 Representatives in Congress and the necessary number of Senators committed to a change and procure the consent of the necessary thirty-six States and the thing will be done. But it cannot be done in this or any way except that.

Senator James S. Truman of Tioga said the bill appeared futile to him.

"When we get the vote on this referendum we won't know any more than we know now," he said. "There has been a newspaper poll recently. What did not get us anywhere. What we are doing under this referendum will not get us anywhere. It will not effect enforcement. It will not influence Congress. More than that, I do not see how we can go through with this, if legal objection is raised. We would merely be spending the people's money without justification. If we want to really accomplish something, we should do something for or against enforcement. Regardless of what the referendum shows throughout the State, the Congressmen are going to vote exactly as they are voting now. A Congressman from a wet district will go on voting wet; a Congressman from a dry district will continue to vote dry."

Straus and Nicoll Tilt.

Senator Nathan Straus Jr. of Manhattan, the first Democrat to take the floor, maintained the referendum would be an indication to the rest of the country and to Congress of how the greatest State in the Union felt on prohibition. This country had no need of clinging too closely to precedent—it was started to do something new, to embody a set of new ideals which a great statue in New York Harbor was set up to commemorate.

"Does not that statue commemorate our illustrious dead?" asked Senator Nicoll.

"I do not take kindly to interruptions intended to be facetious from the temporary Senator from the Seventeenth District," replied Senator Straus. "After the next election we may have a statue to one illustrious dead in his place."

Political relations between Senators Straus and Nicoll are a little strained. Under the new reapportionment plan which the Legislature will be considering before many days the two have been thrown together into one newly carved out Senate district, which, by cunning Republican hands, has been molded to promote the fortunes of the Republican at the expense of the Democratic candidate for the State Senate.

Senator Straus went on to say that no longer could the "land of liberty," be regarded as a fitting cognomen for the United States as compared with the countries of Europe.

"Even though this referendum may be of no legal effect whatever, it may tend to avert strife which surely is threatening and may prove even more disastrous to our country than did the strife over human slavery," he ended.

Karle Resents Waste Argument.

Senator Karle expressed resentment at the argument that the referendum would be a waste of public money.

"What could be more important," he asked, "than to ascertain how the people of this State feel on the question of States' rights and what could be more important than to afford them an opportunity—the first they have had—to say to what extent they are willing to have their personal liberties restrained? It would be a denial of personal rights to refuse them this opportunity."

Says Drys Fear Ballot Box.

He denied the assertion that breweries and "wet" interests were behind his bill.

I have never seen a single person lobby in the interest of the wet cause, but I do know that the Anti-Saloon League and the W. C. T. U. are conducting a well-financed campaign for the purpose of creating false sentiment in many sections of this State," he said. "The drys fear this referendum. They shrink from the ballot box and want to padlock it."

Senator Karle expressed himself as willing to answer questions—the more the merrier—and these were not long in coming.

"Is it not a fact that the opinion of the people of this State was expressed through the action of the Legislature in ratifying the Eighteenth Amendment?" was one.

"The people never had anything to do with the legislative action," Senator Karle replied. "Some even believe that the methods by which ratification was brought about were not above suspicion."

"The referendum bill makes reference to 'sales,'" Senator Kirkland of Chautauqua said. "'Sales' by whom? Is it proposed to bring back the corner saloon?"

"No," said Senator Karle. "I doubt very much whether the corner saloon will ever come back. In my original referendum bill I made provision for sale under proper control and supervision and what that should be would undoubtedly be a matter for decision at the proper time."

"Does the Senator expect a Congressman to vote wet even if he has a dry constituency in the event the referendum should show a wet majority in the State?" asked Senator Wales.

"No," said Senator Karl. "I think he should follow the wishes of his constituents. As I view it, this question should be a matter of local option strictly."

Senator Knight said he would vote against the bill for three reasons.

"I believe it is unconstitutional, I believe it will serve no useful purpose and I believe it will establish a precedent that will come back to plague the people of this State," he said.

"This bill is an evasion, a subterfuge, an attempt to break down the law, a measure designed to kindle false hopes in the unthinking," declared Senator Mastick.

Senator Thomas I. Sheridan, New York City Democrat, said the verdict under a referendum such as proposed would be felt throughout the land.

"Let us be finished with the present system," he said. "The law as it stands is being constantly violated, even by men elected to make laws and Judges elected to enforce them. It is rank hypocrisy, and this nation was never intended to be a nation of hypocrites."

Doesn't Want to Hear of Speakeasies.

The debate in the Assembly on the Jenks bills attracted hardly a handful of spectators. Assemblyman Jenks denied that prohibition was largely responsible for corrupting the morals of the youth of today.

"The boys and girls of today are no worse than they were in my day, although I do not approve of some of the things they do," said Mr. Jenks. "Prohibition did not cause the girls to smoke cigarettes, bob their hair and roll their stockings, and neither did it make some of the young men go bareheaded, wear balloon trousers and dance the Charleston.

When Mr. Jenks remarked that he was confident that prohibition did prohibit, Assemblyman Bloch, minority leader, asked:

"Does the gentleman want me to tell him where he can get plenty of liquor in up-State counties?"

"No," replied Mr. Jenks, "I don't want to know about such things, but I know one can go into many of the cities and, with the proper password, he can get plenty of booze."

Assemblyman Galgano, Democrat, of Manhattan declared that prohibition could never be enforced and would never be respected in this country.

"The Washington hearing is an admission by the House of Representatives that prohibition has been a total failure," he said.

"The Republican Party is a half-and-half party," he said. "The party stands for prohibition in the rural section and for modification in the cities. The party is not on the level on prohibition any more than it is on many other measures in which the people of the State are vitally interested."

While he voted for the measures, Assemblyman Davison, Republican, of Nassau, denounced prohibition.

"I am absolutely opposed to the Volstead act," he said. "If it wasn't such a tragedy it would be a farce. But it is the law of the land, and so long as it remains such it should be enforced. For that reason and for that reason only, I am going to vote for these measures."

"What we are doing here this afternoon is absolutely futile," said Mr. Shonk of Westchester. "If this bill is passed it will be defeated in the Senate. Prohibition should not be mixed in with politics and that is exactly what is being done."

WANTS CURFEW RULE FOR NIGHT CLUBS

McLaughlin to Consult With Mayor Walker Regarding an Ordinance.

Police Commissioner McLaughlin said yesterday he intended to talk with Mayor Walker soon about a curfew hour for night clubs, some of which are now open until dawn or later, with or without liquor selling. He said he thought a definite hour should be set for their closing, but was not certain what that hour should be.

"Patrons of such places should be allowed to eat their meals and attend after-theatre entertainments until a reasonable hour, and some regard should be paid to the proprietors," he said, "but I am in favor of a regulation for closing at a definite time."

The Commissioner recalled that Mayor Walker had come out in favor of a curfew law for night clubs during the campaign last Fall. It is understood a bill may be introduced in the Board of Alderman for such an ordinance.

The annual report of the Committee of Fourteen for 1925, published in yesterday morning's papers, emphasized the connection between liquor selling and commercialized vice in many night clubs.

PADLOCKS FOR 13 PLACES.

Sky High Club Included in List of Liquor Decrees.

Thirteen padlock decrees were issued yesterday by Federal Judge Francis A. Winslow, in Padlock Court, including a "consent" decree under which the Sky High Club, at 249 West Forty-ninth Street, will be padlocked until June 1. Judge Winslow directed also that it should not be reopened unless the Court had approved of the new tenant. The owner, Norman Nicholas, formerly operated the premises as the Piccadilly Supper Club, a part of which was padlocked last December.

An injunction, without a padlock decree, was issued against Ye White Horse Tavern, at 114 West Forty-fifth Street, and its proprietor, Stephen J. Christie, forbidding the sale of liquor henceforth. Christie formerly operated Christie's Chop House, at 163 West Forty-ninth Street, now under padlock.

About sixty-five padlock cases remain on the court calendar.

DRYS WIN NEWSPAPER POLL

13,770 Vote In Kansas City Star Ballot, Against 8,805 Wets.

Special to The New York Times.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., April 13.—Preference for a strict adherence to the Volstead law was expressed by a majority of the readers of The Weekly Kansas City Star in a poll covering three weeks, which closed Monday night.

The vote was 13,770 dry, against a total of 8,805 wet. The wet vote was divided between those who favored light wines and beer and those preferring the repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment and a return to State control of the liquor problem.

The poll covered Missouri, Kansas, Arkansas, Oklahoma, Iowa, Nebraska and Colorado.

DRY LAW BREAKERS WARNED BY SARGENT

to make the thing prohibited easier to procure and less dangerous to make and sell by those who would provide it, nevertheless such is the effect upon the execution of the law.

"Personal liberty to do what? Anything except to facilitate the making, sale and use of intoxicants? Why? Any reason except that the use of them may not be interfered with? What other result can follow the constant declaration that the law is not binding on the consciences of those who do not favor its provisions because they say it interferes with personal liberty—and the instinct of personal liberty is very strong—what other result can follow than that juries will hesitate to convict on charges of violation of the law? What other result can follow than that those contemplating engaging in the traffic will be encouraged by the thought that probably, even if detected and arrested, conviction will not follow?

Says Public Sentiment is Weakened.

"No compunction about violating the law? Violating it how?? What for? Anything except to provide intoxicants for somebody to drink? No. Such contentions when made by those who do not want liquor for themselves, who would not intentionally put obstacles in the way of enforcement of the law, must be made without realization of the effect of their position. That effect can be and is only to weaken public sentiment in favor of any law enforcement and to encourage violation of all law.

"It is only a step—and an easy one—for the man of loose moral fibre who hears and reads that men of education, of standing and influence aver and urge that he is not in conscience bound to give allegiance to one provision of the Constitution, is not in conscience bound to observe one statute, because it interferes with his liberty to do as he pleases in that matter, to come to the conclusion that he is not in conscience bound to observe another law, and then another, which interferes with the liberty he would have to do some other act but for the law; and when he is told that many of the best citizens violate a part of the law without compunction, what conclusion can be reach but that he may violate any part of it without compunction?"

Mr. Sargent said those who asserted that enforcement of the Volstead act infringed upon their personal liberties might just as well make objection to the laws which compelled them to drive their automobiles on the right-hand side of the street.

"The real source of the embarrassment to enforcement of the law," he said, "is not that the law interferes with personal liberty—any law which has any effect upon the conduct of the individuals composing society does that, must do that—but that so many well-intentioned persons, thoughtlessly or following some process of unsound reasoning, join hands with those who intentionally violate the law and give them aid and comfort in attempting to justify their unlawful conduct."

That the liquor traffic ought not to exist, Mr. Sargent argued, was admitted by those making the arguments and claims for repeal of the laws when they said that they "do not desire to bring back intoxicating liquor," or that "there is no intention ever to bring back the saloon."

"Those who say this honestly," he added, "surely cannot have thought out the result to which their arguments tend. The rest 'do protest too much.'

Declares Government Not "Powerless."

"Again, if it be true that 'the prohibitory law has never been practically in effect,' that 'it has been a disastrous, tragic failure,' that 'the Government is powerless to enforce it,' in what way does it interfere with the personal liberty of those who would drink intoxicants?

"The answer is, as everybody knows, that by reason of the existence of national prohibition, by reason of its practical effect, by reason of the exertion of the power of the Federal Government, the traffic in liquor is becoming day by day more and more difficult and dangerous to carry on. As the application of the Federal power grows more strict and the manufacture within the country and importation from without become more restricted, as the business becomes more difficult and dangerous, the price of the goods dealt in rises, and right there is where the shoe pinches; right there is the evidence which cannot be controverted, that the Federal Government is not 'powerless to enforce' the law."

Recently, Mr. Sargent said, an argument was made that the great increase of cases in court for violation of the prohibition laws was an indication that the law was not being and could not be enforced.

"I submit," he said, "that that increase in cases in court is an index of the activities which have resulted in whisky being unobtainable except at an expense many times as great as before those activities were exerted by the Federal Government. And as the work of detection, seizure and arrest resulting in such cases in court goes on the extinction of the traffic draws so much nearer."

Mr. Sargent said the chief factors remaining in the way of complete abatement of the liquor traffic were the temptation to make money in disregard of the highest obligations owed to the country, and the willingness of others to pay these illicit dealers a bribe sufficient to offset the danger of fine and imprisonment.

Appeals to "Best Citizens."

"To those 'thousands of the best citizens of the country who have no compunctions whatever about violating the law' I address the question: Upon reflection, having called to your attention what your action really means and is in paying an outlaw for violating the law of your country in order to furnish you the means of gratifying your desire for drink, don't you think it better to refrain from such bribery in the future? Don't you feel that, unless you so refrain, there may be some doubt about your being longer entitled to the designation 'best citizens of the country'?

"Can you afford to endanger your property, your safety, your lives and the property, safety and lives of your wives and children by teaching and practicing the doctrine of purchasing the commission of crime? Leaving aside for the moment any consideration of your duty as citizens, does not your interest lie the other way?

"To those who, after considering the character and consequences of their acts, persist in promoting and fostering the violation of the law, I say that the hand of punishment shall fall as often and as heavily as those now charged with the duty of administering the law can cause it to fall."

Mr. Sargent then made a strong plea for cooperation by the women, saying:

"To you, the women of this country, I say, you can by your influence and your votes secure the election and appointment of honest, faithful administrative officers and the discharge and retirement of those who prove to be dishonest, unfaithful and inefficient. dishonest, unfaithful and inefficient.

"More than this, remember that the business of making, transporting and selling liquor is not entered upon from the motives which incite the commission of most other crimes—jealousy, revenge, sudden anger, ill-will toward society generally—but only for profit.

"The market for the goods is the whole foundation of the great cost in money, time and effort of suppression of the traffic. You can see to it that at no social event in your charge shall your tables be disgraced by the presence of unlawful liquor. You can, if you will, make the serving of unlawful liquor at social functions of your acquaintances so unpopular that it will cease. Will you do your part?"

Quotes From Scriptures.

The Attorney General closed his address with the following exhortation:

"And Moses said unto Joshua: Choose us out men and go out and fight with Amalek; tomorrow I will stand on top of the hill.

"So Joshua did as Moses had said to him, and fought with Amalek, and Moses, Aaron and Hur went up to the top of the hill.

"And it came to pass, when Moses held up his hand that Israel prevailed: And when he let down his hand Amalek prevailed.

"But Moses's hands were heavy, and they took a stone and put it under him and he sat thereon: And Aaron and Hur stayed up his hands, the one on the one side and the other on the other side; and his hands were steady until the going down of the sun.

Mrs. Mabel Walker Willebrandt, assistant to the Attorney General in charge of prohibition enforcement, joined with Mr. Sargent in urging the women to "make it stylish to observe the law."

"While men are the physical defenders of a nation in times of war," Mrs. Willebrandt said, "women increasingly, by their great national organizations, are coming to be the defenders of the laws and highest Constitutional aims in times of peace."

Mrs. Rockefeller Sends Letter.

A letter from Mrs. John D. Rockefeller Jr. urging law enforcement was read to the conference today.

"The turmoil and upheaval of the last twelve years have brought the mind of the world to an almost chaotic state," Mrs. Rockefeller wrote. "New ideals are struggling with old conventions and habits. In this country the situation is made more complicated by our unprecedented prosperity. More people than ever before are able to give their families good food, clothes, education and many of the pleasant things of life; there the willingness to give seems in many cases to end, and readiness that was so common during the war to make sacrifices for a cause seems strangely wanting.

"But I know there are two points on the value of which all Americans agree: These are the welfare of their children and the justice of a 'square deal.' I should like to make through the women of this commission a plea that the children of the United States be given a 'square deal' by their parents and older relations.

"A man once said to me that a parent should be either an 'awful warning' or a 'good example.' Is it not possible that we can become in very truth a 'good example,' for the pity of it all is that the children believe in us and try to be like us, inconsistent though we often are?

"We pretend to be Christians, but how few of Christ's commands do we really obey? We are a Republic; we make our own laws, and yet so often treat them with scorn and contempt.

"Why not be honest with ourselves and admit that our children will not be the high-minded, fine people that we want and expect them to be unless we—their parents—set them an example of being just and law-abiding citizens."

The women were received at the White House today by President and Mrs. Coolidge.

FINDS CITY PARKS IN WOEFUL STATE

S. H. Howe Demands Public Awakening in Address to Merchants Gate Group.

DOESN'T BLAME HYLAN ONLY

Conditions in the city's parks, particularly Central Park, were denounced again yesterday at a luncheon at the Biltmore given by Franklin Simon to Vice Chairmen of the Merchants' Gate Committee, of which he is Chairman.

"Our city parks, and particularly Central Park, are in a woeful condition of decadence and neglect," said Stanley H. Howe, Managing Director of the Central Park Association, the principal speaker. "A public awakening is necessary, not only to remedy the deterioration of a generation, but to bring about constructive measures to make our parks what they ought to be —as Mr. Simon expressed it in his invitation to this meeting—a source of pride to the people of the city.

"We cannot afford to lean back on the fallacy that these unfortunate conditions are due to eight years of Mayor Hylan. That theory is not safe. Mayor Hylan and his associates are by no means exclusively to blame for the condition of our parks. We have had all kinds of Mayors during the past generation—Tammany, Anti-Tammany, Fusion and Republican. All of them must share in the responsibility for the conditions which exist today."

Ridiculing the present state of Central Park, he said, "Thousands of visitors come to New York every day. From the Woolworth Building they see the great expanse of the city and exclaim, 'What a spectacle!' They see "Abie's Irish Rose" and say, 'What a comedy!' They see the Statue of Liberty and say 'What a farce!' Then they see Central Park, and say 'What a tragedy!'"

The blame for the "tragedy of Central Park," he maintained, was accountable to "the long continued attitude of public indifference," and it was to overcome this indifference that the plan of naming the various Central Park gates after groups of citizens was revived. The Merchants' Gate Committee, for the gate at Fifty-ninth Street and Eighth Avenue, was the most important group, he said.

He then announced that plans were under way for a dinner to be given at the Astor on Thursday, May 13, and to be attended by men and women representing each group. Entrances to the dining hall would be through gates named after the various groups. There would be a miniature of Central Park in the centre of the room, and seating would be by "gate groups" about this "park."

"Thus we shall dramatize the situation, focus the public attention upon it," he said.

Among those who attended were the following newly announced Vice Chairmen of the Merchants' Gate Committee, with the trades they represent:

Ericson F. Bushnell, grocers; Benjamin T. Fairchild, chemists; Harry Barth, china and glass dealers; August V. Lambert, jewelers; Hiram R. Mallinson, silk merchants; Philip Glemby, hair goods dealers; Clarkson Cowl, dry goods merchants; J. M. Gidding and Edward E. Kimball, importers; George Crouch, typewriter dealers; David N. Mosessohn and Thomas Seltzer, publishers.

Mr. Howe announced the following as Vice Chairmen of other Gate Committees: John Emerson, artists; Julius Tannen, actors; Chancellor Elmer E. Brown, scholars; Mrs. Laurent Oppenheim and Miss Edna Ferber, women's; Robert Morris, Goodhue Livingston and Mrs. Jacob Riis, pioneers.

RESIGNING TRUSTEES NOT TO QUIT CALVARY

Will Remain in Straton Church Despite Action—Board to Meet on Friday.

A meeting of the Board of Trustees of Calvary Baptist Church has been called for Friday, at which time the resignations of four members of the board, Robert B. Buzbee, Benjamin J. and A. B. Miller and W. A. M. Martin, will be considered, it was learned yesterday.

These trustees tendered their resignations Monday to Supreme Court Justice William Harmon Black, President of the board, accompanied by a statement of reasons, which was signed by the four, who have for a long time constituted a hostile minority in the board on certain matters of church policy.

Justice Black refused yesterday to comment on the resignations. A representative of the board said the protest of the resigning members against the payment of certain costs attendant on recent litigation—in which the church was involved amounting to $721 by the church was unreasonable.

"They based their contention," he said, "on the assertion that the members were sued as individuals, but they were sued as trustees of the church, and as representatives of the church in the matter they were entitled to these expenses."

Mr. Buzbee said yesterday that he had little to add to the statement sent with the resignations. He said it was impossible to tell at this time how many of the church members would approve or disapprove of the resigning trustees' action, but seemed to doubt that they could count on a majority.

"They keep the voting power pretty well under control, and as soon as you oppose them they have ways of keeping you in line," he said, adding that several members of the congregation approved their action but were afraid to express this approval openly.

Asked if he intended to give up his membership in Calvary Baptist Church, Mr. Buzbee said he did not nor did those who left the board with him contemplate any such action at this time.

Dr. Straton is expected to return from Chicago today.

NEW FRENCH CHURCH IN CONCRETE.

The church at Le Raincy, near the Ourcq, where the Germans stopped, breaks tradition and expresses emotions. It has the distinction of being the first concrete church of architectural claims. Are you Vigorous—or Frail—or just In-between?

How do you feel today?

ARE you one of the millions of men who feel just "fair" most of the time? Never really ill, yet never tingling with energy and vigor? Neither one nor the other—just in-between?

We suspected as much. Many people today never know the joy of bouncing health and vitality. They keep off the sick list, but they haven't the strength and stamina they should have.

All of which is usually easily avoidable!

What did you eat at your last meal?

This isn't idle curiosity. Perhaps you don't realize that you may be eating yourself out of most of the energy and health and fun you should have. It's true with thousands of people. Too much rich, spicy food—not enough natural food such as milk.

No, we're not suggesting a milk diet. Eat any wholesome food that agrees with you. But be moderate about it, and be sure to supplement your menu with lots of good milk. If you drink Borden's Milk every day, you're sure of getting really nourishing food. Every bottle of Borden's has a full quota of vitamins, minerals, butterfats, proteins and all the things that bring health and vitality.

Take a minute now to order some . . .

There's a Borden man who takes care of the people in your neighborhood. He'll be glad to serve you faithfully and well. You can order from him, or phone us. Whichever way is easier.

Try drinking milk at every meal and see how much better you feel. If you're husky and vigorous, you'll keep that way. If you're frail, you'll improve surprisingly fast. And if you're one of the in-between folk who just feel so-so, you'll join the lucky crowd of people who seem to have more red blood corpuscles than they need.

Drink your quart of Borden's Milk every day. Starting today.

JUDGE RAILS AT JAZZ AND DANCE MADNESS

Toms River Justice Says Spring Brings Out City "Cuckoos" to Disturb Rural Peace.

DEPICTS WEIRD GYRATIONS

Dance Like an Asiatic Potpourri, He Tells Grand Jury—Demands Law Be Enforced.

TOMS RIVER, N. J., April 13.—To confess that the liquor laws are unenforceable, "that this temple of justice is a mere mockery and a sham" is to "invite the black flag of piracy to enter our homes and we practically concede that we are at the mercy of the mob," said Supreme Court Justice James F. Minturn of Hoboken, in charging the Ocean County Grand Jury here today in the absence of Supreme Court Justice Frank T. Lloyd.

Justice Minturn's charge included a picturesque description of present day jazz madness and the consumption of illicit beverages which, he said, was its usual complement. Mentioning the difference in the meaning of Spring to rural and urban peoples, he said:

"The song of the jaybird will scarcely have died out in the fields and the call of the cuckoo will hardly have expired in the thicket ere the more vociferous jaybird and vivacious cuckoo from the urban concert halls, seeking rest and rehabilitation from the tonic atmosphere of our shores, will march upon us with all the abandon and assurance of conquering heroes.

An "Ear-Splitting Avalanche."

"Keeping time as it were with the hilarious civic invasion with an intoxicating rhythm that defies and submerges the eternal song of old ocean, comes that vermiform appendix of the musical art known as a jazz band, exuding, as it were, that ear-splitting avalanche of monotonous noise which finds its counterpart only in the depths of Goethe's 'Walpurgis Night' or in the heart-rending emanations from the condemned souls in Dante's 'Purgatorio.'

"In response to its call there ensues a series of snakelike gyrations and weird contortions of seemingly agonized bodiese and limbs, resembling an Asiatic pot-pourri, which for a more definite name is called a dance. To be effectually and consummately executed, this anomalous procession must be indulged in in the midst of a meal and resumed at intervals, so that, in truth, jazz becomes the pièce de résistance of the meal. While the meal, through neglect, shrinks into desuetude, the jazz becomese magnified in ethereal ecstatic exuberance and intensity.

"With the meal and dance inevitably goes the necessary elixir or ambrosia of the gods, drawn from the expectant hip pocket, apparently carried as a necessary appendage to the meal and dancing habiliments. And with its production arises a swell of exultation, glee and satisfaction that common decency has once again been subverted and law and order has again been overcome.

Tonic in the Hip Bottle.

"To the innocent and uninitiated, this bottle contains the most sanctified medicated water or the most exhilarating tonic to soothe the strained nerves and stabilize the weary limbs of these overwrought terpsichorean devotees. But we who occasionally are permitted to lift the veil of the sanctum-sanctorum of this spiritual atmosphere and hear the harrowing tales of adventure by land and flood know too well that the bottle, thus publicly exhibited and flouted, as it were, with exultation in the eyes of the law, contains nothing less than stupefying, death-de ing whisky, the general use of which is outlawed, denounced and prohibited by the law and the Constitution as a crime.

"There was a time not so long ago when men observing this tragedy, this rape of the law, inquired in astonishment, 'How did he get it?' But now the inquirer is assumed to be familiar with the modus operandi, and therefore he inquires only, 'Where did he get it?'

"It is with this complex conspiracy against the Constitution and the law that we have to deal. That we should deal with it honestly and vigorously as befits us, as the sworn guardians of the law, obviously goes without saying.

"To confess in the presence of its smiling excesses that we are imbeciles and paralyzed at the onslaught of chicanery and brigandage is to confess that the enforcement of law and order is impossible; that this temple of justice is a mere mockery and a sham; and when that is conceded we tacitly invite the black flag on piracy to enter our homes, and we practically confess that we are at the mercy of the mob."

CIRCUS ELEPHANTS PLANT PARK TREES

Three elephants from the circus—Old John, Queen and Babe—set in place yesterday on Central Drive, opposite the Mall, in Central Park, thirty-eight large trees, which were part of the 500 to be set out this Spring.

Old John, Queen and Babe were accustomed to moving trees in their native Ceylon, and, in proof of the tradition that an elephant never forgets anything, the trio, at a word from Miss Evelyn W. Smith, President of the Arnawalk Nursery, where the trees were grown, lifted each of the thirty-eight pin oaks into the pits dug for them as if they were at an everyday task. The trees measured from 9 to 15 inches in caliper and from 30 to 35 feet high. The elephants did the work expeditiously, and, according to Miss Smith and Park Commissioner Gallatin, they also did it well.

The planting was made possible through the efforts of the Fifth Avenue Association, which obtained a special appropriation of $50,000 to get new large trees which are needed in Central and other parks. In addition to the 500 which will be planted in Central Park, 600 others, measuring from 4½ to 5½ inches in caliper, will be set out elsewhere, as follows: Thomas Jefferson Park, 150; Morningside Park, 200; Riverside Park, 100; Carl Schurz Park 50; Thomas Smith Park, 50, and Manhattan Park, 50, besides several thousand smaller trees and shrubs in the parks.

MARANVILLE'S PLAY SHINES

By HARRY CROSS

New York's stylish baseball opening took place up at the Polo Grounds yesterday with 45,000 people sitting around watching the Brooklyn Robins perform a startling somersault by spanking the Giants, 3 to 0. While it was hardly the proper way for visitors to behave at somebody else's party, the Robins monopolized all the attention in sight. The Giants were there resplendent in their new uniforms, eager and waiting for the admiration and applause of the multitude, but all they did was to play the role of the innocent by-stander.

Jess Petty, a left-handed pitcher, cast a sinister shadow over the festivities and permitted Mr. McGraw's supposedly hard-hitting athletes the sum total of one hit. That was a two-bagger off the Texas League type which tumbled into a corner of right field while three Robin players were breaking the laces on their shoes trying to reach it.

As if the chill of the defeat wasn't enough to make the big gathering of New Yorkers suffer, it was a cold afternoon and developed enough cold air to keep the town sneezing for a week. Mayor Walker stuck it out to the sixth inning and then fled with chattering teeth. As far as climatic conditions went, the game might just as well have been played at Spitzbergen with Amundsen chucking in the first ball.

The baseball part of the day's big shindig was a shocking surprise to the Giants. The Robins, supposed to be tottering, after twelve straight bumps from the Yankees, suddenly popped out of their state of coma and gave the Giants a ridiculous spanking. It now develops that perhaps the Robins were only spoofing the Yanks.

Welcoming Crowd Turns Out.

The Giants have never received a more flattering opening-day tribute than yesterday. The fans laughed at the snappy weather, turned their coat collars up and flocked to Harlem in great numbers. There was a big crowd waiting to get in when the gates were opened at noon, and they kept streaming in until after game time. Except for a few hundred seats here and there at far distances in the outfield tiers, the stands were filled.

The upper and lower boxes were draped in bunting; flags waved in the breeze from scores of flag staffs atop the stadium; the band played and it seemed as if the whole town was baseball happy.

That lasted until Brooklyn started to play ball. After that all the joy was confined to the large gathering of loud-voiced Brooklynites who inhabited all the sections back of the Robins' bench. They had a great time, and it wouldn't have made a bit of difference to them if it had been 25 below zero.

Along with the great pitching of Jess Petty, Brooklyn had that perennial pepper-box, Rabbit Maranville, at shortstop, and he gave a thrilling exhibition of a one-man infield. Rabbit had nine chances without a single error. In his own inimitable way he caught sky-high rockets with just as much simplicity as if the ball were dropping into a basket. He knocked down seething drives and dug tantalizing bouncers out of the earth. Anyone who saw him yesterday would easily see why they call him the Rabbit.

Two Men Do the Trick.

Petty and Maranville beat the Giants, and while it has been indirectly inferred that Uncle Wilbert Robinson, the Brooklyn manager, hasn't a complete ball club to his name, he had more than two and they were plenty. Virgil Barnes pitched for the Giants, and although he fanned seven of the Robins, they were able to punch holes in his pitching at just the moments when they meant runs. It was a well-played, snappy ball game for a chilly spring afternoon, and it was first-rate pitching for this early stage of the season.

Just before game time the players of both clubs strung out across the field and with Managers McGraw and Robinson in the centre of the line swung down the field behind the band that stood around sort of embarrassed while the Stars and Stripes rose to the half-mast. The ball players paraded much better than usual as one or two of them were caught actually in step with the music.

The top roar of the day started on the march back to the plate, for headed the parade then was Mayor Jimmy Walker, a fan from the ground up. The entrance of the Mayor developed into a demonstration. When the band played "Will You Love Me in December as You Did in May?" there was some danger of the roof being permanently lifted from the stands. The Mayor's derby hat was poised at a nice angle over his right ear and he looked as if he had just jumped out of a bandbox.

He tossed out the first ball and it wasn't much of a throw. It didn't go all the way to Umpire Bill Klem but hit the ground and rolled along to him. The Giants didn't have to wait for the game to start to get their first dose of hard luck. During the practice Freddy Lindstrom, the third baseman, was hit in the right eye by a batted ball and it will be some time before the lamp is back to normal. That brought Heinie Groh into the game at once and soon after Mr. Klem warbled "Play ball!" Heinie was clutching a lump of ice by which had popped off Stock's head. Marriott was whiffed by Barnes and then Zach Wheat, after eighteen years in major league baseball, stepped into action and jarred a two-bagger to left field.

In the next inning Cox got an infield single with one out and Maranville swung into the picture with a two-ply wallop to right which sent Cox around to third. There was only one out then, but Barnes buckled down and Hank De Berry and Petty were easy outs.

Petty, who was hurried to the mound at the last moment because Dazzy Vance's boil was in no mood to play baseball, was poison to the Giants from the start. His long easy left-handed swings sent the ball over at treacherous angles and the Giants had some difficulty in hitting the ball out of the infield. They seem to hit a lot of them in the immediate vicinity of Mr. Maranville and the Rabbit let them drop gracefully into his pants pocket.

In the Brooklyn's third the break came. After Jackson had tossed Stock out at first Marriott hoisted a fly in short left centre. Jackson backstepped for it, Tyson came tearing in from centre field and Irish Meusel came galloping in from left. Irish was coming fast because it was chilly out there and this was a good chance to get warm. He came on and on and wrapped his two hands around the ball and then splash. The ball popped out of his hand like a geyser in a violent state of activity. Marriott was on second base when the excitement subsided.

The irrepressible Wheat, was up again and this time he slapped a single to left and over the plate roared Marriott with the first run.

There wasn't a single incident over which New York could rejoice in the seventh. Jess Petty has never made a name for himself as a hitter and runner. He is just a left-handed pitcher and has always let it go at that. But yesterday in the seventh, he tried to kill the ball and it fluttered to the infield toward third. Groh came rushing in but the ball was doing a dizzy little hopping act and by the time Heinie had it under control, Petty had reached first simply by running faster than he ever before knew he could run.

Petty Only Gets To Third.

Stock planted a sacrifice on the lawn and was flipped out by Pancho Snyder, who is more active this year than he has been for some time. That put Petty at second and Marriott whanged a drive to right field who commanded the attention of Ross Young. Pep did everything a player could do to get it. Seeing that he could not reach the ball by the ordinary means of transportation, his feet, he imagined himself a nymph about to dive into a mirrored pool and went after the ball head first. He missed it by an eyelash and Marriott got a two-bagger out of it. At this time Petty gave his normal exhibition of speed. He didn't want to tire himself out by encroaching on the province of Loren Murchison, so on this two-base smash he traveled only from second to third.

Wheat walked and filled the bases and Jacques Fournier, as unconcerned as you please, pickled the ball on a lurid trip to right for a single and Petty and Marriott crossed the platter.

Frisch was the only Giant who got as far as third base. He accomplished the feat in the fourth. The New York captain smashed a fast grounder to Stock, who made a neat stop and tried to tie himself into a knot before throwing to first and managed to hurl the ball high over Fournier's head. Frisch getting to second on the extravagant toss. Young's sacrifice sent Frankie to third, but there he was marooned.

The one lonesome hit the Giants made off Petty also came from Frisch's bat and prevented Petty from getting a no-hit game. With two gone in the sixth, Frisch parted the ball high into right field close to the foul line. Fournier, Stock and Cox all went after it, but it dropped safe and by that time Frisch was on his way to second and by a beautiful slide, executed as only Frisch can execute it, on his manly chest, he leaped into second.

JOHNSON TRIUMPHS IN 16 INNINGS, 1-0

Washington Veteran Shuts Out Athletics to Start His 19th Season.

VICE PRESIDENT ATTENDS

WASHINGTON, April 13 (AP).—Washington and Philadelphia opened the baseball season in gala style here today, battling fifteen innings before the champion Senators won, 1 to 0. The game was a brilliant dual between pitching veterans, Walter Johnson for the Senators, beginning his twentieth season, and Ed Rommel for the Athletics.

More than 25,000 fans braved the chilly weather and saw Vice President Dawes toss out the first ball. A floral piece was presented to Manager Bucky Harris, and Johnson received a loving cup.

Manager Harris crossed the plate with the winning run after he had singled, Goslin doubled and Joe Harris singled. Twice the Senators had filled the bags with two out only to fall before Rommel's pitching. The Senators went hitless during the first four innings.

Twelve of the Athletics went down by the strike-out route, Johnson's curves and fast ones appearing as effective as ever. Rommel struck out one man and walked five, while Johnson passed three.

The veteran Peckinpaugh sat on the bench and watched his substitute, Buddy Myer, play at short. The youngster handled four chances and muffed one.

REDS SUBDUE CUBS IN AN EXTRA INNING

Donohue Knocked Out of Box in Eighth—Picinich Helps 7-6 Victory With Homer.

CINCINNATI, April 13 (AP).—The Cincinnati Reds took the opening game from Chicago, 7 to 6, here today in a ten-inning exhibition marked by rather free hitting, with poor fielding on the part of the Cubs.

Donohue was knocked out of the box in the eighth inning after keeping the hits well scattered until that period. Luque, who replaced him, pitched to two men, and May took the mound in the ninth. Picinich registered the first homer of the season in the fifth inning, and Freigau duplicated with a homer for Chicago in the eighth.

TUFTS BLANKS LOWELL TECH

Three Pitchers Hold Losers to Two Hits and Score 4-0 Victory.

MEDFORD, Mass., April 13.—Tufts blanked Lowell Textile in its second baseball victory of the season at Tufts Oval today, 4 to 0. Robinson and Smith, southpaws, and Bowker took their turn in the box and held the Lowell batters to two hits. The Tufts team fielded perfectly, while Lowell in its first game of the season played ragged ball. Kennedy starred at bat and at third base for the winners.

Thrilling Performances Mark First Day; Shutout by Johnson One of High Lights

Seldom has a baseball season opened with so many strange, sensational and unexpected happenings as did the 1926 campaign yesterday. A few of the highlights follow:

After losing twelve straight exhibition games to the Yankees, the Robins started the regular season with a 3-to-0 victory over the Giants, Jess Petty allowing just one scratch hit.

Walter Johnson, starting his twentieth season, shut out the Athletics, 1 to 0, in fifteen innings, fanning twelve and allowing six hits. Manager Stan Harris scored the winning run on a single by Joe Harris.

Rogers Hornsby, champion batsman of the National League, and Zach Wheat, veteran Brooklyn outfielder started the season with a perfect day at bat, each getting three hits in three chances.

Although the White Sox park had to be cleared of snow in order to allow the opening game, a record crowd of 37,000 jammed the enclosure.

Two shortstops who were cast off by major league clubs last Fall, dubbed "through," starred for their teams afield. They were Everett Scott and Rabbit Maranville.

Another shortstop infielder who was expected to sit on the bench most of the season got his chance just before the first game started. Hans Groh had to jump into the Giants' line-up at the last minute when Lindstrom was hit in the eye by a ball.

Roger Peckinpaugh, voted the most valuable player in the American League last year, was benched in favor of a youngster, Buddy Myer.

The first home runs of the season were hit by Jimmy Johnston of the Braves, Jim Bottomley of the Cards, Felipe of the Cubs, Bigbee of the Pirates and Pinelich of the Reds.

WHITE SOX DEFEAT BROWNS IN OPENER

Record Crowd of 37,000 Sees Chicago Take Early Lead and Win, 5 to 1.

CHICAGO, April 13 (AP).—The Chicago White Sox opened the American League season here today by defeating St. Louis, 5 to 1, before a crowd of 37,000, a record for the White Sox park. Lyons, White Sox ace, pitched in fine form.

Everett Scott, former Senator and New York shortstop, made his debut with the White Sox with a great game in the field.

Bows to Providence College Nine—Brooklyn Team Makes Triple Play.

In spite of the fact that St. John's College pulled a triple play in the first inning, the Brooklyn nine lost by a 6-4 count to Providence College at Ebbets Field yesterday afternoon. The triple play killing occurred with men on first and third when Collins raced in from centre to make a pretty catch of Doyle's liner and started a triple play. Collins to Clynick to Evers, that doubled both runners off base. Whalen, the visitors' hurler, fanned ten and went the route.

Home Runs Big Factor in Blanking Roanoke—Ryan Gets Three.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, D. C., April 13.—Home runs played a big part in Georgetown's smashing 11-to-0 victory over Roanoke College here today. Captain Ryan, Georgetown second sacker, was the chief offender with the willow, collecting three round-trip smashes.

Pickups and Putouts

It's remarkable how one simple little boil can raise so much havoc with such a grand baseball opening. If it hadn't been for Vance's boil Petty probably never would have had a chance to hold the Giants to a lone hit at the Polo Grounds yesterday.

In the seventh inning Meusel, Kelly and Tyson went out by the air route on four pitched balls from Petty.

A man who can make a ball club play as Uncle Robbie coaxed Brooklyn to play yesterday can build a mansion out of a cigar box.

On the Brooklyn bench were five players who are basking in the sting waiting to get into the fray at any time when the Robins show any signs of weakness. They are Chic Fewster, Snooks Dowd, Johnny Butler, Babe Herman and Bissonette.

Zack Wheat hasn't been hitting much this Spring up to yesterday. As soon as the hits started to count in the averages, which was yesterday, Zach went out and had a perfect day, with a double, two singles, a walk and a sacrifice fly.

Colonel Ruppert of the Yankees entertained numerous joyous thoughts during the game. He commanded if his Yanks could trim the Robins a dozen straight and the Robins could beat the Giants, what would his Yanks do to the Giants?

It took just fifty minutes to play the first two and a half innings. Not a single player was overheated.

The Giants had better back up. Only 153 more games to play.

The important fact came home to the Robins yesterday that the exhibition season was over, but to the Giants an important fact came home at all. Their minds were on the glorious sunsets in far off Sarasota.

There were two ways only to keep warm. One was to be a Brooklyn rooter and wave your arms and throw your hat in the air, the other was to devour a few of the Harry Stevens edition of hot-dogs.

St. Louis Leader Responds to Trophy Award by Getting Three Hits in Three Times at Bat.

ST. LOUIS, April 13 (AP).—The St. Louis Cardinals initiated the 1926 baseball season with a 7 to 6 victory over the world's champion Pittsburgh Pirates here today before 17,000 fans.

First Baseman Bottomley's home run with two men on the bases in the fifth inning featured and clinched the contest for St. Louis.

Manager Rogers Hornsby of the Cardinals received two floral pieces and a most popular player trophy awarded by a Cleveland news agency. Hornsby then turned in a perfect day at bat, getting three hits in three official times at bat, one of them being a double.

Here From Coast, Kearns Will Meet Rickard Today

KEARNS TO CONFER AT GARDEN TODAY

PRAISES NEW HEAVYWEIGHT

Bouts With Wills and Tunney Are Objectives of Dorval—Walker Will Visit Scranton.

By JAMES P. DAWSON.

Jack Kearns arrived here yesterday morning, singing the praises of Napoleon Dorval and breathing defiance of Jack Dempsey. As dapper-appearing as ever, but more settled as compared to the carefree, flambouyant Kearns who visited New York as the pilot of the world's heavyweight champion, Kearns, here from the Coast and accompanied by Dorval and Teddy Hayes, will prepare Mickey Walker for the title struggle with Pete Latzo at Scranton on May 17.

Kearns and Walker are to go to Scranton this morning to look over the situation in the coal mining region and to sign contracts for the Walker-Latzo fight.

Before leaving the city Kearns will have a conference with Promoter Tex Rickard, but developments of this conference will be absolutely confidential, if indications of yesterday are any criterion. Kearns said his business with Rickard will be in connection with prospective matches for Dorval. He phoned the promoter late yesterday afternoon and made an appointment for this morning.

Rickard said the business was of a purely private nature and had no relation to prospective bouts. The subject the pair will discuss, of course, revolves about Dempsey and his heavyweight title, but it is doubtful if anything will be made public concerning the conference.

Kearns, apparently, was more enthused over Dorval as a heavyweight title possibility than he was when he started the long climb with Dempsey to the top. The Coast manager expressed his faith in the ability of the newcomer and declared he was ready to match Dorval against any aspiring heavyweights who cared to box him.

Willis and Tunney are the objectives of Kearns's contemplated campaign with Dorval, but the manager declared these matches will be sought only after Dorval has been thoroughly tested and has received an opportunity to benefit by careful grooming.

RUDOLPH STILL AHEAD OF RALPH GREENLEAF

With four of the twelve blocks of the 1,500-to-1,250 match completed, the score stands: Greenleaf, 479; Rudolph, 408. Greenleaf is playing 125 to the block, while Rudolph's objective is 100. A capacity crowd watched Greenleaf make a high run of 30 in the fifteen-inning afternoon match to his rival's 13. Rudolph made the highest run in the twenty-five-inning game in the evening, making 27 to Greenleaf's 26.

The men will play the last two blocks on even terms, the objective of each to be 125 for each block.

FRANK TABERSKI EXPLAINS.

Says He Cannot Arrange Satisfactory Contract With Greenleaf.

DETROIT, April 13 (AP).—Frank Taberski of Schenectady, N. Y., who claims the world's pocket billiard championship, has not met Ralph Greenleaf, challenger, because a satisfactory contract cannot be arranged, his manager announced here today. Taberski is playing exhibitions here.

Taberski's manager says Greenleaf is under contract with a billiard supply manufacturing company which will not permit him to meet Taberski except in championship tournaments. Taberski, it is stated, will not sign a tournament contract because it requires him to defend his title each thirty days, and he is not willing to defend the title oftener than four times a year.

Taberski has offered, his manager says, to play Greenleaf the best 13 out of 25 games, but Greenleaf has not answered the offer.

REISELT DUE HERE TODAY.

Three-Cushion Champion to Confer on Terms for Special Match.

A meeting between Otto Reiselt of Philadelphia, world's three-cushion champion, and Charles S. Kline of the Strand Academy, is scheduled for this afternoon when terms for a special match to be staged here will be discussed. Promoter Kline, who just returned from a three months' vacation in Bermuda, said yesterday that he virtually had closed with Reiselt to meet the outstanding three-cushion players in a series of matches here, finishing his work with a special match against Willie Hoppe.

OTHER BILLIARD RESULTS.

Edward S. Knapp won his match against Jacob Ward last night in the Poggenburg Cup 18.2 billiard handicap tourney, now in progress at Lawler Brothers' Brooklyn Academy. The score was Knapp 125, Ward 107, both men playing for 125. The game went to thirty innings, and, although losing, Ward had a high run of 21 to Knapp's best string of 20.

Paul Watson defeated Edward L. Mayer, 100 to 48, at the Recreation Billiard Academy, Brooklyn, last night, in a New York State amateur championship pocket billiard match. The match went to fifty-six innings, the winner getting a high run of 14 and the loser 8. William Watson will meet Jack J. Hickey in the tournament tonight.

George V. Lyons took first prize in the weekly handicap 18.2 balkline tournament at the Amateur Billiard Club last night. Second honors went to H. L. Behrens. In the club's Class B three-cushion handicap tourney, Joseph G. Raleigh won from Dr. J. M. Slabey, 22 to 19. Raleigh had a high run of 5 and Slabey 3.

BOXING BOUTS TONIGHT.

Miss Collett to Try Again For Golf Title of Britain

PROVIDENCE, R. I., April 13 (AP).—A second invasion of Great Britain in quest of the women's golf championship will be made by Miss Glenna Collett, national women's golf champion, who will compete in the women's open at Hasleoh, Wales, on May 10. Miss Collett's entry has just been made and she will carry the colors of the Rhode Island Country Club. She probably will sail from New York next Saturday and will be accompanied by three other noted American women golfers. Miss Mae O'Gorman of this city will act as chaperone, and may also enter the tournament. The others will include Miss Mary K. Browne, Jeannett Kenney of Cleveland and Rosamond Sherwood of New York.

SQUASH TENNIS MEN ARE BEATEN, 450-176

Squash Racquets Players Win All Ten Matches in First Day of Novel Series.

A squash tennis player may be a champion in his element but when he steps on a squash racquet court he sometimes isn't worth much more than an average of 5 points a game. Champions and ex-champions of squash tennis invaded the courts of the University Club yesterday for the first day of play in the novel squash tennis-squash racquets match. When the smoke of battle lifted, ten squash tennis players had won just one game.

The team scoring the greatest aggregate of points at both games will be declared the winner. Each match at both games consists of three games and the object of the players is not so much to win games as it is to hold his opponent's points down to a minimum. The squash racquets players won all ten matches and scored 450 points yesterday, while the squash tennis men got 176.

Ellis Faster Than Hyde.

Fillmore Hyde of the Harvard Club, national amateur squash tennis champion, was opposed to A. R. E. Ellis of the University Club, who held the metropolitan squash racquets title two seasons ago in the No. 1 match. Ellis ran away with the opening game at 15–5 before Hyde was able to get the hang of the game. Ellis's fast service and placements that hugged the side wall and his changes of pace kept Hyde on the defensive.

In the second game the play was even until Hyde led at 9–8. Ellis then went ahead at 14–9, putting him within a point of the game. Hyde then showed some of the clever racquet work that makes him the best player in the squash tennis ranks and made a run of 5, to tie the score at 14–14. Ellis took the next three points and kept Hyde on the defensive throughout the third game, which went at 15–8.

Rand Wins One Game.

William Rand Jr. of the Harvard Club, who lost his national squash tennis title this year, won the only game that went to the invaders. He took the third chapter from Darwin P. Kingsley of the University Club at 15–13 and made a good fight in the two other games. Tevis Huhn of the Princeton Club, metropolitan titleholder at squash racquets last year, defeated Tom Coward of the Yale Club, former squash tennis champion, at 15–5, 15–6, 15–9. R. Earl Fink of the Montclair A. C., who formerly held the squash tennis championship before he changed to the game of squash racquets, defeated G. M. Rushmore of the Harvard Club at 15–4, 15–6, 16–6.

The summaries:

A. E. Ellis, University, defeated Fillmore Hyde, Harvard, 15–5, 17–14, 15–8; Tevis Huhn, Princeton, defeated Thomas Coward, Yale, 15–5, 15–8, 15–9; R. W. Gilmore, University, defeated H. R. Mixsell, Princeton, 15–1, 15–2, 15–3; R. F. De Voe, University, defeated Rowland Haines, Columbia, 15–1, 15–9, 15–6; Darwin P. Kingsley, University, defeated William Rand Jr., Harvard, 15–8, 15–10, 13–15; P. K. Keenan, Montclair, defeated Otis L. Guernsey, 15–1, 15–8, 15–6; C. J. Hutchins, Harvard, defeated Gavin Brackenridge, 15–7, 15–5, 15–7; R. Earl Fink, Montclair, defeated G. M. Rushmore, Harvard, 15–4, 15–6, 15–5; Henry Harper, Rockaway, defeated G. G. Davidson, Crescent, 15–8, 15–6, 15–2; Royal E. T. Riggs, University, defeated A. J. Cordier, Yale, 15–8, 15–2, 15–4.

STECHER DOWNS S. ZBYSZKO

Gains Two of Three Falls In Mat Contest at Atlanta.

ATLANTA, April 13 (AP).—Joe Stecher, world's heavyweight wrestling titleholder, defeated Stanislaus Zbyszko, veteran Pole, in two out of three falls in a match for the title here tonight.

Stecher won the first fall with a body scissors after 43 minutes and 26 seconds. Zbyszko then came back and took the next fall in 11:04. The third fall came when Stecher caught the Pole in another body scissors in 13 minutes.

GARDINI BAFFLES PODDUBNY

Holds Off Russian, Who Agrees to Throw Him and Ressl, Within Hour.

NEWARK, N. J., April 13 (AP).—Ivan Poddubny, giant Russian, tonight failed to throw Renato Gardini, one of his two Italian opponents, within an hour, as agreed, as the result of this Giovanni Ressl, who was to face the Russian if Gardini were thrown, did not appear.

In a finish bout Wladek Zbyszko of Poland threw Yousuf Hussane in fifteen minutes with a headlock. Charlie Hanson, Swedish champion, downed Paul Azzario of Italy in twenty minutes, using a wrist lock.

Stribling Knocks Out Marvin.

OKLAHOMA CITY, April 13 (AP).—W. L. (Young) Stribling, light heavyweight, knocked out Tommy Marvin of Hot Springs, Ark., in the third round of a scheduled ten-round exhibition bout here tonight.

Tommy Loughran Beats Kirby.

BOSTON, April 13 (AP).—Tommy Loughran of Philadelphia won the decision from Tom Kirby of Boston in a ten-round bout here tonight. Loughran weighed 173 and Kirby 167.

Farr Outpoints Pete Sarmiento.

CLEVELAND, April 13 (AP).—Johnny Farr, 124, Cleveland, tonight won the referee's decision from Pete Sarmiento, 123, Chicago, in a fast twelve-round bout.

CORNELL-PRINCETON WILL GO TO LONDON

Invitation of Oxford-Cambridge for Track and Field Games in July Ratified.

MEET AT STAMFORD BRIDGE

American Team, Which Sails June 26, Expected to Be Better Than That of Last Year.

Special to The New York Times.

PRINCETON, N. J., April 13.—The invitation extended to Cornell and Princeton by Oxford and Cambridge for a track and field meet in London this Summer, tentatively accepted after the meet at Atlantic City last Summer, has been ratified by the athletic authorities of both universities, Dr. Charles W. Kennedy, Chairman of the Princeton Board of Athletics Control, said here today.

The meet will take place at Stamford Bridge on July 10. About twenty-five Cornell and Princeton athletes will sail June 26. Upon their arrival on Independence Day they will start training with the Englishmen at Queens Club, where they are looking forward to renewing friendships made at Princeton last Summer.

The international meet in London should prove a closer contest than the one in this country last Summer, Douglas Lowe of Cambridge, Olympic middle-distance runner; Vernon Morgan of Oxford, Olympic two-miler, and Bill Stevenson of Oxford, intercollegiate champion in the quarter while at Princeton, have completed their studies at their respective universities, and, although Arthur Porritt of Oxford, sprinter, and Lord David Burghley, hurdler, are still eligible for competition, it is doubtful that the Englishmen will present the same phenomenal array that they did last year.

Princeton and Cornell experts are still indefinite, but it is probable that they will have a better-balanced team this Summer.

COLUMBIA LETHARGY DISGUSTS CROWLEY

Coach Threatens to Discontinue Spring Work-Out When Only 23 Report for Football.

Only twenty-three men took part in Columbia's second day of Spring football practice at Baker Field yesterday afternoon, the turn-out being smaller by eleven than the number which had reported for the opening work-out. Head Coach Charley Crowley, who had already declared that between forty and fifty men were necessary if the sessions for the next three weeks are to produce results, was so disgusted with the poor showing that he threatened to discontinue the work-outs.

Fred Rieger, husky substitute halfback, reported and took part in the drill, along with Captain-elect Bill Madden and Mike Scott, veteran backfield mainstays, but Hick Brady, regular end who worked out Monday, was not present. Coach Crowley will be able to draw very few of his 1925 varsity first-stringers and substitutes for the Spring grind, for most of them are engaged in other sports.

A run around the upper gridiron started yesterday's activities. Ray Wagner then took the ends in charge and set them to work on the tackling dummies, while the five linemen who attended were drilled in the correct distance for position play by Coach Brodil. The backs had a work-out in passing and punting by Coach Murray, and both backs and ends took part in a drill in which the wingmen got down under kicks and practiced taking out opponents.

Head Coach Richard Glendon Jr. made a shift in his junior varsity crew boating yesterday when he switched Joe Davis from No. 4 to stroke, and Dave Duncan from stroke to the former's old seat. Davis stroked the varsity eight at Poughkeepsie last June, but Lohr, another veteran, is now stroke in the first shell. The three varsity, three freshmen and two 150-pound boats went out on the Hudson again for their daily work-out.

Miss Maureen Orcutt, New Jersey State and Eastern women's golf champion, won the putting contest for women at Gimbel Brothers department store yesterday. The prize was a handbag. A. Wynne won the putting contest for men, the prize for which was a steel-faced driver. Both events were held in the metropolitan putting competition in progress at the store this week.

SEES HARVARD HURT BY TOO MANY COOKS

President Lowell, However, Believes Situation Solved by Bingham's One-Man Control Now.

BACKS HIM TO THE LIMIT

Committee Rule of Past Scored—Intercollegiate Sport Praised as Incentive to Exercise.

BOSTON, April 13 (AP).—Harvard's athletics have had too many cooks in the past.

President A. Lawrence Lowell made that declaration last night at a dinner in honor of the intercollegiate champion Harvard hockey team.

He also decried a movement to abolish intercollegiate sport. "It would abolish a mainspring of incentive to exercise for men who can never be good enough to make any team," he asserted.

"A reasonable amount of victories is essential, I believe, if exercise is to gain the respect of those who will not shine in sports.

"Harvard athletics, conducted by an athletic committee in the past, had 'too many cooks.' Did you ever hear of an army run by a committee? Now athletic control has been centred in one man, William J. Bingham.

"Abraham Lincoln learned something in the course of the war. At first, when a General met defeat he chopped his head off without compunction, but he learned something. He learned to back Grant after the defeat of Cold Harbor.

"Mr. Bingham would be one of the last to believe that his advent will be marked by an uninterrupted string of victories. He has no bed of roses, nor of elderdown. I ask the alumni not to growl over defeat. I pledge him my support in fair weather and foul."

President Clarence C. Little of Michigan University, a Harvard alumnus, saw the greatest crime of the age in any attempt to shorten youth. A unified control of athletics, he said, tended to bring sports within the scope of the ordinary undergraduate.

SPRING FOOTBALL STARTS FOR ARMY

Seventy Cadets Report and Are Introduced to Rugby Game as Training System.

Special to The New York Times.

WEST POINT, N. Y., April 13.—Spring football practice for West Point's gridiron squad got under way today, about seventy cadets appearing for the initial workout. At least sixty of those who reported were plebes, most of the veterans being on other Spring sport squads.

A rather novel innovation was the introduction of the Rugby game. A specially selected squad of over fifty men, in charge of Lieutenants Wicks and Knight, who were assistant coaches last year, were put through the Rugby plays. The West Point coaches believe that the new game will impart facility in handling the ball and alertness and maintain interest, as well as accomplish other fundamentals of straight football.

The football practice of the West Pointers will be in charge of Captain Sasse, end coach last Fall, who will work under the direction of Head Coach "Biff" Jones. Jones was here last week to set things in motion, but will not arrive to take up his duties as head coach until later in the season.

Huber Outpoints Paradise.

Johnny Huber of the 102d Medical Regiment, weighing 120, outpointed Eddie Paradise, Fourteenth Infantry, 122, in the main 8-round bout at the 102d Engineers Armory last night. A crowd of almost 2,000 attended. Huber was the more aggressive. In the 8-round semi-final Richie Martin of the 102d Medical Regiment, 129, fought a draw with Jimmy Bove.

Bowie Closes With Red Rocket Winner

RED ROCKET TAKES LAST BOWIE STAKE

CAMOUFLAGE IS SET BACK

Runs First, but Draws Disqualification for Cutting Across Field in Second—Kilauea Falls in Stretch.

By HENRY R. ILSLEY.

Special to The New York Times.

BOWIE, Md., April 13.—Red Rocket, the Pastime Stable's brown son of Mont d'Or II, ran within two-fifths of a second of the track record to win the first running of the Bowie Kindergarten Stakes, the new juvenile fixture that was the leading number on the getaway day card at the Prince Georges Park this afternoon.

Under top weight of 119 pounds and with W. Smith in the pilot's seat, Red Rocket ran out in front all the way, winning cleverly in 0:48 1-5. He was second choice in a field of five, and paid $3.10 for each $2 in the mutuels. The race was worth $1,360 to the owner of the winner.

With the sun shining intermittently, although there was still a chill in the air, a large crowd turned out for the last day. Small fields again were the rule. There was plenty of excitement, what with close finishes, a disqualification and a fall.

W. Constantine's Camouflage was disqualified after finishing first in the second race. G. E. Pruett's Kilauea fell in the home stretch in the same race, but neither the gelding nor his rider, V. Wallis, was seriously hurt.

Whitney Entry in Bars.

Some of the interest was detracted from the Kindergarten Stakes by the withdrawal of the H. P. Whitney entry of Captain Kettle and Florian. A. F. Reinhardt's colt Best Friend was made the public choice. He was always in the contention, but was unable to head Red Rocket, the latter winning by half a length. A length separated Best Friend and the Capital Stable's Bobby Jones, which was backed from an opening of 20 to 1 to 5 to 1.

The second of the dashes of six and a half furlongs out of the chute was the one that provided the thrills. Kilauea went down at the seventy-yard post and at the end came old Camouflage's disqualification for cutting across his field in the stretch drive.

It was anybody's race from start to finish. Kilauea had a slight lead at the far turn, where the field bunched up, and they fought it out around the turn. Harvey brought Camouflage up on the outside, but finished on the inside rail, the field jamming up at the eighth pole.

Poor Sport Runs Third.

Camouflage came home a length in front of Lieutenant Farrell, which received first money after the disqualification. Poor Sport ran third, being free of interference. Hobson was the worst sufferer by Camouflage's bearing over, and Froggate was forced to take up on the gelding. He took fourth money.

When Kilauea went down Jockey Wallis was thrown clear. The gelding was quickly on his feet, but Wallis was dazed. He was picked up, and after resting a bit was able to walk to the jockey room.

The favorite was just up to win by a nose in the claiming race at a mile and a sixteenth for three-year-olds and upward. E. P. Summerfield's Drumbeat, Tammaro up, just getting up to gain the decision from Fleetwood. F. E. Smith's Macbeth made the early pace, but failed to stick it out, finishing fourth.

Poor Sport, on the inside throughout, was weakly handled in the final drive.

YATES WINS MEDAL IN PINEHURST GOLF

PINEHURST, N. C., April 13.—Arthur W. Yates of Rochester won another medal here today when he romped off with the qualifying round of the annual mid-April tournament. Yates scored a 77 and played very steady golf all the day. The day was rather wet and rainy, but the weather was not bad enough to affect the golf to any appreciable extent. Yates's only bad spot was a six at the second, where he sat in the woods and took three putts.

Yates's card was as follows:

Field of 20 Named for $10,000 Harford, Feature of the Initial Program.

SINGLE FOOT IS AT TOP

Griffith's Star Must Pick Up 124 Pounds, While Whitney's Noah Is In at 121.

Special to The New York Times.

HAVRE DE GRACE, Md., April 13.—The Harford Agricultural and Breeders' Association will open its thirteen-day Spring meeting here tomorrow with a program that should develop the best thoroughbred sport of the Eastern season to date.

Maryland and racing has suffered thus far from cold and rain and the backwardness of the training, few of the horses prepared at the New York centres having put in an appearance. Many stables make their debut here and there have been numerous shipments arriving from Long Island during the last few days, while the exodus from Bowie has been going on for a week.

For the $10,000 Harford Handicap for three-year-olds and upward over the course of six furlongs twenty have been named with J. E. Griffith's Single Foot given top weight of 124 pounds. H. P. Whitney's Noah is in at three pounds less. Joy Smoke is under 119 pounds and among the others are Sunsard with 115 and Wilderness and Golden Rule with 113 pounds.

The entries for tomorrow follow (AP):

THE PLAY

By J. BROOKS ATKINSON.

Barrie in Revival.

WHAT EVERY WOMAN KNOWS, a play in four acts, by Sir James M. Barrie. Staged by Lumsden Hare; revived by Lee Shubert and William A. Brady. At the Bijou Theatre.

John Shand.....Kenneth MacKenna
Alick Wylie.....Dennis Cleugh
David Wylie.....Eugene Weber
James Wylie.....Jack Terry
Maggie Wylie.....Helen Hayes
Mr. Venables.....Lumsden Hare
Countess de la Briere.....Adelaide Prince
Lady Sybil Lasenby.....Ross Hobert
Maid.....Dora Micawber
Butler.....Alfred Pixley
First Elector.....A. O. Huhan
Second Elector.....Vincent York
Third Elector.....Harry Hatch

If the revival of Sir James M. Barrie's comedy, "What Every Woman Knows," mounted at the Bijou last evening, generally misses the crispness of so thoroughly Scotch a fantasy, Miss Hayes in the leading rôle makes adequate compensation by several moments of superlative poignancy. At the close of the third act, for instance, after the canny Maggie has boldly put all her eggs in one basket by manoeuvring a renegade husband into a fortnight with his hollow-pated and titled butterfly—at the close of this act Maggie's natural emotions overpower her for the first time. In such moments the naturalness of Miss Hayes's expression, always quite frank and fairly artless, proves thoroughly affecting; and once or twice the current revival makes this profound test of her talents. By experiencing the emotion herself she conveys it across the footlights in direct and equal proportion. These are moments of genuine beauty. Last evening the audience applauded enthusiastically these two or three scenes that are so moving in their tangle of womanly emotions and that are heightened perceptibly by Miss Hayes's acting.

Notwithstanding these deeply stirring scenes Miss Hayes is not yet quite up to the interpretation of so full-bodied a part. And although her abilities have broadened and taken firm root since her first diaphanous and fragile embodiments of Barriesque creation, this Maggie is a woman of tougher substance than Miss Hayes communicates. In brief, she is a woman of uncommon spirit. Consider the firm decisions her career requires of her when only her intuition and cosmic wisdom point the way. In the first place, she risks her chances of marriage on a boorish, poor-student railway-hand in the strangest of bargainings. At least twice in the remainder of the play she deliberately puts all her riches in a single leaky bottom and prays that her silly ship may ride out the cruelest gales. These incidents, as well as many sharp turns in the dialogue, portray Maggie as a high-spirited Scotch lassie, daring, proud and sometimes arrogant. In general Miss Hayes relies too much upon her extraordinarily appealing charm in the portrayal of so real and complex a personage. Her most appealing scenes transmute this same charm into a tenderness quite beyond description.

As John Shand, the obtuse and ambitious husband whose egotism blinds him to Maggie's superb wisdom, Mr. MacKenna misses the stiffness and almost militant pride upon which the drama largely depends. By his definition John emerges as rather too much a gentleman, too much a man of ordinary understanding. Certainly the enjoyment of the revival would be greatly enhanced by a rough, ambitious, thoroughly boorish Scotchman as humorless and stubborn as Barrie conceived him. Like Miss Hayes, Mr. MacKenna proves most effective in the emotional scenes. When in the last act the light of truth begins to penetrate even his thick, well-nigh impervious breast, Mr. MacKenna's John Shand matches the playwright's conception perfectly. For in this scene John Shand resembles an ordinary man, responsive to ordinary appeals, and Mr. MacKenna plays him throughout the comedy in much the same spirit.

Of the remaining actors, Mr. Hare as Venables gives the most sympathetic interpretation. As David Wylie, the masterful butler, Mr. Weber is amusing and forceful. In general the performance needs molding and needs interpretation of the sly nuances of Sir James's peculiar humor. Although the production may be fairly described as serviceable, and last evening kept the audience generally entertained, it loses a good deal of the lustre of the playwright's composition.

In a sense, however, Barrie's plays are proved against acting, as the delight in reading them may indicate. For they fit the theatre neatly, they visualize action, and the dialogue glows throughout. Of course, what every man of common sense knows about "What Every Woman Knows" is that the dramatist's conception is obvious buncombe. For this comedy, written by a man, is no less than a libel on all mankind, yielding to women all the glorious achievements of the sterner, more hirsute sex. Worse: it reveals the men as oblivious of feminine guidance.

In spite of the obvious perversions of fact that one can scarcely regard with intellectual equanimity, and that as obviously strike to the very roots of our golden civilization, Sir James makes out a case not to be cast petulantly aside. And while the more flamboyant playwrights are indecently anatomizing their quivering souls in public, this tranquil, sentimental comedy proves more than commonly delightful. One hesitates to add that it is cheerful. Or that it is entertaining. For such direct qualities are no longer the fashion. Apparently "What Every Woman Knows" has not been played here in regular engagements since the Maude Adams revival of 1909. Even in the present mixed performance, it is piquant and enjoyable.

SHE QUITS LAW FOR STAGE.

By Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, April 13.—Mlle. Alice Dufrene, once one of the most promising women attorneys of the Paris bar, having secretly abandoned the legal profession to devote herself to the stage, made her first appearance yesterday at the Odeon Theatre as Camille in Alfred de Musset's "Pas avec l'Amour." She had an enthusiastic reception by a critical audience.

The daughter of a prominent Parisian actress, Balconee Dufrene, who was Sarah Bernhardt's favorite pupil, Mlle. Alice Dufrene had been brought up in theatrical circles. She early took up the study of law "to escape the seduction of the stage." Despite her brilliant success as a lawyer, however, she was unable to resist the theatrical calling, and two years ago secretly began to prepare for the profession she now has taken up, apparently with equal promise.

'THE BELLS' RING AGAIN IN HANDSOME REVIVAL

Rollo Lloyd the Star Player in Drama of Good Old-Style at Bayes Theatre.

THE BELLS, a play in three acts, by Leopold Lewis, dramatized from the story, "The Polish Jew," by MM. Erckmann Chatrain. Settings by Yellenti; staged by Rollo Lloyd; revived by A. H. and H. R. Woods. At the Bayes Theatre.

In the course of a theatrical Springtime devoted largely to revivals it was perhaps an odds-on bet that somebody would think of "The Bells" sooner or later. In this instance the thinking was done by the Brothers Riskin, and the result was a rather handsome presentation of the piece last night on the stage of the lofty Bayes.

Perhaps "The Bells" may be easiest identified by calling up the magic name of Sir Henry Irving—it is, in fact, an association that the program at the Bayes does not leave unmentioned—but there is also a chance that the present generation of playgoers is more likely to remember the actor named Thomas E. Shea, who carried the play up and down the land not so many years ago. In the revival at the Bayes the leading rôle is entrusted to Rollo Lloyd, only moderately known in these parts as an actor. The road, however, knows him well in the part.

"The Bells" may be described as good old-style stuff—hardly anything of a play, but affording grand opportunity for its star player to deliver himself of great, roaring soliloquies, all concerned with the gnawing of conscience for a crime committed years before. In those days, it seemed, conscience was not content to whisper—it took the centre of the stage and said it right out loud. And it is so that Mr. Lloyd plays it—the only way, of course, that such a role could possibly be played.

A good three-quarters of the play is devoted to these guilty soliloquies. The sleigh bells that accompanied them seemed pretty insistent last night, although Mr. Lloyd dispenses with the green-lighted face of the Polish Jew himself, an apparition which used to whip Mr. Shea up to fresh frenzies. Both Mr. Lloyd and the play are at their best in the dream scene in the final act. Up to that time the actor had been rather uninteresting, but in the final act he took a certain fire and carried the audience along with him.

Not a little pains have been expended in the production, and one finds John H. Brewer and J. M. Kerrigan helping along by carrying distinctly minor assignments. And there is also scenery by the capable Yellenti.

'CRAIG'S WIFE' VOTED BEST PLAY OF 1925

George Kelly Wins the Theatre Club's Medal—Channing Pollock's 'The Enemy' Second.

The Theatre Club, Inc., yesterday afternoon selected the play "Craig's Wife," by George Kelly, as the best American play of 1925, and will present to Mr. Kelly next month its gold medal, significant of this distinction.

The meeting was held at the Hotel Astor. Forty-seven per cent. of the society's membership voted. More than 300 of the 550 members present chose Mr. Kelly's play without hesitation.

"The Enemy," by Channing Pollock, won second place with 36 per cent. of the vote. "Great God Brown" and "The Great Gatsby" each received about 4 per cent., and scattering ballots were cast for "Easy Come, Easy Go," "One of the Family," "A Man's Man," "Lucky Sam McCarver" and "The Butter and Egg Man."

This is the sixteenth year that the society has awarded its medal for what it considers the best play of the year written by an American and produced in the United States.

Mrs. Albert A. Snowden is President of the society, and Mrs. Arthur L. Johnson is Chairman of the Award Committee.

Miss Trix and Bert Coot to Head Cast of "The International."

Albert Lewis announced yesterday for late Summer production an intimate musical revue to be called "The International Revue." George Jessel is said to have suggested the idea of the entertainment and will be associated with Mr. Lewis in its presentation. It is planned to embody the high spots of "Trick's Revue," which Helen Trix played at the Apollo Theatre in London, a French revue and an American musical production. English, French and American performers will be engaged. Miss Trix and Bert Coot will head the cast. Mr. Jessel will write the American material and Irving Berlin is mentioned as composer of the music.

Sir Thomas Lipton on Radio.

Sir Thomas Lipton is scheduled to talk on the radio tonight at 9:30 o'clock through station WOR. Sir Thomas said yesterday that he had broadcast only once before and that was three years ago from the same station.

MUSIC

By OLIN DOWNES.

Philadelphia Orchestra.

A feeling of joy saturated those who find pleasure in expressions of public emotion when the Philadelphia Orchestra under its peerless leader performed Edgar Varese's "Amériques" for the first time in this city last night in Carnegie Hall. No sooner had the last of the strange sounds of Mr. Varese disappeared in the silence when the audience commenced to demonstrate—to hiss, to applaud, to gesticulate, even to whistle and bawl. This lasted for some moments and was considerably more exhilarating than the composition, although that, too, had had its amusing moments. In the midst of the racket Mr. Stokowski kept returning to the stage, acknowledging with urbanity the applause and the noise that disputed it, and signaling his players to rise and acknowledge by this action the tribute to their courage and skill. Mr. Varese was present, though he refrained from appearing on the stage. He, too, should have felt complacent. His music, which we believe to be utterly false, is also, in its way, sure-fire reclame.

Every trick that is of surface quality is found in this score, while evidence of genuine workmanship and creative thought is conspicuously absent. There are some interesting orchestral sounds, but there are no enchained ideas, or ideas of any kind, apparently, save those that other composers had thoughtlessly written down before Mr. Varese appeared. Old friends from Stravinsky, Strauss and others make a bow and then a quick exit. Rising and falling glissandos on various instruments have a prominent place and are becoming monotonous in Mr. Varese's scores. He employs an enormous orchestra and some dissonances with a real bite in them to picture what is described as "a mood of exhilaration engendered by the thought of the New World as it presents itself to the imagination of a young foreigner." As for the form, it is regarded by the composer as that of absolute music—"a development of thematic material on a strictly formal and abstract plane." As for the content, there is whistling and clanging, effects which seem to be inevitable in these days in any musical portrayal of civilization. Incidentally, no one need feel that Mr. Varese is ignorant of how to make an orchestra sound and evolve from its instruments striking resonances. It is only a pity that this knowledge is not used for more than exterior effects calculated to impress the gullible.

The remainder of the program consisted of Sibelius's early tone-poem "The Swan of Tuoneia," the Mozart "Jupiter" symphony, and the Bach C minor organ passacaglia in Mt. Stokowski's famous orchestral transcription. How far may a conductor go in reinterpreting the ideas of the composer? The answer must lie partly in the quality and importance of the music. The interpretation of Sibelius's piece was not at all that indicated and desired by its author. We happen to have heard Sibelius direct the work, but the score indicates a slower tempo than Mr. Stokowski's and an different atmosphere than the one he established. The mood of the original is contemplative, melancholy, aloof. Mr. Stokowski gave the composition movement and passion. In so doing he expressed himself rather than the composer, and for many the result justified him.

But what shall be said of Mr. Stokowski's distorted and prettified version of the Mozart symphony? Its overflowing current of inspiration flagged again and again because of retards and uncalled-for sentimentalisms. The C major symphony is not a mystery, but a work that glows with light and song. Last night it was painted and upholstered. The final movement survived Mr. Stokowski's treatment rather better than the others, for it is so bold and fiery and powerful in its frame that its inner force is equal to almost any handicap. But all this was far from a revelation of Mozart.

The performance of the passacaglia recompensed for much. The organ color and quality is reproduced remarkably by Mr. Stokowski, but his interpretation is far more than a successful exhibition of the ingenuities of the transcriber. He is here the high priest of an art, utilizing the resources of the orchestra to afford yet more sonority than the organ can supply, intent upon the superb architectonics of Bach, reverently illuminating his majestic inspiration for the multitude. This was a fitting conclusion of the concert, the last one to be given by the Philadelphians this season in New York City, and the audience was quick to show its enthusiasm.

VIOLINIST IN DEBUT.

Miss Carolyn Le Fevre Makes an Agreeable Impression.

Carolyn Le Fevre, a violinist, of Santa Monica, Cal., who has played on the Pacific Coast as well as with the Berlin Philharmonic during study years abroad, made her bow to New York last evening at Aeolian Hall. Besides an ambitious adagio and fugue from Bach's first sonata for violin alone, she gave, with Walter Golde at the piano, Bruch's G minor concerto, Saint-Saens's "Rondo Capriccioso" and pieces by Glazunov, Elman and Kreisler.

Miss Le Fevre made an agreeable impression of musical intelligence and personal charm. With a good technical equipment she displayed a maturing style, clarity of tone and rhythmic phrasing, distinctively her own, in spite of some unvanquished diffidence of the young player.

By MORDAUNT HALL.

The "Russian Revolution."

THE VOLGA BOATMAN, with William Boyd, Elinor Fair, Robert Edeson, Victor Varconi, Julia Faye, Theadore Kosloff and Arthur Rankin; adapted from a story by Konrad Bercovici, directed by Cecil B. De Mille; special music score by Dr. Hugo Riesenfeld. At the Times Square Theatre.

They dance to rhythmic music or struggle and sweat to a dirge-like air on a towpath; they gorge or starve, shout or become mute, live or die, according to Cecil B. De Mille's will, in "The Volga Boatman," a weird Hollywood dream of the Russian Revolution, which was presented last night with due pomp before a critical audience in the Times Square Theatre. In this feature panting men and women pause during dramatic interludes and seem to accomplish the impossible. There are contrasts that are often grotesque or absurd, but some scenes are emphatically stirring, especially those depicting the Volga boatmen singing their favorite song as they tugaladened craft down the river. The production as a whole, however, causes one to reflect that it is unfortunate that Mr. De Mille has nobody to say him nay.

In an introductory title Mr. De Mille sets forth that he is non-partisan in his narrative, and as his hero is a boatman and his heroine a Russian Princess he holds fairly consistently to this idea. Nevertheless the Reds appear to have the best of the bargain, for the Czarist officers are portrayed as the most outrageous scoundrels, tearing the garments from a woman and striving to make her dance for them on a table. While the sequences dealing with this bestial conduct are unfuried the woman is not seen, but Mr. De Mille has elicited from his brutal contingent of officers, grimaces and lascivious looks to give one the full suggestion of what is occurring.

To counterbalance this Mr. De Mille has the revolutionists in another chapter dining and wining in a palatial hall, amusing themselves between ravenous mouthfuls by drawing with blood strange faces on the backs of women in evening dress.

There is nothing restrained in this film, either in the acting or the dramatic periods. The Volga boatmen are pictured like galley slaves. They tug in harness until they drop from fatigue, and yet one ponders that there are many of them to pull a craft that is not frightfully imposing. It is therefore never convincing, and the performance given by William Boyd in the rôle of Feodor, the heroic boatman, lives up to he De Millean exaggerated notions. Then there is Elinor Fair as the Princess Vera, who appears to be strangely cheerful in the most frightful passages of this photoplay.

Some conception of this story can be gathered from one particular chapter in which Feodor agrees to take the Princess into a room to shoot her. He locks the door on the wild throng of which he then is leader. He is to put a bullet through the heart of the attractive heroine in five minutes. It really seems to the spectators that she has fully fifteen minutes before the last minute comes. Feodor has looked into eyes that he loves, and instead of leveling his revolver at the spot Vera has marked with a cross he takes the Princess in his arms and embraces her.

There are then only a few seconds, but Feodor is a resourceful person, even though he has struggled on a towpath for years. He tells the high-born lady to fall on the carpet and then proceeds to pour red wine on her to make the mad mob think it is blood. They hammer on the door after hearing the pistol shot. And they might have believed she was dead if Marinska, a Tartar camp follower, had not discovered that the red fluid was not blood, but wine. With marvelous ease Feodor escapes his angry followers, and soon he is safe in an inn miles away, having driven there in a ramshackle cart attached to three hefty horses.

They are thought to be bride and bridegroom, and for that reason are sent to a room. But soon afterward the Czarist troops arrive and the boatman and the Princess are discovered. It is the Princess who is insulted by the troops commanded by her fiancé, Prince Dimitri. He covers her with his overcoat, and after pauses and silly acting the Prince takes her to a palace. Feodor is strung up by his wrists to a gate, while the Princess, as if nothing untoward had happened, garbs herself in a stunning evening dress and a tiara. Hence one has the opportunity of gazing upon beauty attractively arrayed and poor Feodor suffering prior to being shot. Such a hero must live, however, and therefore the Red fighters arrive on the scene to take their turn as despoilers.

When the narrative opens the revolutionists invade Prince Nikita's palace. They get to one door opening on to a room where the Prince and his daughter Vera are dining. The insurrectionists bang on it with the butts of their guns, but the door withstands the onslaught. The old servant goes to a panel, opens it, and appears to be asking whether any one knocked.

With the exception of the beautiful scenes on the river, including a delightful one of moonlight on the water, this photoplay is not a particularly brilliant entertainment. There are too many impossible ideas in it to appeal to any intelligent audience.

Dr. Hugo Riesenfeld's arrangement of the music score is deserving of a better film.

THE MILITARY AVIATION PROGRAMS.

Late in February the Committee on Naval Affairs reported to the House Admiral MOFFETT'S five-year building program for aviation. It included two dirigibles larger than the Shenandoah. "Air navigation," said the report, "is "necessarily a pioneering business. "Pioneering is always dangerous and "usually expensive." It was recommended that 1,614 planes be built in the five years ending June 30, 1931, at a cost not to exceed $85,078,750, an average of $17,015,750 a year. The aim was to provide the navy, allowing for expected loss and depreciation, with a complement of 1,000 serviceable planes. On Monday a bill to carry out the Moffett program passed the House. It may be described as the most constructive effort to equip the navy with an effective aviation arm since 1916, when war was expected.

In the intervening years the importance of military aviation has been constantly urged upon the attention of Congress, but it was not always well advised by the experts, because they disagreed even about essentials. The result was that no system of equipment and personnel emerged from the confusion of counsels. Money was not well spent upon year-to-year programs. The service records for speed and endurance, particularly those of the army, which carried out the round-the-world flight of Lieutenant LOWELL H. SMITH and his companions, contributed a great deal to the enlightenment of Congress. And then came the period of agitation for better planes and efficient corps organizations, followed by inquiries into existing conditions. Of all the investigations the one conducted by the Morrow board was the most useful in educating the country and in preparing Congress to legislate.

The bill embodying the Moffett program passed the House by the non-party vote of 207 to 39. Another measure, introduced in the Senate by Senator BINGHAM and in the House by Representative PARKER, provided for an additional Assistant Secretary in the Department of Commerce, to foster commercial aviation by establishing airways and airports. It also passed the House on Monday, and by a vote of 225 to 80. It had received the Senate's approval. The naval program bill contains a very welcome direction: that after three years' service an airplane shall be withdrawn from the first fighting line, the aim being that the navy of the future shall always have 1,000 modern planes ready for emergencies. The dirigibles to be built will have a capacity of about 6,500,000 cubic feet. The cost of the pair should be approximately $8,000,000.

The army as well as the navy is promised a five-year construction program, but at a greater estimated cost, $150,000,000. At the end of the period the army would have 2,200 planes and 10 dirigibles, together with necessary free and captive balloons. As the army bill was drawn, 90 per cent. of the Air Corps officers must be fliers, from which the higher commands would be filled. Service qualifications would be required. Air sections in the War Department General Staff are provided for. Inequalities and impediments to promotion complained of are smoothed away. Twenty per cent. of the pilots are to be enlisted men. To aid commercial aviation army landing stations are to be made available. It was at first reported that President COOLIDGE was opposed to the size of the appropriations asked for by the War and Navy Departments, but later it was intimated that he had been won over.

WOMEN ENDORSE WADSWORTH.

Puzzling things are the rule in politics, and occur so often as almost to exhaust the capacity to be surprised. But women in political life were expected to produce new wonders. One such must surely be put down to their credit. It is the unanimous endorsement of Senator WADSWORTH for re-election by the women members of the Republican organization in the State of New York. This in spite of all the mutterings of discontent and threats of a rival candidate! Look on this picture of New York and then on that of Washington. In the national capital women gather, representing millions of their sisters, to demand that the Volstead act be strengthened and strictly enforced, and that no man be voted for unless he is pledged to go the whole length of prohibition. Yet on the same day in New York Republican women rally enthusiastically in support of Senator WADSWORTH, an avowed Wet. In the very speech proposing endorsement of him, Mrs. SAGER, Republican National Committeewoman from New York, openly declared that the Senator does not believe in the Volstead act, and has publicly argued that it ought to be "modified and liberalized to the "end that the hypocrisy, corruption "and contempt for the law and the "Constitution so prevalent in the "country today may be overcome."

What is the explanation of this astonishing disagreement between women at Washington and women in New York? Politics. These ladies in this State have official positions in the Republican organization. They have the impulse to stand by it and its leader, just as do men. Senator WADSWORTH is headed straight for renomination by his party. He represents the band-wagon. Why expect that the fair sex in politics should not be as eager as the males to climb aboard it? We are accustomed to such strange performances in man the political animal, and we must be prepared to find them also in woman, when she turns political animal.

Nor can the phenomenon be limited to one State. When women go in for party politics they will not allow mere men to outdo them in unblinking loyalty to party names. Even on an issue like prohibition, which is called "moral," and in regard to which women voters were to be so much more discriminating and independent than men, it would appear that they will be disposed to walk in the old paths of party regularity. Thousands of women who will say in private that they believe in prohibition will be ready to vote for Senator WADSWORTH, who does not believe in it. But so will thousands of men. The inconsistency is no more glaring in one sex than in the other. But how politics does level all!

THE "ADMITTED FALSEHOOD."

The United States Circuit Court of Appeals characterizes the definition of intoxicating liquors in the Volstead act as "an admitted falsehood." On the same day the leader of the women who were protesting at Washington against any modification of that act recalled how the definition was arrived at. A generation ago the iniquitous Association of Brewers, in order to rid themselves of the competition of soft-drink manufacturers, procured a ruling under which only beverages not containing over one-half of 1 per cent. of alcohol were held to be non-intoxicating. All others were intoxicating and therefore the brewers' perquisites. The Chairman of the Woman's National Committee for Law Enforcement, Mrs. HENRY W. PEABODY of Boston, declared satirically that she and her associates do not "like" the definition. But the brewers having resorted to devious methods, temperance organizations exulted in turning the tables on them. That the definition was a lie open and palpable did not seem to them to matter.

Yet in legislation as elsewhere honesty of mind and a regard for matters of fact are important. They are especially important to an organization like the one Mrs. PEABODY leads. No truth is more fundamental and more widely corroborated by experience than that before a law can be enforced it has to be respected. But how respect legislation founded upon an admitted falsehood? A large proportion of the nation believed that this law was infamous. In all parts of the country citizens of high standing and otherwise scrupulously law-abiding flouted the Volstead act. In reprisal, temperance associations and apostles of law enforcement employed provocative agents—lying, bribing, drinking liquor and even making love to innocent young girls, in order to get evidence. There was a carnival of "admitted falsehood"—and all in the name of temperance and the majesty of law.

It is in the nature of fanaticism to mistake the instrument of evil for the evil itself. Inebriety does not reside in the bottle but in the man. Even if alcohol could be abolished by law, the weakness that leads to the abuse of it would remain in human nature. Directly to eradicate this is beyond our power, yet legislation can do much toward helping the individual to help himself. By controlling the manufacture and distribution of alcoholic beverages, the temptation to excess can be greatly minimised. In the nature of the case, this is a local and not a national function, depending in the last analysis on the intelligence and the morality of each separate community. A realization of this is of late spreading widely. If eventually it becomes general and results in common-sense legislation, this present orgy of puritan and bootlegger will not have been in vain.

JUDGES AND REGULATORS.

Lawmakers and commissions are slow to learn that their edicts are futile if in conflict with the Constitution, and that of it the courts are the interpreters. New Jersey and Illinois are now added to the long list of States which have received instructions to that effect from the Federal Supreme Court. The New Jersey Public Utility Commission disallowed an increase of telephone rates because the New York Telephone Company charged excessive amounts to depreciation. The company pleaded that the commission undervalued its property and imposed confiscatory rates. The Court reiterated previous decisions that "profits of "the past cannot be used to sustain "confiscatory rates for the future," and that, even if the reserves are excessive, they cannot be drawn upon to meet a deficit in earnings from rates not yielding the profits allowed even by the commission.

In time it is probable that the New York commission will bow to the decision in the New Jersey case that under the Fourteenth Amendment just compensation "is a reasonable return on "the value of the property used at "the time it is being used for the "public service." Both local and State officials are of a different opinion. They have argued that rates should be reduced because dividends are excessive. Last January bills were introduced at Albany to make tax valuations a base for the calculation of fair rates, and at Washington there is a bill to exclude such issues from hearing in Federal courts.

In the Illinois case against the New York Telephone Company the Court annulled the rates imposed by the State commission. The decision declares that property may be confiscated as well by delay in action as by imposition of unjust rates, and that the commission had given no reason or excuse for conduct which "evinces "complete lack of that acute appreciation of justice which should characterize a tribunal charged with the "delicate and important duty of regulating the rates of a public utility "with fairness to its patrons, but with "a hand quick to preserve it from "confusion." Our State and local officials will be prudent to heed words of similar purport from the lower Federal court. In 1924 the Corporation Counsel for New York City argued for a valuation for rate-making different from that declared by the Supreme Court to be constitutional. Last month a Federal statutory court corrected the State Public Service Commission's departure from the law as declared by the highest court.

A MISDIRECTED "REVOLT."

Professor THORNDIKE of Columbia is not so much wrought up as are some by the current "revolt of youth." Perhaps he has seen it too often to be afraid of it. Possibly he was in it himself at a time when it was bliss to be alive and very heaven to be young. Anyhow, he thinks rather better of young men and women because they rebel at a good deal of what they see in the world. He is confident that their red fire of protest will in time pass into the steady light in which constructive work can be done.

It is naturally in the colleges that most of this youthful revolt is detected. But at what things is it mainly aimed? College boys want to get rid of compulsory chapel, and small blame to them. They would like better courses of instruction, with more inspiring teachers, and still less blame to them. They are repelled by current standards in literature and art and morals. Every kind of censorship outrages them. They crave entire freedom to utter the thoughts that arise in them. At social conventions and customary proprieties of human intercourse which they believe to be without reasonable justification they snap their fingers in scorn. In brief, their instinct of revolt directs itself, as is natural enough, against traditions and practices and rules with which they are most immediately in contact, and which they would radically change or abolish outright.

Ought they not, however, to lift up their eyes so as to be able to see reforms which should be striven for outside the social and academic walls behind which they live? What we mean is indicated in the remark of an English lecturer who has been spending some time in an American university. Writing of the impressions he derived from the youth he was trying to teach, he speaks enthusiastically of their energy, their keenness to learn, their hopeful outlook, their organizing ability, their group activities, their happy confidence that the world of thought and art lies plastic under their hands. But one lack he noted. It was that all this stir and enlargement of life in our colleges had almost no influence upon American "political conditions." It almost seems as if he thought of the revolt of youth in our universities as, after all, a cloistered virtue. It did not impinge upon the great community about it.

Doubtless the contrast with England and the Continent was in the back of this lecturer's mind. It is not simply that English and French and German and Near-Eastern universities send a great many men into public life; their students, before graduating, take a livelier interest in political affairs, and class themselves as radicals not only on the intellectual and theoretic side, but on public questions. We do not have so much of that in this country, though it would be well if we had more. We should like to see our youth in revolt against corruption in politics, against ignorance and want of character in public men, against laws that have outlived their time and their usefulness, against stupid and oppressive methods of administration, against every lurking form of injustice in the social order. By all means let our youth revolt. There is no means of stopping them, if we wished to. But one cannot help thinking what a fine thing it would be if their rebellious and reforming spirit could be directed less to private grievances and restricted evils and more to the public mischiefs and wrongs which cry out for correction and redress.

MONEY PLUS BRAINS.

In the buzz of London's excitement over the buying up of her playhouses by American producers there is discernible a quiet and authoritative voice on the other side of the question. Mr. IVOR BROWN takes note of the "thousand-pound look" visible on the faces of two young English playwrights who are today coining money in the United States. But instead of rejoicing at the example they set, he finds it disquieting that "the newest rich" should have their path made smooth and easy. Will not their success multiply the swarm of writers? He calls them gamblers, because the income from any phase of theatrical work, excepting the mechanical, is highly uncertain.

Rentals of theatres and salaries for actors and even publicity agents are higher than for comparable buildings and workers precisely because any theatrical venture is a gamble. The financial return of any production it is impossible to estimate. One man's guess is as good as another's, as the producers themselves admit. That is why a pretty young woman who is taken to the public's fickle heart gets a salary larger than that of the President of the United States, while the young man who wrote her play gets almost as much as she does. But the position of either is precarious. The producer may make a small fortune, but he also runs the risk of turning out a bankrupt.

This seamy side is not much looked at by ambitious playwrights when there are such examples of sudden success as Mr. BROWN points out. He likens his "gamblers" to people who go on backing horses even when they know that all logic is against them. A cascade of trash is what he expects from their pens, with a consequent increase in the difficulty of doing any kind of work that is "quiet in intention and subtle in expression." There is a basis for such conjecture, but Mr. BROWN rashly concludes: "Accordingly the group that has ideas, "but only a tiny capital, cannot afford "to go into the inner ring at all."

He seems to be taken in by the notion, held by many to be axiomatic, that in the theatre riches and ideas have been allotted by Providence to different groups. A rich producer must be stupid and a gifted playwright must be poor. Yet a moment's thought brings to mind dozens of instances showing that here is a notion which could be profitably "dissociated," in the manner of REMY DE GOURMONT. There is Greenwich Village, with the most notable of American playwrights and one of the cleverest scenic artists, coming out frankly as an idealistic organization. It makes embarrassed denial of commercial ambitions, yet is an example on the other side in spite of itself. There is our Russian enthusiast, making magnificent productions and taking enormous chances. There is the younger set of the Theatre Guild, making money with an amateur show, and the Guild itself combining brains and money.

The two young English playwrights who have become rich are not empty-headed. Their plays are not the worst written, even if they are the best selling. Perhaps they will turn some of their gold back into the theatre for a high purpose. As Mr. BROWN himself says: "The newest rich are as "wealthy in opportunity as they are "in their possessions."

HOME-COMINGS IN CENTRAL EUROPE.

In his survey of political and social conditions in Rumania, the TIMES correspondent touches on a problem common to most of the post-war States of Central Europe, though it does not figure prominently in the news. It concerns the discontent of the "redeemed" populations in the house of their own kinsmen. The war brought to life ancient States like Poland and Czechoslovakia (Bohemia), or immensely enlarged certain existing States. Rumania, which had in 1912 an area of 53,000 square miles, with 6,000,000 people, now has an area of 122,000 square miles, with more than 17,000,000 inhabitants. Before the outbreak of the Balkan wars, Serbia had less than 20,000 square miles and less than 3,000,000 people. The present Kingdom of Serbs, Croats and Slovenes, popularly known as Yugoslavia, has 96,000 square miles, with 12,000,000 people, of whom nearly 8,000,000 souls have been drawn from the former Hapsburg monarchy. Bohemia as a kingdom under Hapsburg rule had 20,000 square miles and less than 7,000,000 people. Czechoslovakia has 54,000 square miles and nearly 14,000,000 people.

Familiar enough is the fact that in such large-scale State building, chiefly out of racial minorities under foreign rule, new minorities have been created. Along with Rumanians in Transylvania, Bukowina and Bessarabia, there have been swept into the new Rumania large numbers of Hungarians and Russians. Czechoslovakia has a German-Slovak-Ruthenian minority of more than 5,000,000. Poland has taken in Lithuanians, Germans, Russians. Yet that is not the problem suggested by our correspondent. He deals with the genuinely redeemed nationals who, after centuries of longing and strife to be reunited in independence with their countrymen, now experience discomfort in the old home. The Rumanians of Transylvania and Bessarabia are not altogether happy:

> Their view was colored by their desire to escape the rule of their Hungarian and Russian masters. When they attained their object the glamour with which they had surrounded Rumania necessarily faded, vanished. * * * They discovered that the alien rule which they hated was of a higher, more Western type than that under which the old kingdom had developed.

This feeling has manifested itself even more strongly in Yugoslavia, where it constitutes the most crucial problem of the day. STEFAN RADITCH, leader of the Croats and Slovenes, has broken away from the brief alliance into which he entered with PASHITCH, representative of the old Serbia, and the struggle which so far has prevented the coronation of King ALEXANDER is once more on. The Croats regard themselves as culturally far the superior of their bucolic Serbian kinsmen and resent the domination of Belgrade. Both for the new Rumanians and Yugoslavs there has been a gain in independence, but, as they feel, a loss in good government and civilized standards.

In the case of the Catholic Croats and the Greek Orthodox Serbs, the religious element also enters. In Poland the situation is not acute, though inevitably party lines are drawn to a certain extent on the pre-war geographical lines. The Poles of German Posen think themselves best fitted by culture and experience to dominate in the new State; the Poles of Galicia capitalize the prestige of the ancient capital Cracow; the Poles of Russia have historic Warsaw as their nucleus. But it is in Czechoslovakia that the gains seemingly outweigh the losses. By contrast with Rumania and Yugoslavia, the "redeemed" Czechs and Slovaks have been reunited with the cultural vanguard of their race.

TOPICS OF THE TIMES.

One Witness Tells What She Sees.

An impartial student of the testimony before the Senate committee by representatives of friends and foes of prohibition probably would say that on both sides more opinion and desire had been presented than exact evidence. He would also have his doubts about the accuracy of the statistics coming from either source. He would not feel it unjust to suspect that in the selection of figures all of the witnesses had discriminated between those favorable and those unfavorable.

However, he would not hesitate to give full credence to what was said by Lieut. Colonel HAMON of the Salvation Army. She spoke only of what she and her immediate associates had seen in going about among the very poor in New York City. She did not claim to know how prohibition was working all over the country. She only knew and said that in pre-Volstead days 50 per cent. of the help given to people in their homes had been made necessary by drunkenness, while now the inebriate cases had fallen to 1 per cent. The once numerous calls for clothing for children, she declared, were no longer coming in.

In other words, conditions as and where Colonel HAMON sees them have improved noticeably as regards the women and children of the poor in this city, and they have not suffered in the ways asserted by some of the wet advocates.

If all of the upholders of the dry cause had come as well prepared with real information as did this officer in the Salvation Army, they would have served that cause much better than they did by making statements which told more about themselves than about what prohibition has accomplished.

When Ends Justify the Means.

It is no wonder that the New York Presbytery decided not to condemn "Pussyfoot" JOHNSON for having used deception and drunk a lot of intoxicants in the course of his work for prohibition, but merely to resolve that it put itself on record as "approving the use of every fair and honorable means combating the restoration of legalised liquor traffic."

That was the safe course, but it was not very brave. The Presbytery was confronted by the age-old question of what a moral person is justified in doing for the advancement of what he considers a good cause. Mr. JOHNSON'S early training in practical morality was gained in Oklahoma when he was a United States Marshal and was expected to stop the selling of liquor to the Indians. This work, according to his biographers, he did with notable courage and efficiency, but it is little likely that in dealing with the bootleggers of that time and place he felt called upon to use much delicacy in devising stratagems against them. A recently published article by him confessed—with no sign of humiliation or remorse—that in his later dealings with the present crop of bootleggers he had not been any more scrupulous.

Several members of the Presbytery were troubled by this and some of them wanted an expression of strong disapproval of Mr. JOHNSON and of all who use evil means in the hope that good may come of it. Caution prevailed, however, and it was only by a rather vague implication that the reproof was administered.

These clergymen realised that while it is not true that any means are justified for the attainment of any ends, yet, when there is a reasonable relation between the two, things that in other circumstances seem to be, and are, evil, cease to be so. This is doctrine that lends itself easily to abuse. That peril must be encountered, however, and it is, every day, in all emergencies from a fire in the house to a national war.

His Answer Closed the Debate.

Whatever one may think of socialism, he hardly will be able to deny that in the controversy between Sir OSWALD MOSLEY and his son and that son's wife, the honors are on the side, not of the elderly conservative and orthodox economist, but on that of the younger and heretical generation.

For when Sir OSWALD suggested that his son prove the sincerity of his socialism by dividing his wealth with "the poor" whom he professes to love so much, the son quite correctly replied that he would do no such thing, and for two reasons—first that "the poor" would not profit from such a division, as the share to each of them would be too small for representation by the smallest of copper coins, and, second, that without his money he would be reduced to helplessness as regards carrying on a campaign for what he and his wife consider would be better conditions.

The latter statement might be the better for some qualification, but the former certainly is true. If Sir OSWALD were wise, he would avoid this sort of discussion. He is far from necessarily in the wrong on general principles, but Socialists are a well-read lot, good talkers, and well supplied with arguments not easily answered by opponents so sure of their ground that they have given little thought how to defend it.

This Reform Costly, but Worth It.

Dr. HARRIS will take a good deal of responsibility on himself if he brings about the exclusion of all "loose" milk from the city. But there is no doubt that if he effects this change he will raise materially the quality of the milk sold to the part of the population for whom small economies are important.

That they will have to pay more for their milk also is true, for milk can be distributed more cheaply "loose" than in bottles. On the other hand, they will make up this loss in considerable part by getting more for their money, and the rest of it probably would be returned to them in the shape of better protection from the maladies of malnutrition and other ills that result from the use of watered milk and milk which has not been guarded from dangerous bacteria.

It isn't so much the bottles, anyway, that add to the expense as it is the increased work which they impose on the distributers. Theoretically, the customers pay for all bottles they do not return, but practically many of them go astray and the breakage is large.

For the Migration Service.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Immigration problems are frequently discussed in your columns, yet I find that little is known of the very practical work being done by the International Migration Service in helping individuals solve problems which have resulted from migration.

This service was established in 1921 as a non-partisan, non-sectarian, non-political organization, with headquarters in Geneva and a chain of bureaus in Canada, Czechoslovakia, France, Greece, Poland and the United States. The object is twofold:

(1) To render service through cooperative effort to individuals whose problems have arisen as a consequence of migration, and the solution of which involves action in more than one country.

(2) To study from an international standpoint the conditions and consequences of migration in their effect on individual, family and social life.

The service renders, without charge and irrespective of race, nationality or religion, a disinterested service extending from old homes to new. A total of 14,988 families have been aided by the International Migration Service, 6,000 of this number being aided by the American branch.

Calls upon the American branch have increased rather than decreased with the immigration restrictive legislation and with the growing number of deportees which, according to a recent statement of the Commissioner of Immigration, are one of the most serious administrative problems of that department.

It is necessary to have funds with which to support this work. To this end plans have been made for a Spring ball, to be held at the Ritz-Carlton, on Friday evening, April 16. Tickets may be secured at the American Branch, 1 Madison Avenue. May I urge your readers to support this work by buying tickets?

SPRING VOYAGE WITH DAVID.

Come with me, where the far hills rise—
Let's a fare away 'neath the stirring skies.

Up we'll go—up the hills and over—
The road is free to a gallant rover—
Wonders must wait beyond their cresting—
Rabbits a-foot and bobolinks nesting.

Hurry, my lad!
Perhaps we'll see—
Perhaps we'll hear
The chipmunks' spree,
The blue jays' jeer.

And come at last
Though the way is long
To the wood
Where the brown thrush
Sings her song.

SEABURY LAWRENCE.

LIBERALIZING PROHIBITION.

Power of Congress to Leave Regulation to the States.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The contention that the Volstead act cannot be liberalized without violating the Eighteenth Amendment is so common as to be almost unanimous with all who oppose any modification, and up to the present time there has been nothing said by proponents in any way to controvert this viewpoint. The latest doubter to express his views is Senator BORAH in the Senate on March 29, and yet he favors a referendum!

I will show that the Volstead act in Section 20 of Title III violates the Eighteenth Amendment in expressly sanctioning transportation of liquor through the Panama Canal or on the Panama Railroad. The wording of the Eighteenth Amendment prohibits "transportation within * * * the United States and all territories subject to the jurisdiction thereof." The Congress made the Volstead act applicable to all of our island possessions except the Philippines, although it had the power to include them. It must certainly follow that if Congress has the power to except in one instance and to exempt, by its refusal to legislate, in another, it may enact legislation to permit States to enact their own laws on the subject of "intoxicating liquors" or it may make exceptions in one or more States, or by naming States subject to the provisions of the Volstead act it may exempt others by the omission of their names.

The President and the Senate, through the liquor treaties with a number of nations, have violated the Eighteenth Amendment by permitting the importation, transportation and exportation of liquors. The Supreme Court in the case of Cunard Steamship Company vs. Mellon 262, U. S. 100, in a most comprehensive opinion (April, 1923) states most positively that foreign ships may not under the Eighteenth Amendment and the enforcing act bring in and take out again such liquors within the three-mile limit. The treaties were made in 1924, after the Supreme Court's action. That there is a doubt of the constitutionality of these treaties is evidenced in the treaties themselves, by the provision in each that in the event any part of the treaty shall be held in conflict with the Constitution of the United States, the whole shall lapse.

Congress has the power to prohibit liquor non-intoxicating in fact, and so admitted by the Solicitor General of the United States in the case affecting 2.75 beer (Ruppert vs. Caffey, 251, U. S. 264), although the Supreme Court divided 5 to 4 in this decision. It has as a whole made one exception, and in part (the Senate) another, and as a whole has permitted an exemption.

I cannot see, therefore, why Congress is not free to enact any legislation it chooses to modify and liberalize the Volstead act.

FLEXIBLE TARIFF EVILS.

Congress to Blame for Them, and Not the Commission.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

THE TIMES deserves great credit for conclusively showing, in a series of able editorials, that the flexible tariff is an unworkable scheme. Congress should promptly repeal it before it does any more harm.

It should have been patent to every one from the beginning (1) that the tariff, essentially a political matter, could never be taken out of politics; (2) that the cost-of-production theory was never anything but a protectorist device; (3) that differences in cost of production at home and abroad are not facts which can be accurately and definitely ascertained but mere guesses; (4) that it is bad for business to be agitating tariff changes all the time through a commission.

The vice is in the flexible provisions themselves, not in the personnel of the Tariff Commission. The commission has naturally failed to operate a system which is based on guesswork. The President has followed his inclination and raised the rates whenever opportunity offered. This was to be expected. There never was anything reasonable or honest or definite or certain about the whole flexible scheme.

There is "no such animal" as the difference in cost of production at home and abroad. How can the President and the commission find something which does not exist except in the "discretion" of the finder? The danger is in the scheme itself; in the vast and uncontrolled power granted to the President over the business interests of the country by the flexible provisions. He can "fry the fat" without restraint. He can ignore completely the so-called findings or guessings of the commission.

The Senators and Representatives who voted to abdicate their own duty and responsibility which the Constitution placed upon them to levy tariff taxes are to blame, and not the Tariff Commissioners, upon whom they imposed an impossible task.

Rare Cook Books.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I was glad to find the letter of L. M. S. in THE NEW YORK TIMES this morning, as I too had read the editorial to which it refers, and wondered. The collecting of cook books is not to be dismissed lightly, for it takes one back to early and rare examples of the art of printing. I have more than one incunabula in my collection, though I most always grieve over the wreck made of them by damp in the London warehouse where they were stored for safety.

If you are not sufficiently impressed by the collections L. M. S. mentions, I might draw attention to Vicaire's Bibliography of Cook Books, in which some 2,500 are entered, though Vicaire's knowledge of the English and American literature on the subject is small. As to my own collection, of which L. M. S. speaks, rare treasures have been added since "My Cookery Books" was published in 1903, and I flatter, not myself, but the "Art of Cookery," when I say that a second edition of that modest bibliography, if "sumptuously printed volume," would have greater interest and value than the first.

Mrs. Murphy's collection may have many gaps, but it is particularly rich in the little seventeenth century English volumes that are among the most entertaining of all.

VOTES FOR BUREAU ON FOREIGN TRADE

House Passes Bill for Unified Direction of Efforts to Push American Products.

HIGHER SALARIES PROPOSED

Present Service Has 40 Offices Abroad, 16 Commercial Attaches and 40 Commissioners.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, D. C., April 13.—A bill designed for unified direction to American trade promotion abroad by creating a Foreign Trade Service in the Department of Commerce, and endorsed by the Secretaries of Agriculture and Commerce, was passed by the House today by viva voce vote.

Criticisms that the Foreign Trade Service, as at present organized, has been used by big corporations to train at Government expense selected employes was not directly voiced in the debate on the measure. But an indirect reference to these criticisms was made by Representative HOCH of Kansas, author of the bill, who stated that unless Congress gave the Foreign Trade Service statutory recognition and increased the salaries of its officials, as proposed, it would be impossible for the Government to employ and retain the skill especially needed in work of this character.

Representative BLACK of Texas attacked the bill on the ground that the salaries recommended were too high. He scoffed at suggestions by Mr. Hoch that many men now employed in the Foreign Trade Service were serving at a pecuniary sacrifice.

The bill, as passed, defined the duties of American foreign trade representatives and provided for their classification into various grades. It fixed a specific salary range, and a larger per diem allowance than now allowed Department of Commerce officers. The salaries vary from $3,000 to $10,000 a year, according to class. The service now has forty offices abroad. Others will be established as Congress makes appropriations for that purpose. The personnel consists of sixteen Commercial Attachés, forty Trade Commissioners and forty-five Assistant Trade Commissioners.

In advocating the bill Mr. Hoch said that the need for centralized guidance of trade promotion had assumed extraordinary importance since the war, and would be further increased with the return of Europe to normal competition with the United States in world markets.

"Such a development is now actively under way," said Mr. Hoch. "The problem of the disposal of American surpluses to assure a stability both in trade and industry of every character makes it indispensable that this Government maintain an expert foreign trade service in the major areas of the world. This need obtains both as to manufactured products and farm commodities, and has been stressed by representatives of commercial, industrial and exporting organizations, by farmers' cooperative associations and others. It is the overwhelming testimony of informed witnesses that this foreign service is giving invaluable service in market finding and furnishing accurate and impartial information on conditions abroad."

Mr. Hoch pointed out that the possibilities of the service were indicated "from the fact that in the last fiscal year more than 2,000,000 definite commercial services were rendered."

Representative RAYBURN of Texas supported the bill, declaring the rice industry of California owed its existence to the trade promotion efforts of the service. The measure also was approved by Representative UNDERHILL of Massachusetts. A suggestion by Mr. Underhill that foreign trade agents of the Commerce Department were required to entertain, and that this was one of many reasons why their salaries should be increased aroused Representative BLANTON of Texas. He contended that the Government should not encourage its foreign agents to "kow-tow" to nobility or place them in a financial position where they might spend part of their time "tangoing" in European capitals.

"They do kow-tow some, don't they?" Mr. Blanton asked, addressing Mr. Underhill.

"Entertaining is not kow-towing, and entertaining is legitimate when one is drumming up business," replied Mr. Underhill.

HAILS BROOKHART OUSTING.

Prof. W. S. Myers Says It Gives Public Confidence in Parties.

Approval of the unseating of Senator Smith W. Brookhart of Iowa and the seating of Daniel F. Steck, a Democrat, in his place was expressed yesterday by Professor William Starr Myers of Princeton University in an address at a meeting of the Republican Committee of One Hundred at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Ivy L. Lee, 4 East Sixty-sixth Street. Professor Myers declared that good party leadership was necessary for good government.

"As a Republican, I am glad that a Democrat, Mr. Steck, was seated in the Senate to succeed Senator Brookhart," Professor Myers said. "A tragedy in the unseating of Brookhart is that the Republican vote was split. I do not see how any Republican could vote to retain him after he proved traitor to the leader of his party, President Coolidge. His unseating was the best thing that has happened in years to show the average American that he can have confidence in political parties. The Republicans placed a Democrat in office, but the man he replaced can hardly be called a Republican after his attitude toward the party."

At a business meeting of the committee it was decided that no Chairman should be elected for the present to succeed Mrs. Mary Hatch Willard, who died recently. Mrs. Norman S. Dike, Vice Chairman, will be the head of the committee until the annual meeting next February. Mrs. Benjamin Harrison will continue as Treasurer and Mrs. William N. Seabury as Secretary.

PLAN TO RAISE 39 WARSHIPS

Italians Will Seek to Salvage Vessels in Turkish Waters.

CONSTANTINOPLE, April 13 (AP).—The salvaging of ships sunk in Turkish waters during the World War is to be undertaken this Spring. An Italian salvaging concern has contracted with the Turkish Government for the raising of the thirty-nine ships which were sunk in the Dardanelles and the Marmora and Black Seas.

Twenty-three of these ships are Turkish, including three cruisers, twelve destroyers, six submarines, one transport and one auxiliary. Nine of the wrecks are English, chiefly destroyers, and seven are French.

It is believed that none of the ships can be repaired for use, but the value of the materials they contain is considered sufficient to make salvaging worth while. The Turkish Government will receive 90 per cent. of the value of the salvaged material, while the Italian company expects to make a considerable profit out of the remaining 10 per cent.

STAGE PAYS FINAL TRIBUTE TO MILLER

BIG THRONG IN STREETS

Rev. Dr. Ray Reads the Service—Noted Actor's Associates His Honorary Pallbearers.

The theatre paid its final tribute to Henry Miller yesterday morning when hundreds of men and women, representing all branches of the theatrical profession, crowded the Church of the Transfiguration, popularly known as The Little Church Around the Corner, and the streets surrounding it during the funeral services for the distinguished actor-manager.

The Rev. Dr. J. H. Randolph Ray, rector of The Little Church Around the Corner and Vice President of the Episcopal Actors' Guild, of which Mr. Miller was a Councilor, conducted the services, employing the solemn ritual of the Anglican Church. Following the services the body was taken to the receiving vault of Greenwood Cemetery, where it will await the arrival of Mrs. Miller from Europe next week before the final interment.

Dean Ray read the service for the dead, in which he was assisted by the Rev. William L. Phillips. Mme. Alma Clayburgh sang Gounod's "Ave Maria," in addition to which the full choral service of the Episcopal Church was used. The burial hymn was chanted by the choir of the church, and the burial lesson was read by Dr. Ray. The processional was "Peace, Perfect Peace" and the recessional "The Strife Is O'er, the Battle Won." Previously, at 8 o'clock in the morning, a requiem mass was held for the repose of Mr. Miller's soul.

Gilbert Miller, a son, and Mrs. T. J. McCoy, a daughter, were the only relatives present. The funeral services were postponed from Monday in order that Mrs. McCoy, who arrived yesterday morning from Wyoming, where her husband, Colonel McCoy of the United States Army, is stationed, could be present.

The Honorary Pallbearers.

The list of honorary pallbearers was made up of Mr. Miller's professional associates. It included A. L. Erlanger, John Drew, Otis Skinner, David Belasco, Charles Dillingham, Arthur Hopkins, James Forbes, Holbrook Blinn, Arthur Hornblow Jr., A. E. Thomas, Walter Hampden and Paul Allen.

Banked high in front of the altar were floral offerings from practically every theatrical organization in the city. Conspicuous among the tributes were pieces from the Players, the Lotos Club, the Lambs and the New York Athletic Club.

Twenty minutes before the services began it was necessary for the police to close the doors of the church, and after that time the only persons admitted were those who came as representatives of various organizations to which Mr. Miller belonged. By the start of the services Twenty-ninth Street from Fifth to Madison Avenues was thronged with several hundred persons, including actors, stage hands, chorus girls, ticket brokers and others whose theatrical connections were of the most casual sort.

Thirty policemen under the command of Lieutenant Francis Knowles kept the crowd in order and formed a cordon around the church.

Among the mourners for Mr. Miller was Joseph Hahn, a blind pencil peddler who has sold his wares in front of Henry Miller's Theatre, 124 West Forty-third Street, since it opened. Frequently overzealous policemen have attempted to chase the blind man from his post, but on every occasion Mr. Miller had gone to his aid and got back Hahn's theatre stand for him. Yesterday by the irony of fate a policeman on duty barred Hahn from entering the church. He was recognized by a friend, who got him past the police cordon. Hahn had come to the church on Monday and had sat for an hour in the auditorium until some one learned of his presence and informed him of the postponement of the funeral.

Among Those at Services.

Among those prominent in the throng who attended the services were Walter Wanger, Ollie Alger, Mr. Miller's manager; Ruth Chatterton, Blanche Bates, Mrs. Otis Skinner, Frances Starr, Grace George, Channing Pollock, A. H. Woods, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Coburn, Amelia Bingham, George M. Cohan, May Irwin, Laura Hope Crews, Mrs. Thomas Whiffen, Louis Mann, Louis Anspacher, Sam H. Harris, Ina Claire, Dave Warfield, James Rennie, William Muldoon, Louis Harrison, Juliette Crosby, Robert Campbell, Kathryn Kinder, Ada Humbert, Charles Trowbridge, Alice Fisher, Mrs. Lawrance D'Orsay, Mr. and Mrs. Howard Kyle, George Middleton, Minnie Palmer, Cora Witherspoon, Marie Cahill, Katherine Alexander, John R. Rogers, J. Irving Southard, Robert Warwick, Gail Kane, Wilhelmina Morris, Sam Forrest, Lyman Brown, Mary Nash, Florence Nash, Mary Ryan, Lionel Atwill, George Marion, William Morris and Rose Stahl.

There were also delegations from the Lambs, Friars, Actors' Equity Association, Actors' Fidelity Association, Jewish Actors' Guild, N. V. A.; Lotos Club, the Players and from various organizations of stagehands and other theatrical employes.

EX-DUCHESS DE ROHAN, AUTHOR-ARTIST, DEAD

France Honored Dowager for Caring for Wounded Soldiers.—Her Family Ancient.

PARIS, April 13 (AP).—Herminie, Dowager Duchess de Rohan, author and painter, died here today at the age of 73.

The Dowager Duchess de Rohan was a member of one of the most illustrious of the feudal families of France, a family that claimed connection with the ancient sovereigns of Brittany. She was the widow of the Duke de Rohan, Deputy of Morbihan, who died in 1914. Her son, the twelfth Duc de Rohan, died of wounds received in the battles of Verdun and the Somme.

She was born in Paris on July 28, 1853, a daughter of the Marquis de Verteillac, and was married to the Duke in 1872.

The Duchess was a member of the France-American Committee, the Society of Authors, French Poets and French Artists, and the Union of Women Painters and Sculptors.

When France conferred the Cross of the Legion of Honor upon her in 1920 Marshal Foch himself took the decoration to her. The honor was bestowed for her work in caring for wounded soldiers. Soon after the war began the Duchess converted her residence in the Boulevard des Invalides into a great hospital and for five years was superintendent of the nursing staff.

Before the war she was a leader of Parisian society. As a hostess she displayed much admiration for American men and was once quoted as saying, "In their business enterprises they have displayed the imagination of poets; they have the simplicity of manners which belongs to kings; they have the chivalry toward women which belonged to the knights of olden times. If I could choose the greatest happiness possible for any woman, I would ask that she be given an American husband."

The Duchess is said to have frowned at the ways of some American women who made Paris their home.

HERMAN MEYERS, AID OF HOMELESS, DIES

Herman Meyers, for forty-nine years in charge of the relief work among homeless men carried on by the New York Protestant Episcopal City Mission Society at 38 Bleecker Street, died on Monday afternoon in St. Luke's Hospital after a short illness.

Mr. Meyers, who was 78 years old, had gained the soubriquet of "The Grand Old Man of Bleecker Street," because of his many years of ministering to the poor in that section of the city. It was in 1877 that Herman Meyers came originally to the old headquarters of the City Mission Society in Bleecker Street and was appointed sexton of St. Barnabas's Chapel, 304 Mulberry Street. Not long afterward the ambitious young man was placed in charge of the library and free reading room maintained by the society at Mulberry and Bleecker Streets under the encouragement of the late Bishop Henry Codman Potter.

Early in his association with the City Mission Society his duty was to interview stranded and destitute men from the Bowery. From that time on he spent the best part of his life talking to those who knew best the failures and disappointments, the weaknesses and seamy side of life. After nearly half a century of estimating men's characters, he came to remember faces so acutely that an individual rarely came to him a second time for help without being recognized.

Mr. Meyers knew the historic block in Bleecker Street between the head of Mott Street and the junction of Lafayette and Mulberry Streets in the '70s and '80s, in the days before the elevated railway roared along the Bowery and when Squirrel Inn, just above Grand Street in the Bowery, was at the height of its popularity. That was also the day of "Suicide Hall," so called because many discouraged phantoms of the Bowery ended their lives there.

During his long career of service, Mr. Meyers saw many changes in the city and in the society which he served. In the early days it had only a few chaplains and two or three chapels, whereas now the mission has chaplains in sixty hospitals and prisons and in its own refuge homes.

From the Founder's Writings

An Educated Gentleman Speaking of a Well-Known London Preacher

said the convincing thing about this fine Oxford scholar is that "the entire man gets into his sermons."

The expression of his face and the tones of his voice and every motion of his body appear to be in touch with the theme under discussion.

This accounted for his hearers sitting content for an hour and a half with profound attention, to the close of the extempore service.

The fault of most of us is that we do not put half of our knowledge, manners or thorough interest into filling the places to which we are appointed.

You have got to make a break in the egg shell before you can do an omelet.

Representatives of Nineteen Organizations Discuss the Transit Relief Plans.

COMMEND WALKER'S HELP

Adopt Resolutions Declaring Confidence in the Activities of City Administration.

WANT UNIFIED OPERATION

No Action Is Taken on Question of Municipal Control—Construction Comes First.

Confidence that the City Administration would do everything it could to relieve transit congestion at the earliest possible moment was expressed yesterday at the meeting of representatives of nineteen commercial organizations at the Bankers' Club, under the auspices of the Merchants' Association. The meeting failed to adopt a declaration against municipal subway operation, as expected. It was explained that action upon that question was deferred as a matter not of immediate necessity.

Resolutions commending Mayor Walker's announced intention of appointing a citizens' advisory transit committee, and containing two declarations of principle, were adopted as follows:

"We are in accord as to the necessity of the earliest possible construction of transit facilities to give the quickest possible relief.

"The ideal to be aimed at is unification of operations so far as possible.

"It is the sense of this meeting that the Mayor be commended upon his announced intention of appointing an advisory committee on city transit, and it is urged that the appointment be made at the earliest possible date."

The first two declarations, as suggested by Lucius R. Eastman, President of the Merchants' Association, were adopted unanimously. A disposition appeared to avoid action at this time on the third suggestion, which was a declaration against municipal operation and in favor of city ownership and private operation of the rapid transit lines.

No Criticism of Mayor.

Gage E. Tarbell, Chairman of the Traffic and Transit Committee of the Fifth Avenue Association, offered a resolution urging the Mayor to appoint an advisory committee immediately. Mr. Tarbell said that it was unthinkable that the Mayor should have any desire but to serve the city to the best of his ability. There was a general discussion, during which reluctance was expressed toward any expression that might seem to criticize the Mayor. E. E. Lincoln of the Merchants' Association offered a substitute resolution, which was accepted by Mr. Tarbell and adopted unanimously.

In calling the meeting to order, Mr. Eastman said that it was not the desire of the association to interfere with the City Administration before it had a chance to formulate its plans.

PARK AV. CHANGE GOES OVER

Action on Renaming Thoroughfare Postponed by Aldermen.

When Alderman Walter F. Hagan and his father, James J. Hagan, Deputy Commissioner of Public Works for Manhattan, were unable yesterday to muster enough votes among their own party members in the Board of Aldermen to pass the resolution sponsored by the younger Hagan and Alderman William J. McAuliffe, to revoke the naming of Park Avenue for the two blocks between Thirty-second and Thirty-fourth Streets and change it back to its original designation, Fourth Avenue, the whole matter, at their request, was laid over for one week.

Commissioner Hagan, who is the Tammany leader of the Seventh Assembly District, Manhattan, and his son, who is the Alderman of the district, lost their fight last week in the Committee on Public Thoroughfares of the Board of Aldermen when they sought to have the committee recommend the passage of the resolution. The committee reported it out to the full Board of Aldermen yesterday without recommendations.

Influential members of the Democratic majority of the board have indicated their opposition to the Hagan-McAuliffe resolution and there was a feeling of independence among the Aldermen when they learned that it is not a political organization matter and that they were free to use their own judgment in voting on the resolution.

Drama Here Needs Cleansing, Says Cyril Maude in London

By Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, April 13.—"The American drama needs cleansing; New York is worse than Paris," said Cyril Maude, the famous English actor, who has just returned to London from his farewell tour in the United States.

Mr. Maude does not agree with Noel Coward's view that the American drama is better than the English.

"Some of the plays there are very gross indeed," he said. "Two, in particular, are perfectly awful. I don't think Americans like these things, but support comes from the people who are settling down there, Americans in the making. There is a good deal of undress in America, especially in the revues."

BROWNING'S BRIDE TO RETURN TO SCHOOL

He Plans to Have Her Take Up Studies at Cold Spring—They Go to Tea Dansant.

Edward W. Browning expects to send his young bride back to school, it was learned yesterday in Cold Spring, where it was said that he had opened negotiations with the authorities of the Haldane School, the public high school there, for the attendance of Mrs. Browning. Before her marriage the girl attended Textile High School in New York.

Browning, his bride and her mother, dropped in yesterday at the Hotel Biltmore for the tea dansant. They had tea, but they didn't dance, although the fifty-one-year-old realty broker is an accomplished Charlestoner and his bride "adores" dancing.

The bride is of medium height and is plump—her face being notably full. Her hair is of a coppery blondness. A thick wave of it was drawn across her forehead.

She was dressed in black—cloche hat, fur-edged wrap and satin shoes. The sombreness was relieved by a gay scarf and nude stockings.

"I'll be in court on Thursday, but of course I don't know what is to be done," she said. "I don't think Mr. Browning will be there. I am very happy."

While the Brownings were sojourning in this city, things were happening at Cold Spring. In the afternoon an agent of the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children arrived in the village. The society instituted the proceedings in Children's Court, seeking to have Mrs. Heenan displaced as the guardian of her daughter. Since then, the marriage has raised a question whether Mrs. Heenan could longer be assailed as guardian, that function having been taken over by Browning when he married the girl.

The agent, upon arrival in Cold Spring, said that he was looking for Roy W. Christian, Justice of the Peace and taxicab magnate, who performed the ceremony. He tried to serve a subpoena upon him calling for his appearance at tomorrow's hearing.

"I won't accept the subpoena," said Mr. Christian.

"If you don't," said the agent, "I'll be up here tomorrow with a warrant."

"All right," said Christian, "you'll have to have a warrant to stir me out of Cold Spring."

The agent took the train for Manhattan.

Likelihood of an investigation by the Putnam County authorities into Mrs. Browning's status as resident of the county faded yesterday. Acting District Attorney Ryder at Carmel, N. Y., said that unless a complaint were made that she had failed to meet the residence requirements he would not act in the matter.

WANTS NO RESTRAINT ON RAIL GROUPINGS

Shippers' Conference Would Have Carriers Freed From Mandatory Consolidations.

The Shippers' Conference of Greater New York, which met yesterday in the Assembly Room of the Merchants' Association, went on record in opposition to mandatory legislation for the consolidation of railroad systems and adopted resolutions endorsing the position taken by the National Independent Traffic League.

W. H. Chandler, Traffic Manager of the Merchants' Association and Chairman of the Legislative Committee of the conference, presented a report recommending elimination of plans for the arbitrary consolidation of railroads and took the position that each road should be considered an independent institution, wholly free from artificial restraints, as are other businesses, but subject to such regulatory control of public service as might be necessary to preserve a free flow of commerce and a maintenance of just and reasonable rates.

The organization took the position that, while the provisions of the statute giving to the Interstate Commerce Commission authority to approve specific applications for proposed railroad consolidations were wise, the provisions contemplating the promulgation by the commission of a general plan of consolidation of all the railroads of the country "are visionary and impracticable."

Another resolution adopted by the conference disapproved the Morrow bill, which changes Section 40 of the Transportation act by eliminating the necessity of carriers obtaining certificates of convenience from the Interstate Commerce Commission for new construction or extensions. The conference held that such legislation would enable any railroad to construct lines for which no public necessity exists.

George C. Lucas, Chairman of a committee which has just returned from Washington, where it has been attending hearings on the Postal Bill, expressed the opinion that the present rates on parcels post would not be changed.

The conference elected as its President W. R. Moore, President of the New Jersey Zinc Company, and as its Traffic Manager P. W. Moore of the Queensboro Chamber of Commerce.

SWEDEN'S QUEEN BETTER.

STOCKHOLM, April 13 (AP).—Improvement in the health of Queen Victoria of Sweden is reported from Capri through official channels. King Gustav has gone to the island from the Riviera, where he was on vacation.

Last week additional medical aid was summoned from Sweden and alarmist rumors gained circulation. Now hopes of a speedy recovery are entertained.

KOERBER'S FRIENDS ENTER GUILTY PLEAS

HALT DAUNT TRIAL TO DO IT

Due to Go to Prison Friday—Koerber, Actual Killer, May Be on Same Train on Way to Chair.

Herbert Koerber's four youthful companions on the night of March 21, when the so-called "cake eater bandit" killed Angelo Mahairas, a Jamaica restaurateur, who were indicted with him for the slaying, for which he was found guilty of murder in the first degree, unexpectedly pleaded guilty yesterday in the Queens County Court of murder in the second degree, and all were sentenced to twenty years in Sing Sing.

The pleas were made during the examination of talesmen who were to form the jury to try Richard Daunt, 16 years old, of 235 East Eighty-ninth Street. Four men had been accepted when suddenly, after a whispered conversation between Judge Frank F. Adel and several lawyers, Judge Adel asked that the examination of talesmen be suspended.

Then as the crowd in the court room stared with surprise, Daunt was led from the table of counsel for the defense to a place before the bench. He stood in silence for a moment and from the hall were led Gustave Fisher, 20, of 220 West Fifty-fourth Street; Frank Kellerman, 17, of 1,615 First Avenue, and James Green, 18, of 38 William Street, Woodside, Queens, Koerber's three companions, who were awaiting trial.

Appeal of Daunt's Counsel.

James T. Hallinan, counsel for Daunt, who was standing, waiting for the trio to range themselves beside his client, turned and addressed Judge Adel.

"Your Honor," he said, "I feel that in view of the mentality, lack of education and training of my client, Richard Daunt, and further in view of the question whether a jury would actually bring in a verdict of guilty of murder in the first degree, the ends of justice would be well served if he were allowed to withdraw his plea of not guilty to murder in the first degree and plead guilty of murder in the second degree."

Mr. Hallinan was followed by William B. Groat Jr., counsel for Green; George Z. Medale, counsel for Fisher, and Frederick Behr, counsel for Kellerman, who made similar statements in behalf of their clients.

"This case has caused me much disturbance and loss of sleep," replied Judge Adel. "A human life was taken and justice must be served. The boy who fired the fatal shot has been tried by a jury who courageously and properly found him guilty of first degree murder. With him at the time were you four boys, not one of you 21 years of age, indeed, the youngest but 16½ years old. My mind has been made up since conferring with others, who likewise have a desire to see that justice is done, and since listening to the answers made by prospective jurors in the case now on trial.

Think Justice Will Be Served.

"The District Attorney believes that justice will be served if these pleas are accepted. I recognize that a jury would have no right to extend any clemency to any of you after hearing the facts and law in the case, it being their duty to bring in a verdict in exact compliance with the rules of evidence and law in the case. I do feel, however, that some clemency should be shown to you who did not actually fire the fatal shot."

Each of the boys save Kellerman received the sentence quietly, even with some bravado. Kellerman cried as they were led to the detention room and to the jail.

Green, who is married, was easy in his manner.

"I'm pretty well satisfied," he said. "but this cake-eater stuff gives me the laugh. Cake eaters dress more snappy than we do."

Kellerman between his sobs said he always wanted to learn the printer's trade and hoped he would have a chance to learn at Sing Sing.

Mary and Katherine Krause and Mrs. Nora Green, wife of one of the prisoners, who have been held as material witnesses in the case, are expected to be released today.

MEDICAL 'OUTLAW' IS BURIED

Funeral Brings Public Demonstration for British Doctor.

By Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, April 13.—A large concourse of Londoners assembled today at the funeral of Dr. F. W. Axham, who died a few days ago still an outlaw from his profession through the refusal of the General Medical Council to restore his name to the Medical Register since its removal for acting as an anesthetist to Sir Herbert Barker, the famous bonesetter.

There were many demonstrations of public sympathy at the funeral, and these found pointed expression in a sermon delivered by the Rev. E. A. Pinch, vicar of the church where the funeral service was held.

"There is in our English character," he said, "a very strong love of fair play, and it has seemed to the British public that fair play was withheld from our late brother. The care of the General Medical Council for the public safety should surely allow recognition of exceptional and all proved skill. Had such a policy been carried out in this case, one who tried to relieve pain in the cause of healing would not, perhaps, have received a sentence which seemed to most of us hard and unnecessary."

ART MUSEUM GETS JEWELS.

Mary E. Harrington Leaves Portraits of Dog to Natural History Museum.

Bequests of jewelry and paintings are given to the Metropolitan Museum of Art by the will of Mary E. Harrington, who died on March 14. Her will, filed in the Surrogates' Court yesterday, disposes of "portraits of my dog, Ishmi, and a fan upon which his head is painted," to the Museum of Natural History, which also gets a $500 legacy. The Church of the Transfiguration, known as "The Little Church Around the Corner," receives a $500 legacy. The value of the estate was not given.

Among the bequests to the Museum of ... are a $500 legacy and "my ring of emeralds and diamonds set in platinum." The residuary estate is given to Miss Mary E. Cleary of 253 Hillside Avenue, Jamaica, L. I. Small legacies were left to friends.

Aged English Star Sues Magazine for Libel For Use of Her Name for Fictitious Character

By Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, April 13.—A libel action brought today by a noted former music hall actress against a publishing company illustrates the well-known fact that under English law it is never safe to label fictitious characters even with invented names. An English writer once gave one of his characters the highly improbable name of Artemus Jones and was successfully sued for damages by an actual bearer of that name.

Today The Amalgamated Press, which in one of its magazines had made disparaging references to a supposed music hall artist known as Bonnie Kate Harvey, was faced in court by Bonnie Kate Harvey herself. Thirty-five years ago she was a well-known music hall comedy star. Now at 65 she is the wife of Andrew MacAuley, a member of the Irish bar.

The Detective Magazine, published by the defendants, had reported her, she complained, to have been thirty years ago a woman of loose character, the associate of criminals and eager and willing to help a notorious criminal escape from justice. In the article, entitled "The Other Side of the Fence; the Straight Crook," the magazine had spoken of Bonnie Kate Harvey's association in the Transvaal with Frank Forbeaux, a notorious criminal.

Mrs. MacAuley, it developed, had appeared on the South African stage in 1894, billed as "England's Leading Serio-Comic Lady." She had never, however, known Forbeaux nor associated with criminals, nor—as the story also alleged—flirted on a railway train with two policemen to help him escape.

On the other hand, said Mrs. MacAulay, she was the only actress ever known as Bonnie Kate Harvey.

"I have been ill ever since I read the article," she told the Judge, bursting into tears. "I moved in the best circles and was respected by everybody. Now they are all cutting me."

The Amalgamated Press pleaded that the words complained of could not reasonably be held as referring to Mrs. MacAuley. In disproof of this, however, one veteran of the variety stage after another was called to the witness box by the plaintiff to testify he had known Bonnie Kate Harvey for more than a quarter of a century, that she had never been known by any other name and that the public had long memories for old stage favorites.

Mr. MacAuley reinforced this evidence by the statement that in Ireland it was the custom for married women to be known by their maiden names, and everybody knew his wife as Bonnie Kate Harvey.

WIFE SLAIN IN SLEEP, HUSBAND IS SOUGHT

Jealousy Believed Motive for Murder of Mrs. Hingste in North Bergen Home.

CHILDREN IN NEXT ROOM

Police Doubt Man Is a Suicide, as Note Would Indicate—Shot Was Heard by Woman's Mother.

While her two young children slept in a room adjoining the one in which she was sleeping, Mrs. Jennie Hingste, 29 years old, was shot and killed early yesterday in her home at 743 Twenty-sixth Street, North Bergen. Soon after the discovery of her body detectives started a search for her husband, arrest, who was believed to have killed her because of jealousy.

One shot through the left temple killed Mrs. Hingste. Mrs. John Ferdinand, her mother, who lived upstairs in the two-family house, said she heard the noise of a pistol shot not long after midnight. Thinking it the backfire of an automobile, she paid no attention to it. She discovered the body of her murdered daughter about 6 o'clock yesterday morning.

The husband left a note in the bedroom. It was addressed to John Hingste, a brother who lived with his wife, Anna, in the second-floor apartment. It read: "John: Whatever happens, take good care of the children. I have a deposit of $15 with the Tiger Taxi Company. Go down there, pay my bill and collect the rest. This is all the money I have. Let the town where I am found pay for my funeral."

The two children, Stella, 10 years old, and John, 8, were taken by Mrs. Ferdinand.

Hingste was arrested on Monday as the result of a fight with Adolph Balles of 731 Thirty-sixth Street, North Bergen. He told Recorder Modarelli, before whom both were arraigned, that he had found Balles walking with his wife on the street after he had warned the man to keep away from her. The Recorder suspended sentence on Hingste but sentenced Balles to thirty days in jail.

While the North Bergen police were at first inclined to believe from the note that Hingste intended to kill himself at once, later information to the effect that the friendship of a Hoboken policeman with his wife also had aroused his ire caused them to believe that he might make an attempt on the life of the policeman before taking his own. A watch was kept on places where it was thought he might appear.

Mrs. Hingste had been prominent in local politics, having been Democratic committeewoman in the Ninth District of the Third Ward.

At the shop of the Ohmer Fare Register Company, 16 West Sixty-first Street, where Hingste had been employed, it was said that he had always been a reliable workman. He received a week's leave of absence on April 3, telling the superintendent that he had "a little personal business to attend to."

DIABETES AS JEWISH PERIL.

Race Is Comparatively Immune to Tuberculosis, Says Dr. Harris.

The relative susceptibility of Jews to diabetes and their comparative immunity from tuberculosis are set forth by City Health Commissioner Louis I. Harris in an article to be published today in the Ninety-and-One, organ of the Federation for the Support of Jewish Philanthropic Societies.

"As a result of the survival of the fittest, and through a severe testing within the Ghetto walls, the Jews have acquired an immunity against tuberculosis," says Dr. Harris. Of their diabetic afflictions he says: "The high tension under which the Jews have so frequently worked and the sensitive nervous equipment of which they are possessed have affected their hearts, blood vessels and kidneys."

WON'T REOPEN WARD CASE.

Westchester Prosecutor Plans No Action on Published Murder Story.

WHITE PLAINS, N. Y., April 13.—Acting District Attorney Walter Ferris, who is in charge of the prosecutor's office here during the absence of District Attorney Rowland in Europe, said today that he did not plan to take any action as a result of stories concerning the Ward case which are being printed in The New York Mirror.

Mr. Ferris was interested in the stories, particularly that of today, which accused Walter S. Ward of having shot and killed Clarence Peters, a sailor, while Peters's hands were tied, in a gambling house in New Rochelle.

"I have no intention of reopening the Ward investigation," said Mr. Ferris. "Nothing new has been officially called to my attention."

15 CHIROPRACTORS HALED INTO COURT

Five Women Are Among Those Accused of Violating the Health Law.

FREED ON $500 BAIL EACH

Hearings in Two Cases Are Set for Today—The Others to Come Up on April 21.

Fifteen chiropractors, five of them women, were released in $500 bail each for examination when they were arraigned yesterday before Chief Magistrate William McAdoo in his court at 300 Mulberry Street on charges made by three policewomen that they violated the Health law in administering treatment to them recently.

The accused were Anna V. Bear, 309 West Ninety-seventh Street; Anna De Beria, 305 West Ninety-eighth Street; Irene Anderson, 204 West Eighty-sixth Street; Lillian P. Cogswell, 210 West Seventy-second Street; Mary E. Goble, 214 West Seventy-first Street; Walter A. Ahschbacker, 1,434 Lexington Avenue, John F. Malone, 70 West 102d Street; Harry G. Zalenski, 126 East Eighty-third Street; Paul S. Lund, 233 West Forty-second Street; J. F. Emens, 469 Seventy-fourth Street, Brooklyn; Philip Greenwald, 18 West Forty-fourth Street; James Harkins, 1,540 Broadway; Michael De George, 26 Leroy Street; Leon G. Heinsohn, 191 Claremont Avenue, and Arthur Greenfield, 140 West Forty-second Street.

All pleaded not guilty. Emens and Mrs. Bear will appear for a hearing today. The others will be arraigned on April 21. The policewomen who made the charges were Sarah M. Ahern, Adele Preiss and Helena Brady.

The Chief Magistrate listened to some testimony in the charge against Greenfield who said that he had been a chiropractor two years, having been graduated from the New York Chiropractor College. While he was attending the chiropractor college, he said, he was a salesman and worked at several other jobs until he obtained his diploma.

DEFERS VINCENT GLYNN CASE

Leach Reserves Decision on Tardiness of Police Rookie.

First Deputy Police Commissioner John A. Leach reserved decision yesterday in the case of Vincent Glynn, probationary patrolman of the Butler Street Precinct, a nephew of Governor Smith, who was accused at Brooklyn headquarters of failure to report on time.

Patrolman Glynn admitted having reported to his precinct at 9:35 A. M. on March 30 last, instead of at 8 A. M.

"I'm a young cop and I'm sorry, Commissioner," said Glynn.

"I didn't realize I was breaking a rule. You see, I had to take a prisoner from another precinct to the Gates Avenue Court and we had been in court about an hour before I realized I had forgotten to report. Then I went to a phone right away."

Commissioner Leach reserved decision also in the case of Mrs. Belinda Milatz, whose superior, Captain Duggan of the Gates Avenue Station, accused her of having lost her police shield. Policewoman Milatz told the Commissioner she was robbed in an Interborough subway train by a pickpocket.

TRUCKS KILL TWO BOYS.

Driver Is Hurt as Vehicle Drops to Long Island Tracks.

Max Stein, 20 years old, of 97 Bristol Street, Brooklyn, driver of a three-ton truck for the Quinlan Express Company of that address, swerved his truck yesterday as it grazed another driven by Richard Rhodes of 293 Bainbridge Street, Brooklyn, and crashed through the fence above the Long Island Railroad tracks on Atlantic Avenue, near Howard Street, Brooklyn.

Stein jumped and fell between the tracks, fifteen feet below the street, beside the wreckage of his truck. He was taken to St. Mary's Hospital for treatment for lacerations and abrasions. Traffic was suspended for an hour and a half.

David Sucks, 7 years old, of 101 Washington Street, was killed yesterday when he was struck by a motor truck driven by Frank Pixitola, 27, of 2,027 Webster Avenue, the Bronx, as he was crossing Greenwich Street near Rector Street.

While playing in the street near his home at 300 West Seventeenth Street last night, Robert Fernandes, 7 years old, was struck by a truck and instantly killed.

PASSAIC TO ADOPT RIOT TACTICS TODAY

Sheriff Backed by 150 Armed Deputies to Halt Strikers' Activities as Garfield Did.

RULE THERE TO BE TESTED

"Liberals" Charge Authorities With Lawless Tyranny, While Court Warns "Outsiders."

Special to The New York Times.

PASSAIC, N. J., April 13.—Sheriff Charles W. Morgan, the highest peace officer in Passaic County, will come here tomorrow with 150 deputies armed with riot guns and will read the riot act, it was announced today after Director of Safety Abram Preiskel had requested Sheriff Morgan to take over the preservation of order. If Sheriff Morgan reads the riot act, it will mean, according to the police, that the entire strike zone will be placed under virtual martial law.

Directory of Safety Preiskel was authority for the statement tonight that the reading of the riot act tomorrow in Passaic would mean the closing of all public meeting places to the textile strikers and would forbid all public speechmaking, parading, picketing and conferences.

Action by Director of Safety Preiskel was taken following the reading of the riot act yesterday by Sheriff Nimmo of Bergen County in Garfield, adjoining Passaic.

The public authorities are taking action to prevent all picketing in order that the textile plants may resume operations under the protection of a large force of special deputies. The action is being accepted as a challenge by liberals and others, who will attempt to keep the strike going and who will fight the fixing of what they term excessive bail by Passaic and Garfield Courts, as well as "unconstitutional acts of Justices of the Peace."

Arthur Garfield Hays, of counsel for the American Civil Liberties Union, who appeared in the strike today for the first time, was threatened with arrest by Justice of the Peace Hargreaves in Garfield when he protested against $5,000 bail for Robert Wolfe, a writer. Wolfe was arrested today when he did not move on as rapidly as a deputy sheriff expected.

Hays called the bail unjust and excessive and declared that it was "very plain that a striker cannot get justice in Garfield."

Justice Hargreaves threatened the lawyer with arrest for disorderly conduct.

"We call it contempt of court in New York," said Hays. Again the Court threatened Hays with arrest, and Hays said he would stand on his statement.

Taking Minutes Barred.

Another dispute between Hays and Justice Hargreaves occurred when the lawyer insisted on having stenographic notes taken of the proceedings.

"There will be no minutes taken here," declared Justice Hargreaves. "This is not a court of law; it is a court of martial law."

John Spewack, a reporter for The Evening Graphic of New York, was ejected from the court room for taking notes of the proceedings.

"Garfield is an eye-opener to a lawyer," said Mr. Hays after the court proceedings. "Several of us went to a meeting place which was a private garden and hall. No meeting was permitted, despite the Constitution, which permits liberty of assemblage. This was done because the Riot act was read yesterday. One man did not move fast enough and was arrested. He was charged with having failed to move for fifteen minutes, yet in court it was admitted he moved away in less than that time. Despite this he was held in $5,000 bail for the Grand Jury.

"The Riot act has nothing to do with martial law, although the Sheriff and the Justice of the Peace seem to think it is the same thing. Under the act an assembly can be ordered to disperse. If it does not do so in an hour the people are subject to arrest. It has no effect on future assemblages. Yet the Sheriff here has an idea that having read the Riot act and having posted it in various places, he has brought about a state of martial law, with himself as the commander-in-chief.

$5,000 to $10,000 Bail.

"In all the cases that came up today arrests were made within ten minutes of the reading of the Riot act, but the charge was that the defendant had failed to disperse within an hour. Where the charges amounted to the equivalent of disorderly conduct bail was fixed at $5,000 to $10,000. These people are not administering law. They are using the powers of government tyranically in order to end a strike."

Whether one reading of the Riot act can stop all public meetings will be tested at 3 P. M. today, when a meeting will be held at Belmont Park Hall, Garfield, under the auspices of the American Civil Liberties Union and the United Front Committee.

Robert W. Dunn, a director of the Civil Liberties Union, who was arrested after Sheriff Nimmo of Bergen County read the Riot act yesterday in Garfield, was held in $10,000 bail today. Bail was fixed at $10,000 in the cases of Jack Rubinstein and Clarence Miller, lieutenant of Albert Weisbord, who remained in the Passaic County Jail yesterday in lieu of furnishing $30,000 bail. Esther Lowell of the Federated Press was released in $1,500 bail.

David Weinstein of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers of New York was held in $10,000 bail. Weinstein, and not William Weinstone, an official of the Communist Party of New York, as reported in THE TIMES today, was the man arrested with Dunn.

Police Chief Tricks Hays

Dunn was to have been represented by Mr. Hays, who was directed by Chief of Police Forss of Garfield to another room in the court house. Mr. Hays went there and waited for the case to come up. In the meantime Dunn was arraigned before Justice Hargreaves and bail of $10,000 was fixed.

When Mr. Hays heard the case had been disposed of he tried to have it reopened and explained he had been directed to a court room where he was told that the case would come up. His explanation was confirmed by Chief Forss, but Justice Hargreaves declared the case had been disposed of and that he would have nothing more to do with it.

"We are going to break this up," remarked Justice Hargreaves. Asked by a reporter what he meant, he said he referred to "outside agitators coming to New Jersey, especially to Bergen County."

Ford Defends Burbank's Faith; Says He Believed in Hereafter

CHATHAM, Ontario, April 13 (AP).—The religious views of Luther Burbank, which stirred heated controversy just before his death, today were defended by Henry Ford, long a friend of Mr. Burbank. Reports of these views, Mr. Ford feels, were greatly exaggerated.

The automobile manufacturer, while passing through Chatham today, told an interviewer that Mr. Burbank's religion "was much the same as any one else's. He loved children and thought that they should go to church to learn to think right. I am sure that his instinct told him there was a hereafter."

RAIL LOAN LENIENCY FAVORED BY MELLON

Approves Bill Extending Repayment of $230,000,000 Post-War Federal Aid.

BUT WOULD AMEND TERMS

In Letter to Senator Watson, He Advocates 4¼ Per Cent. Interest and 30-Year Period.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, April 13.—Secretary Mellon, in a letter to Senator Watson, Chairman of the Senate Interstate Commerce Committee, has approved the passage, with amendments, of the Gooding bill to extend the period in which the railroads may repay the money advanced by the Government during reconstruction, after the war, amounting to more than $230,000,000.

The Secretary disagreed with that provision of the bill to allow forty years for railroads to meet this indebtedness. He believed it could be refunded in thirty years, but that it should be understood the maximum time would not necessarily be allowed to all of the fifty-three roads affected.

The proposed rate of interest of 4 per cent. he considered too low. Instead he thought 4¼ per cent. should be charged.

Secretary Mellon's Letter.

Secretary Mellon's letter was as follows:

Washington, April 10, 1926.

Dear Mr. Chairman:

I have your request for my views on S 2929, a bill to "authorize the refunding of certain evidences of indebtedness issued by carriers in interstate commerce and other purposes."

When the Transportation act was adopted, Government aid was extended to the carriers to help them over the reconstruction period after the war. The term of the loans, however, was for ten to fifteen years, and it was expected that the indebtedness of the railroads to the Government should be liquidated within that time.

This liquidation has been accelerated by the rate of interest charged on the Government loans and the 6 per cent. rate had induced most of the carriers with good credit to get out of debt to the Government by selling refunding bonds to the public.

I believe that Government aid should be restricted to purely governmental purposes and only in cases of great emergency, and then only for the period of the emergency should such aid be granted to any class in the community.

As the war reconstruction is now over, I consider it sound public policy not to extend these Government loans beyond their terms except in cases where the carrier has no prospect of obtaining private credit.

For Parity as to Cost of Capital.

I recognize that a situation has arisen with respect to some of the carriers indebted to the United States in which it is apparent that their credit is insufficient to permit them to borrow from the general public and the Government debt cannot be met when it falls due.

In such circumstances it seems to me that it would be equitable for Congress to permit the refunding of the existing indebtedness of such carriers over a longer period and at interest rates lower than originally contemplated.

The refunding should, in my opinion, be upon terms which would put the weak roads on a parity, so far as cost of capital is concerned, with the financially sound roads, but I do not favor terms which would amount to a bonus to the debtor carrier.

Section 2929 contemplates a minimum of 4 per cent. and a maximum of forty years. Since money is costing the United States Treasury today an average of 4.1 per cent., I think this interest rate is too low and it should be at least 4¼ per cent.

I also believe that forty years is too long a period for the refunding, and the maximum should be thirty years.

Factors in Fixing Interest Charge.

In order to determine whether 4¼ per cent. and thirty years is a liberal treatment of the debtor carrier, it should be borne in mind that the refunding plan carried in the bill requires the amortization of the debt during the term of the refunding; $60 a year will pay interest and amortize $1,000 in thirty years. This means that over the thirty years the debtor would pay $1,900 per $1,000 and the debt would be extinguished.

On the other hand, if the debtor has borrowed from the public at 5 per cent., which is a normal rate of interest for a financially sound railroad, it would have paid $1,500 per $1,000 and still owe the original debt.

In other words, by the payment of $300 per $1,000 to the Government in thirty years the carrier would be $1,000 better off than it would have been if it had a $1,000 5 per cent. bond in the hands of the public.

If it should be argued that the $300 additional is too heavy a burden on the carrier, it can be answered that the $300 additional is necessary to retire the $1,000 of debt, that it is not customary for railroads to retire debt but to refund it, and that the carrier may raise the $300 by new borrowings on the collateral released from the Government loan and end up the thirty years having paid no more than it would on a 5 per cent. bond in the hands of the public and still have reduced its debt considerably.

With the limitation I have suggested I would favor the passage of the bill, but I believe it should be understood that in administering the act the maximum period of refunding would not necessarily be granted in all cases. Very truly yours,

A. W. MELLON,
Secretary of the Treasury.

RAIL UNIFYING BILL PUT BEFORE SENATE

Cummins Measure Extends the Voluntary Consolidation Period Five Years.

FEDERAL PLAN FOR FUTURE

Interstate Commerce Body Would Devise It to Apply After Time Limit.

ECONOMIC ISSUES STRESSED

Cummins Declares Merging of Lines Inevitable in Interest of the Carriers and Their Patrons.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, April 13.—A five-year extension of time for voluntary consolidation of railroads, with the Interstate Commerce Commission required at the end of that period to adopt a plan for unifying such roads as may not have combined voluntarily, was proposed in a bill reported today by the Senate Interstate Commerce Committee.

The measure, prepared by Senator Cummins of Iowa, was proposed in an effort to clarify the atmosphere of doubt within the commission as to how extensive its powers are with regard to consolidation. That body has been unable to reach an agreement on tentative plans proposed as a result of provisions in the Transportation act of 1920.

At the hearings on the measure some of the witnesses raised the objection that it contemplated compulsory consolidation.

Explaining the difficulties the Interstate Commerce Commission has had in trying to agree, Senator Cummins said:

"It has been unable to do so, largely if not wholly, because its interpretation of the present law requires a consolidation into a single ownership of the railways which are to constitute any given system. It must be conceded that this view of the existing statute presents an insuperable obstacle in the practical procedure of consolidation.

Manner of Merging Stipulated.

"The first section would relieve the Interstate Commerce Commission of the duty imposed upon it to prepare a plan of consolidation for a period of five years and substitute for it a plan during that time a procedure for voluntary applications upon the part of railway companies for leave to consolidate, merge or unify, to become effective only upon the order of the commission, which can only be entered when it is believed by the commission to be in the public interest."

The bill declares a public policy which, the Senator said, did not differ materially from the provisions of existing law. Detailed proceedings are contained in the measure stipulating the way the roads may consolidate.

If the consolidations have not been concluded at the end of five years from the passage of the bill in accordance with the policy indicated, "the commission shall, as soon as practicable, prepare and by order and after notice and public hearing, adopt and publish a plan for the completion of such limited numbers of systems, either by the establishment of additional systems or by the allocation to any existing system of any carrier or properties not included in any such approved consolidation or unification."

Senator Cummins said the object of the bill "is to secure the lowest railway rates that will maintain adequate and efficient railway service."

Pointing out that 80 per cent. of all railway traffic is competitive in character, the shipper or traveler having the choice of two or more railways, the Senator said:

"The significance of this fact lies in the obvious conclusion that the rates for this competitive business must be the same, or substantially the same, from origin to distination."

Distribution of Net Income.

The net railway operating income of all the roads was given as follows: 1922, $769,411,093; 1923, $974,917,715; 1924, $987,123,417. If all the properties were owned by a single corporation, it was stated, the income for 1924 would have paid more than 5 per cent.

"When, however, we inquire with respect to the distribution of this aggregate net operating income, we come to the real question involved in the policy of consolidation," continued Senator Cummins.

Discussing the low earnings of a number of railroads, the Senator said:

"Without taking into account at the present moment the economies that may be secured through consolidation, it is submitted as an inevitable conclusion that if a process of wise consolidation is not soon entered upon and rapidly carried forward, not less than 60,000 miles—and it may reach 80,000 miles—of our rail transportation system must be either abandoned or, at the best, will be rendering the most unsatisfactory and inefficient service.

"These facts present the chief though not the only reason for the passage of this bill. Argument upon these conditions seems to be unnecessary. If the facts are fairly understood, consolidation in some form is a foregone conclusion."

Senator Cummins said it had been estimated that economies of from $300,000,000 to $500,000,000 a year, "all of which could be utilized in a reduction of freight and passenger rates," could be made.

BEMEDALED FISH CAUGHT.

Mackerel, Released in 1923, Bore Federal Bureau's Tag in Tail.

A young mackerel, which wore a small metal tag in its tail telling whom it might concern that it had been released by the United States Bureau of Fisheries in 1923, was found yesterday in a catch brought to Fulton Market by the fishing steamer Alice and Mildred, commanded by Captain John Morash.

The Galilee Interstate Fishing Company, which owns the Alice and Mildred, forwarded the fish with its bullet-in metal document, to Director O'Malley of the United States Fisheries Commission.

The Government released several thousand mackerel

¶ Thus, one may be captivated by the charm of an old Spanish chest, surmounted by a cabinet of tooled leather panels supporting an ancient ship model. Crudely fashioned after the manner of Iberian artisans, this sturdy chest contributes poignant contrast to the more elaborate, richly carven pieces, lending color and interest, and a feeling of restraint withal, to its surroundings.

M'KELLAR ASSAILS MUSSOLINI'S POLICY

Declares Italian Premier Is a Communist—Likens Methods to Soviet's.

NEW YORK IN DEBT DEBATE

Hiram Johnson Defends Its Police Force as the "Best in the World."

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, April 13.—Premier Mussolini was attacked by Senator McKellar, Democrat, of Tennessee, when the Senate resumed debate on the Italian debt today. The discussion ranged several times far afield from the proposed terms of settlement. At one time Senators compared crime conditions in the United States and Italy, discussing the New York police force, and at another entered into long speculation as to wnether Thomas Jefferson, if living today, would favor the Mussolini Government.

Senator McKellar in bringing the name of the Italian Premier before the Senate said he was "perhaps the greatest evil that has befallen the Italian people in a hundred years."

"There is no use," he continued, "in our camouflaging this situation. Does free America, liberty-loving America, justice-loving America, want to uphold and defend, furnish the shields of war and make secure for all time this dictator bandit, or would we like to help the Italian people?

"We would be just as well justified to recognize Russia as to take up the cudgels for his autocratic rule."

Declares Mussolini a Communist.

Senator McKellar said Mussolini was a Communist and a disciple of Karl Marx, and expressed doubt if he was a religious man.

"If Mr. Mussolini," he added, "is attempting to defend himself and his violence toward the Free Masonry of Italy by claiming he does it because of his religious belief, I would not have any more confidence in him after he made the claim than before."

"Does not the Senator realize," interrupted Senator Reed, Republican, of Pennsylvania, "that it is a matter of world-wide knowledge that Mussolini, and the movement he heads, have saved Italy from communism?"

"I know that is claimed for him," replied Mr. McKellar, "but instead of having saved Italy from communism, unless I am more mistaken in the political situation than I ever believed I could be, in Italy today they have a Government following even harsher, more cruel, more criminal practices than have ever been indulged in by any Communists."

"Does not the Senator know," Mr. Reed asked, "that the Fascist movement has brought about a state of order in Italy so that today the streets of Naples are safer than the streets of New York?"

In replying, Senator McKellar said he had never seen more perfect order than he once saw in Moscow.

Johnson Defends New York.

Senator Hiram Johnson took the floor.

"Somebody," he said, "ought to say a word in behalf of the streets of New York. The fact is, that in my opinion from traveling the world over, the best police force in the world is to be found in New York City today."

This view was concurred in by Senator McKellar, who said:

"I frequently visit New York and see no such disorder there as the Senator from Pennsylvania charges exists. Of course, I do not know the inner workings of the police force, but it has always seemed to me one of the best, most efficient, strongest police forces in the nation. I believe New York is a well-regulated city and am sure it is not due to fascism, communism, socialism or any other ism, but to the splendid American spirit of efficiency that exists there."

"I am sure," broke in Senator Copeland of New York, "the Senator from Pennsylvania was using 'New York' in the generic sense, meaning Pittsburgh and all other cities of the country as well."

Senator Shortridge of California said the Italian "people" would pay the debt "in the long run" and not "that individualist."

Senator McKellar replied if he could be assured that was the case, and if the money were not intended to bring on another war, he would be willing to go the limit in arranging any settlement with Italy.

Points to Law Against the Klan.

Senator Copeland asserted that the New York Legislature had made it unlawful in that State for any organized institution to have secret membership.

"It sought," he continued, "to take the mask from persons marching about in certain sections of our State in opposition to the best thought of our people; and, if I am correctly advised, that is what Mr. Mussolini insists shall be done in Italy. I do not regard Masonry in Italy as at all like Masonry in the United States. It is an entirely different institution. To get back to the question of the Senator from Tennessee, I believe if Mr. Jefferson were alive and active today he would be taking that position, too."

"I do not believe it," said Senator McKellar.

"I hold no brief for Mussolini," continued Senator Copeland. "If this matter of the debt settlement hinged upon Mussolini I presume I would take exactly the same attitude that the Senator from Tennessee assumes."

FINANCIAL MARKETS

Stocks Rebound Sharply as News Developments Turn More Favorable.

Prices generally were higher yesterday. Stocks snapped back when pressure on the market was lifted and there were some good sized gains, too, in some of the commodities, notably May wheat. A great deal of this strength could be attributed to short covering, but mainly it developed because of the change in the character of business and financial news. Alarms, which on the previous day had frightened the markets, turned out to be false or of small consequence. This was particularly true of the Cuban situation, which had worried the markets on Monday but which now appears to be well in hand. There was also a moderate relaxation in the money market, the rate dropping from 5 to 4½ per cent. in mid-afternoon, as additional funds, attracted to this centre by the comparatively high rate, became available. Then, too, the letter of the Secretary of the Treasury to the Senate Committee on Interstate Commerce, advocating the granting of permission to railroads to "refund existing debts over a longer period and at lower interest rates," was considered highly favorable from a railroad viewpoint.

This combination of circumstances, most of them considered highly satisfactory, had the effect of reversing the market attitude of many now engaged in it. Sellers of the previous day turned buyers and, under the leadership of the "key stocks" which had been irregular and lower at the start, the net gains for the day averaged slightly more than one point. The buying was not particularly impressive, consisting as it did mainly of short covering, but nevertheless it was of sufficient volume and character to bring satisfactory advances in the body of stocks. Such fluctuations as are now evident in the market, that is, a sharp decline on one day, followed by an equally sharp recovery on the following, is not an unusual phenomenon in markets so trendless and bewildered as those of recent days, nor do such aimless fluctuations provide sound basis from which business may be forecast.

It would seem that the eyes of the market are focused intently on Spring business and the manner of its development, and that they are likely to be quick to follow trends of prosperity or irregularity in particular basic lines as they come to light. Yesterday, for instance, reports from the automotive industry and from the annual railroad meeting were especially encouraging, and it was these shares which received most market attention. Nevertheless, the market seems set on a "hair trigger" and quickly follows the news of the day.

Exchange movements were irregular yesterday and on a narrow scale. The pressure against the French and Belgian franc, so evident last week, seems to have lifted entirely and is now being swayed by commercial transactions rather than by political developments. Sterling sagged fractionally, but in the main all of these minor movements were meaningless.

The upturn in May wheat yesterday was attributed to the fact that a scarcity of the available supply is likely to occur between seasons. Most of the other grains moved sympathetically and strongly with this option, this strength extending to the September option, which represents the 1926 harvest.

ERIE STOCKHOLDERS ATTACK DIRECTORS

Minority Rights Violated, They Charge, by Terms With the Nickel Plate.

SAY DIVIDEND IS JUSTIFIED

Underwood Tells First Preferred Holders Road Will Drive Best Bargain Obtainable.

Charges that the directors of the Erie Railroad had "sold out" to the Van Sweringens without due consideration of the rights of the minority stockholders were made yesterday at the annual meeting of the stockholders of the road at 50 Church Street. Dr. Henry Shively, a retired physician who owns 330 shares of Erie first preferred, led the fight against the directors of the company who held the proxies for 728,050 shares out of the total of 1,113,050 voted.

Dr. Shively, supported by Charles B. Schellenberg and H. W. Goldschmidt, representing in all 850 shares, complained also that the directors had refrained from declaring dividends on the first preferred stock when earnings were sufficient to pay them. He contended that the declaration of first preferred dividends would so improve the company's credit that it could borrow money at a lower rate of interest and make a much better deal with the Van Sweringens when the time comes for talking terms of a new Nickel Plate proposal. He demanded of President Frederick D. Underwood information as to what was to be done with the Erie following the Interstate Commerce Commission's rejection of the Van Sweringen application.

Doesn't Know, Underwood Says.

Mr. Underwood replied that he would be glad to tell the stockholders of the fate of the Erie if he knew it himself. The refusal of the commission to approve the Nickel Plate scheme, he said, puts the stockholders "back right where you were before" and as far as he knew there had been no other merger proposition presented. If another plan were presented, he added, the directors would drive the best bargain obtainable.

Dr. Shively charged that the directors had acted unwisely in agreeing to terms of exchange which provided a lower rate of return for the first preferred stock than it now carried. Under the terms of the Nickel Plate plan the Erie first preferred was exchanged on a two for one basis for new Nickel Plate shares bearing a 6 per cent. return, whereas the stock is a 4 per cent issue. By approving this ratio, he asserted, the directors had destroyed the preferential position of Erie first preferred to which he had held on for twenty years with the hope of obtaining a dividend.

George G. Mason, a director of the Erie, defended the board's action and was instantly attacked by Dr. Shively on the ground that he did not hold any shares of Erie first preferred. Mr. Mason admitted that he did not know if the first preferred stock were among his holdings. He was defended in his statement by Mr. Underwood and Grenville Kane, another member of the board.

Mr. Underwood assured the stockholders that the Erie was growing more valuable all the time and it behooved them to be on the alert in case another merger proposal were offered.

Discussion toward the close of the meeting revolved around Mr. Underwood's completion of twenty-five years of service with the road. One of the minority group suggested that he might have celebrated it by ordering the payment of dividends on the first preferred stock. "I appreciate your generosity but question your discretion," he replied.

A motion was later proposed by Dr. Shively and seconded by Mr. Schellenberg that he receive the congratulations of all those present upon reaching a silver anniversary as operating head of the road. It was unanimously adopted.

Four directors were re-elected. They are G. M. Moffett, who filled the unexpired term of the late Jules Kruttschnitt; L. F. Loree, George E. Marcy and Frank L. Polk.

The question of Mr. Underwood's re-election as President will come up at the "organization meeting" on April 23. There have been many stories that he contemplated retirement. One report was that he would be succeeded by J. J. Bernet, head of the Nickel Plate.

Operating Income Higher.

The annual report of the Erie shows net operating income of $17,530,619, against $17,072,177 in 1924, an increase of $458,441. Operating revenues of $118,543,455, compared with $119,096,855 the year before.

"The revenue from transportation of coal," said Mr. Underwood, "decreased $5,739,312, due to the strike in the anthracite coal mines, 2,600,000 less tons of anthracite coal having been handled in 1925 than in 1924. The increase of $4,946,583 in revenue from transportation of merchandise offset, in a large measure, the loss of 'coal' revenue. The surplus transferred from the income account to the profit and loss account was $5,582,391. The surplus for the year 1925 would have been the greatest in the company's history had it not been for the suspension of anthracite mining."

The surplus mentioned above is equivalent to earnings of $14.05 on the first preferred, $30.08 on the second preferred and $3.71 on the common, compared with $20.04 on the first preferred; $48.03 on the second preferred, and $6.26 on the common stock in 1924. The necessity of additions and betterments to the property made it unwise, according to officers of the company, to declare any dividends.

FOREIGN STOCK MARKETS.

Prices Generally Easier in Markets Abroad.

LONDON, April 13.—Gilt-edged securities were easier on the Stock Exchange today. Oil shares and British industrials were dull. Old 2½ per cent. consols ⅛ lower at 54⅝; British 5 per cent. war loan unchanged at 102; 4½ per cent. war loan ⅛ lower at 95⅝.

PARIS, April 13.—Prices were heavy on the Bourse today. Three per cent. rentes 40 centimes higher at 47 francs 75 centimes; 5 per cent. war loan 30 centimes higher at 57 francs 95 centimes.

Exchange on London 1 franc 25 centimes lower at 140 francs 60 centimes. The American dollar was quoted at 28 francs 94 centimes, against 29 francs 14 centimes yesterday.

TOPICS IN WALL STREET.

News, Comment and Incident, On the Stock Exchange and In the Financial Markets.

Following weakness during most of the forenoon yesterday, the stock market recovered swiftly in the afternoon dealings, and net gains ranging from 1 to 5 points were numerous among the active stocks at the close. The early irregularity was due to continued liquidation following Monday's sharp break in prices. More favorable reports regarding conditions in Cuba were received later, and the call money rate, which opened at 5 per cent., dropped to 4½ per cent., compared with a high rate of 5 on Monday. These developments were followed by short covering, and by mid-afternoon the general list was on the way upward. As was to be expected, those stocks which registered the sharpest losses on Monday, and in which a large short interest was outstanding, rallied most in the afternoon dealings. They included Woolworth, Interborough, Allied Chemical, General Electric, Postum, Kresge, Coca-Cola, Nash Motors, Jordan and Hudson Motors, all of which were up from 2 to 5 points compared with the previous sale. Trading was on a moderately active scale, but total dealings were smaller than on Monday.

Bond Market Irregular.

Irregularity developed in the bond market yesterday under a diminished volume of trade. The hesitancy which was apparent during last month's declines in the stock market reappeared and it was clear that the bond market had not fully shaken itself free of the influence of stock prices. Some of the higher grade railroad and industrial bonds which recently reached new high levels for the year held up well yesterday and even advanced fractionally, but there were fractional losses in other parts of the list. In the foreign section, French bonds suffered moderate declines, while a firm tone was general in South American securities. An easier tone was apparent in United States Government obligations, but price movements were narrow. All investment houses report a continued increase in the investment demand and money was fundamentally easy.

Latin America Now Chief Borrower.

The conclusion of negotiations this week for several South American loans illustrates not only the competition among American bankers for this type of business, but the narrowing of the field for American loans. Germany, which furnished the largest activity last year in foreign loans made by American bankers, has borrowed very little in this market of late, and most other European countries which are eligible to borrow here have reached the point where they are able to take care of their needs at home. England not only is not a borrower, but has expanded her activity as a lender and is furnishing competition against American banking groups in several parts of the world. The Orient for the time being is not likely to borrow abroad, which leaves the Latin-American countries the most promising field for the absorption of capital. The dearth of new offerings and the broad investment demand are stimulating the competition for these loans.

Flurry in Money Passes.

The fact that withdrawals of funds to meet the Cuban bank situation represented but a passing incident was illustrated yesterday by the increased offerings of money in the local market, which caused a decline to 4½ per cent. in the call loan rate, compared with a rate of 5½ per cent. on the previous day. As is usual when the rate advances, the interior of the country sent large amounts of money into the market. Time money also continued in excess of the demand and the rates were easy yesterday. With the commercial demand abated for the time, bankers believed that comparatively cheap money was likely to continue at least until June. The renewal rate yesterday on call loans was 5 per cent., the highest since the stringency caused by the quarterly settlements of April 1, but this was merely the aftermath of Monday's flurry. Bankers said the Cuban financial disturbance was definitely over and that progress would be made soon in relieving the sugar situation, which was the sole cause of the trouble.

New York Transactions Higher.

All sorts of rumors were going about Wall Street yesterday, none of which could be definitely pinned down, about the strength in the traction stocks, reflected yesterday in gains of 5½ points in Interborough, of 2½ in Brooklyn & Manhattan Transit and 2½ in Third Avenue. The most persistent rumor was that a zoning system of fares was under consideration and believed to be favored by some of the high city authorities. At any rate, there was an active demand for the traction shares, mostly from the uptown offices of Stock Exchange firms.

The Railroad Loan Bill.

Secretary Mellon's remarks on the bill to reduce the interest rate on Government loans to the railroads were construed by local railroad men yesterday as favorable to its passage. This bill has met with very little opposition, most of those concerned agreeing that it is unfair for the Government to charge the carriers 6 per cent. on money it is able to get for 4 per cent. or less. The railroads which have borrowed money at 5 or 5½ per cent. since the resumption of private control to pay off their obligations to the Government are apparently content to let their weaker sisters have the benefit of a larger reduction.

Steel Common Resists Pressure.

It is conceded in most quarters of Wall Street that the market's natural leader, United States Steel common, has acted splendidly "on the tape" during the recent turbulent markets. There has been good support for it on the way down, and yesterday when the market reached the turning point, it was Steel that led the way up. It is a rather remarkable thing how much attention Wall Street pays to the action of a few representative stocks. It is almost invariably the case that "as they go, so goes the market."

Faster Train Service.

The Boston & Maine has discovered that increasing the speed of passenger trains increases the number of passengers, and is using the experience in combatting motor competition. Executives of other railroads agree that faster train service is a important factor in competing with the private automobile, but say that it must be done by the establishment of express trains rather than by adding to the number of miles per hour of regular trains. The latter method, they say, wears out rails and rolling stock so rapidly that it is questionable if the additional fares repay the damage.

A Lively Erie Meeting.

The twenty-ninth anniversary of Frederick A. Underwood as President of the Erie was enlivened yesterday at the road's annual meting by a verbal battle between stockholders over the question of the continued refusal of the directors to declare dividends on the first preferred stock. Dr. Henry Shively, who led the fight, asserted that if payments were made the road would be able to get better terms from the Van Sweringens if a new merger plan is proposed. This argument was answered by the officers of the company, who held the majority of the proxies. They declared that more than twenty years ago the company had tried out a theory that the declaration of dividends would improve its credit and found that it would not work. After the smoke of the combat had cleared away Dr. Shively moved to tender congratulations to Mr. Underwood on his rounding out of twenty-five years of service as head of the Erie.

MONEY.

TUESDAY, APRIL 13, 1926.

As a result of a recession in the calling of loans, with the gradual clearing up of the situation which impelled tremendous withdrawals and stiff charges on Monday, the rate for Stock Exchange demand loans pointed lower, moving down to 4½ per cent. in mid-afternoon, from an opening and renewal at 5. An outside market prevailed a slight fraction under the board figure. In time money, most maturities were offered at 4½ per cent., but there was very little done except in replacements and renewals at 4¾ per cent. Neither commercial paper nor acceptances developed any variation from previous discounts, both markets ruling quiet and firm.

DEPARTMENT OF ANTIOQUIA (REPUBLIC OF COLOMBIA)

7% Twenty-Year External Secured Sinking Fund Gold Bonds
SERIES "B"

Dated July 1, 1925 Due July 1, 1945

Authorized $20,000,000, Outstanding $3,000,000 Series "A". Present issue $3,000,000 Series "B". $3,000,000 Series "A" are reserved to retire $3,000,000 Internal Bonds. Principal and semi-annual interest, January 1 and July 1, payable in U. S. Gold at the office of Blair & Co., New York, Fiscal Agents, free of all taxes, present or future, of the Department of Antioquia and of the Republic of Colombia. Coupon bonds in denominations of $1,000, $500 and $100, registerable as to principal only.

A Cumulative Sinking Fund sufficient to retire the Series "B" Bonds by maturity, is provided, payable semi-annually commencing July 1, 1928 to call Bonds by lot at 100 and accrued interest on the next succeeding interest payment date.

Callable as a whole only, except for the sinking fund, at 102½ and accrued interest on July 1, 1935, and on any interest date thereafter.

The following information has been furnished by Ricardo Jimenez Jaramillo, Esq., Governor of the Department of Antioquia:

ANTIOQUIA: The Department of Antioquia, situated in the north-central part of the Republic of Colombia, is the largest of the departments of the Republic, having an area of 25,000 square miles and a population of over 800,000. It contains 35 towns of 10,000 people or more, and the whole commercial territory tributary to Medellin, the capital, reaches over 2,000,000 people out of a population of 6,000,000 in the entire Republic. Due to the energetic character of the Antioquian people, the greatest industrial development in Colombia is found in this Department. Agriculture, stock raising, mining and manufacturing are the principal industries. The Department is the largest producer of gold in the Republic.

Antioquia produces approximately one-fourth of the coffee grown in the Republic of Colombia, which is the second largest producer of coffee in the world. There are over 60,000,000 coffee trees in Antioquia, and the value of the 1925 production of coffee in the Department is calculated at about $17,000,000.

There are two railways in the Department, the more important being the Antioquia Railway (Ferrocarril de Antioquia), which is owned by the Department. This railway is operated in two divisions between Puerto Berrio on the Magdalena River and Medellin, the capital, a distance of 120 miles. All imports and exports to Medellin and the interior of the Department pass over this railway, which has shown an operating profit in every year since 1910. An extension of approximately 38 miles running southward from Medellin and through the coffee-producing zone is now under construction.

SECURITY: These Bonds are the direct obligation of the Department of Antioquia. Together with $3,000,000 Series "A" Bonds, they are to be specifically secured (upon the retirement of Fr. 1,878,000 bonds, funds for which purpose have been deposited with the Fiscal Agents), by

(1) a first charge and lien on 75% of the revenues of the Department derived from the tobacco tax, and

(2) a lien, subject to $3,000,000 Internal Bonds, on the properties and earnings of the Antioquia Railway, including all extensions, additions and improvements constructed or acquired with the proceeds of these Bonds. $3,000,000 face amount of Series "A" Bonds are reserved to retire the $3,000,000 Internal Bonds, whereupon the Bonds of this issue will become a first mortgage on all the properties and revenues of the Railway.

The Department covenants that it will not issue any of the remaining $8,000,000 authorized Bonds unless the proceeds of the assigned revenues for the preceding fiscal year or the annual average of the two preceding fiscal years shall be at least equal to twice the annual interest and sinking fund requirements on the Bonds outstanding, including those then to be issued.

REVENUES: For the past three years the proceeds (in Colombian Dollars) of the revenues assigned for the security of these Bonds have been as follows:

*Year ended December 31. †Year ended June 30.

The average annual proceeds for the three years 1923-1925, from the revenues assigned for the security of these Bonds, as shown above, converted at par of exchange, were equal to approximately 2.90 times the annual interest requirements on the External Gold Bonds to be presently outstanding, including this issue, and in none of the three years were such proceeds less than 2½ times said annual interest requirements. For the year 1925 the proceeds from such revenues, as shown above, were equal to about 3½ times such charges.

On the same basis the average annual proceeds of these revenues for the three-year period were equivalent to 2.11 times the maximum annual interest and sinking fund requirements on the External Gold Bonds to be presently outstanding including this issue. It should be noted that the net earnings from the railway, for the period shown above, do not reflect any benefit from the additions and extensions to be provided with the proceeds of the present issue.

PURPOSE: The proceeds of the present issue will be used to provide funds for the construction of an addition to the Antioquia Railway of approximately 38 miles extending through the coffee-producing zone, and for additions and betterments to the existing lines of the Antioquia Railway.

FINANCES: The total debt of the Department of Antioquia as of December 31, 1925, exclusive of debt, provision for the retirement of which was made through the issue of Series "A" Bonds, amounted to $6,452,000. Including the present loan, the total debt of the Department amounts to $12,452,000, or about $16 (U. S.) per capita.

Since its creation in 1886 the Department has never defaulted in the payment of principal, interest or sinking fund of any of its indebtedness or in the payment of its bonds when due. The revenues of the Department, exclusive of income from and expenditures on the Antioquia Railway, for each of the three fiscal years ended June 30, 1925, exceeded expenditures.

We offer the above Bonds "when, as and if" issued and received by us and subject to approval of our Counsel, Messrs. Hornblower, Miller & Garrison. Interim Receipts or Temporary Bonds may be delivered in the first instance.

Price 91½ and accrued interest

This entire issue is to be retired at par by semi-annual calls for Sinking Fund, the first call to be made January 1, 1927. At the offering price of 91½, the following table shows the approximate yield to certain of the various redemption dates:

Date Called	Yield	Date Called	Yield
January 1, 1927	21.08%	July 1, 1932	8.82%
July 1, 1927	15.12%	July 1, 1935	8.35%
July 1, 1928	11.59%	July 1, 1940	8.01%
July 1, 1930	9.53%	July 1, 1945	7.87%

PROTEST MERGER OF TITLE COMPANIES

United States Title Guaranty Stockholders Want an Even Exchange of Shares.

CITE ITS EARNING POWER

Consolidation With New York Title and Mortgage Up for Ratification April 22.

Prospects of a struggle over the recently announced $30,000,000 merger of the New York Title and Mortgage Company and the United States Title Guaranty Company loomed yesterday with a declaration of protest against the consolidation by a group of Brooklyn and Suffolk County stockholders in the latter company.

A protest committee, organized by the suburban stockholders, sent out letters yesterday to the other stockholders in the United States Title Guaranty Company, requesting aid in the campaign to defeat approval of the merger at the stockholders' meeting on April 22.

The basis of their contention is that the split-up of stock under the merger plan, which has been approved by the directors of both concerns, is not fair to them. The plan is to exchange two shares of the New York Title and Mortgage Company for three of the United States Title Guaranty Company. The protestants hold that the stock and assets of United States Title are sufficient to justify an even exchange.

Members of the committee of protest are Roger M. Wiley of Riverhead, Chief Clerk of the Suffolk County Surrogate's Court; B. Frank Howell, President of the Suffolk County National Bank, Riverhead; S. Lester Albertson of Southold, director of the Southold Bank; William F. Flanagan of Riverhead, director of the Suffolk County National Bank; Raymond A. Smith of Easthampton, director of the Osborne Trust Company; J. Francis Magee of Riverhead; Ambrose D. Crowin of Brooklyn, member of the Mechanics Bank of Brooklyn, and Van Brunt E. Tandy of Brooklyn.

The protesting committee points out the exceptional earning power of the United States Title Guaranty Company and also discrepancies in the valuations of the Brooklyn and Jamaica buildings of the company. The former building is carried on the books at $1,450,000, but its true value is conservatively $2,500,000; the latter building is carried at $72,000, whereas a conservative estimate of its value is $300,000. These two items alone would constitute an increase in assets of $1,278,000, the committee declared.

Under the merger plan, Charles E. Covert, now President of the United States Title, would become Vice President of the consolidated concern, with full charge of the Long Island division.

At the offices of the New York Title and Mortgage Company yesterday no information was forthcoming as to the protest to the plan. H. A. Kahler, President, was reported out of town.

APPROVE BUS VOTING STOCK

Act Favorably on Petition After Change in Non-Voting Features.

Special to The New York Times.

TRENTON, N. J., April 13.—The Delaware and New Jersey Transportation Company, which is to operate five bus lines in Southern New Jersey and Delaware was today authorized by the Public Utility Commission to issue 5,000 shares of common stock and 2,400 shares of preferred stock at $100 a share.

The application of the concern was contained in an amended petition filed after the board refused last week to approve a prior request on the ground that the sanction sought would create a voting trust with control in a few stockholders hands. At that time the company asked permission to issue $200,000 worth of non-voting preferred stock, 2,000 shares of non-voting common stock and 2,500 shares of voting common stock.

In granting approval of the amended application the board assigned a value of $50,000 to the common stock. The stock is held by Eugene, John and Michael Healy, proprietors of Healy Brothers, a bus partnership. The Delaware and New Jersey Transportation Company will operate the vehicles of Healy Brothers.

Proceeds of the sale of the preferred stock to be issued will be used to acquire new buses, terminals and equipment and to pay off debts of the partnership.

FOREIGN EXCHANGE.

Spanish Pesetas Strong on Loan Success and Riff War End —Sterling Soft.

The success which recently greeted the flotation of internal loan, and conferences leading to an amicable adjustment of the differences between the Spanish Government and the Riffians, combined to bring another spurt in the Spanish pesetas yesterday. Madrid exchange at the day's top of 14.32½ cents for checks, showed an advance of 10 points from Monday's final. Profit taking later canceled part of this gain.

Business in sterling and the Continentals was small and rate changes unimportant. Sterling again lost ground, but as on Monday it ran only to a bare fraction at $4.85⅝. French and Belgian francs were in better demand and improved to 3.44 and 3.79 cents respectively. Italian lire climbed out of its "pegged" area by ¼ cent, to 4.02⅝ cents, a new high on this movement. Scandinavians were reactionary as realizing sales set in following the recent sharp boost in rates. Chinese exchanges were irregular, while the Japanese yen sagged slightly. South Americans failed to develop any change in a market that was quiet and dull for them.

A RECORD IN CAR MILEAGE.

Average Daily Freight Movements in February Was 28.6 Miles.

A February record for daily movement of freight cars on the steam railroads of the country was made this year when the average movement in the month was 28.6 miles per day, according to reports filed yesterday with the Bureau of Railway Economics.

The February movement marked an increase of 1.7 miles per day over February, 1925, and 1.2 miles over February, 1924.

The average load per car in February was 27.2 tons, the same as February last year, but two-fifths of a ton below February, 1924.

American Type Net $610,000.

An estimated net profit after depreciation and Federal taxes, for the six months ended Feb. 27 last of $610,000 was reported yesterday by the American Typefounders Company. This compares with $545,000 in the same period last year, and is equivalent, after preferred dividends, to $7.83 a share earned on 60,000 shares of $100 par common stock. Last year the profits equaled $6.75 a share on the same basis.

General Electric Orders Advance.

Orders received by the General Electric Company in the first three months of the year totaled $36,433,668, it was announced yesterday by Gerard Swope, President. This is an increase of 3 per cent. over the $33,846,226 of orders received in the same period last year.

MONEY RATE EASIER; CUBAN FLURRY OVER

Call Loans Back on 4½ Per Cent. Basis—Normal Withdrawal of Deposits in Cuba.

SUGAR TRADE SEEKS RELIEF

With the subsidence of pressure for money to cope with the recent bank run in Cuba, money rates ranged lower yesterday and call loans, which were made at 5½ per cent. on Monday, settled back to a basis of 4½ per cent. There was virtually no calling of loans, which contrasted with the withdrawal of about $35,000,000 on the day before and bankers said that the Cuban situation had ceased to be a factor in the market.

Only normal withdrawals of funds were made yesterday by depositors in Cuban branches of the National City Bank, the Royal Bank of Canada and other institutions which had been subjected to runs at the close of last week. The receipt of close to $100,000,000 through the machinery of the Federal Reserve System and through bank withdrawals from New York has placed more than sufficient funds on the island to care for all needs, it was said, and with the definite information that no moratorium is in prospect, the uneasiness among the Cuban populace has ended.

With the restoration of normal banking conditions in Cuba, activities there are now turning to active measures for the relief of the sugar industry, which has been depressed for months, and it is expected that the Cuban Government, the banks and the industry itself will cooperate in formulating a new program. One of the features of the new plan probably will be a reduction in production, and efforts also may be made to induce the United States Government to extend a more favorable tariff basis for Cuban sugar in exchange for reciprocal tariff action in Cuba in favor of American products.

Renewals of demand loans were made at the start yesterday at 5 per cent., the highest renewal rates since the stringency caused by the quarterly settlements around April 1, but this was merely the aftermath of Monday's flurry in money. It soon became apparent that the Cuban disturbance was merely a passing incident that had nothing to do with basic credit supplies. Money from the interior of the country began to make its appearance in abundance, as usual whenever the rate goes to 5 per cent. or more, and there was little demand. Under these influences the call rate declined to 4½ per cent.

Time money was also in plentiful supply, with no change in quotations. With the commercial demand for funds only nominal and with surplus funds continuing to accumulate, bankers believe that comparatively cheap money will continue at least until early in June.

REFRIGERATION CO. NET UP.

Electric Concern of Detroit Reports $969,885 Profit in First Quarter.

The Electric Refrigeration Corporation of Detroit reports a net profit for the first 1926 quarter of $969,885, after Federal taxes, which is equivalent to $1.47 a share on 571,250 shares outstanding. In the same period last year the profit was $664,193, or $1 a share on the combined capital of the Nitter-Kelvinator and Grand Rapids Refrigerator Companies. Current assets were $9,386,045, against current liabilities of $2,445,148, a ratio of about 4 for 1.

President A. H. Goss told stockholders that the corporation was "beginning to enjoy the benefits of consolidation which were anticipated at the time of the merger." More electric refrigeration will be produced and sold during 1926, Mr. Goss emphasized, than ever before in the history of the industry.

NEW HIGH RECORD IN LIFE INSURANCE

Sales So Far This Year Called "the Most Marvelous First Quarter-Year Achievement."

$1,039,098,000. IN MARCH

Sales of life insurance in the United States during the first three months of 1926 exceeded those of the same period last year by 14 per cent. in what insurance men call the "most marvelous first quarter-year of achievement ever recorded in the annals of the business," according to a report made yesterday by the Association of Life Insurance Presidents.

The report said that not only was a new high record established for each of the three months, but the March volume also exceeded that of any previous month of any year, except December, 1924 and 1925.

"This rate of increase of 14 per cent. following and exceeding the gain of 11 per cent. for the like period in 1925 over 1924," said George T. Wight, manager of the association, "emphasizes progressive acceleration in the acquisition of new life insurance protection in this country.

"The association's report aggregates the records of forty-five of our member companies, which have in force 81 per cent. of the total outstanding business in all United States legal reserve life insurance companies. The amount of this new business purchased in January was, $854,057,000, an increase of 13.3 per cent. over that bought in January, 1924; that purchased in February this year totaled $869,246,000, an increase over the previous February of 12.4 per cent.; while that acquired in March, 1926, was $1,039,098,000, or a gain of 16.2 per cent. over the like month last year.

"America is not only economically sound but prosperous. In no other way could such a record of achievement in the accumulation of savings through the institution of life insurance be explained. This acquisition of life insurance clearly indicates strong purchasing power of the people, coupled with a widespread and steady purpose of the many individuals to save and invest in the interests of themselves and their families."

The largest increase was in group insurance, which showed a gain of 44.5 per cent., or $65,216,000.

COLUMBIA GAS VOTES TO ADD TO COMMON

No Action at Annual Meeting on Disposition of New Shares—Directors Re-elected.

Stockholders of the Columbia Gas and Electric Company at their annual meeting in Charleston, W. Va., yesterday approved increasing the common stock of the company from 1,500,000 to 2,000,000 no-par shares. More than 70 per cent. of stockholders were represented. They re-elected the directors, but took no action on the disposition of the additional shares authorized.

It was said at the offices of the company here that the new stock might be used either for payment of a stock dividend or for disposal to shareholders through rights issued on their holdings. It was added, however, that the directors had not decided on any definite policy and might not for some time. They will meet here within a few days.

The need for financing arises from the fact that two underlying security issues become due Jan. 1. On that date $8,225,500 outstanding of first mortgage gold 5s and $2,588,140 outstanding of debenture 5s become due. In addition there were $5,932,000 of the bonds in the company's treasury and $261,860 of the debentures held by the company and subsidiaries as of Dec. 31 last.

Last May bondholders of the company were offered three-year 5 per cent. gold notes due May 1, 1928, in exchange for their holdings. There are now $12,794,000 of these notes outstanding.

FORECLOSES ON MINE BONDS

Bank Here Gets Order Against the San Geronimo of Mexico.

Supreme Court Justice Mahoney signed an order yesterday for the foreclosure of property owned by the San Geronimo Mining and Metals Corporation of Hermosillo, Senora, Mexico, given as security for a bond issue of $92,500 made in 1923. The suit was brought by the Irving Bank-Columbia Trust Company, trustee of the bond issue, which alleged that the interest due May 1, 1924, and since, is unpaid and that the plaintiff declared the principal of the bonds due on March 4.

The trustee received as security for the bonds all the stock of the El Tajo Mining Company and a draft of that company in favor of the San Geronimo company for $1,010,000 for advances made by the latter.

The Court appointed Assemblyman Maurice Bloch referee to determine the amount due.

SOUTHERN PACIFIC NET INCOME GAINS

Road's Gross Business Biggest Ever, but Profit Per Share Is Lower Than in 1924.

MISSOURI PACIFIC GAINS

Earns 10.7% on Preferred Stock and 4.9% on Common—Northern Pacific Also Does Better.

The 1925 report of the Southern Pacific Company, issued yesterday, shows net income of $35,657,410 after taxes and charges, equivalent to $9.57 a share on 3,723,809 outstanding shares. This compares with $35,419,903, or $10.14 a share, on an average of 3,490,816 shares outstanding during 1924. Gross business was the largest in the company's history.

Including net income of $2,258,906 of the solely controlled subsidiary companies, not included in the above account, total net income amounted to $37,916,316, or $10.18 a share, and compares with total net income of $40,490,927, or $11.60 a share, in 1924.

Reviewing the year's operations, the report calls attention to an increase of freight revenue of $4,962,234, a decrease on the company's Texas and Louisiana lines being more than offset by an increase on the Pacific lines. The decrease in the Southwest was due principally to a severe drought which curtailed the production of cotton, corn, wheat, oats and other agricultural products. It is estimated that the loss of freight revenue from this cause was $3,500,000.

On the Pacific lines a decrease in the shipment of citrus fruits in the earlier part of the year was more than offset by a gain in revenues from the shipment of automobiles, lumber and mineral oils and by an active Summer and Fall movement of such products as grapes, lettuce, deciduous fruits and vegetables.

"Passenger revenue," says the report, "decreased $2,717,315. On the Texas and Louisiana lines the decrease amounted to about $1,000,000, all of which represents a loss in local traffic, due to reduction in travel resulting from the unfavorable crop and business conditions caused by the drought in Texas, heretofore mentioned, and to increased automobile competition.

"On the Pacific lines a decrease of approximately $2,800,000, due to increased use of automobiles (both commercial and private) and to an unusual Winter travel to Florida, temporarily diverting business which otherwise would have gone to California, was partially offset by an increase of about $1,000,000 due to an increase in Summer excursion travel and increased travel to conventions and local celebrations."

Regarding the company's construction in Mexico, work is said to be proceeding diligently, 64.73 miles of track having been completed during the year, making a total of 81.81 miles completed to Dec. 31. Of the 20.97 miles remaining to be completed at the close of the year 6.96 miles of grading had been finished and the grading of 9.47 more is in progress.

MISSOURI PACIFIC EARNINGS.

The report of the Missouri Pacific Railroad for 1925 indicates a net income of $7,648,208 transferred to profit and loss compared with one of $6,503,217 in 1924, a gain of $1,114,991. The 1925 profit is equivalent to earnings of 10.7 per cent. on the company's preferred stock and 4.9 per cent. on its common.

Total railway operating revenues were $130,831,661, as compared with $123,647,723 in the previous year, an increase of $7,183,937 or 5.81 per cent. The gain in freight revenue was $8,369,885 or 8.72 per cent. The principal increases were $3,227,521 in revenue from shipment of products of mines and $5,898,396 from manufactures and miscellaneous. Less than carload traffic brought $943,089 more despite the competition brought about by the more extensive use of motor trucks.

Passenger revenue was $16,536,035, as compared with $17,525,199 in 1924, a decrease of 5.64 per cent. All of this decrease was in local lines. The interline traffic showed substantial increases. The number of revenue passengers shows a decrease of 25.09 per cent, but the number of passenger miles a reduction of but 3.89 per cent. There was an increase of 28.30 per cent. in the average haul per passenger indicating "a continuing decrease in the short-haul passenger traffic resulting from improved roads and greater use of motor vehicles."

NORTHERN PACIFIC PROFIT.

The Northern Pacific Railway Company issued yesterday its report for 1925, showing total assets of $816,893,826, against $808,712,966 on Dec. 31, 1924. Current assets were $33,832,846 and current liabilities $16,861,457, against $33,649,806 and $17,327,751, respectively, the previous year. The profit and loss surplus totaled $163,757,021, against $158,692,074 at the end of 1924.

The income account, which had already been published, shows net income of $17,944,288, after taxes and charges, equivalent to $7.23 a share earned on the outstanding $248,000,000 of capital stock. This compared with $15,970,244, or $6.44 a share, in 1924. At the annual meeting of stockholders the directors whose terms expired were renominated.

Howard Elliott, Chairman of the board, said that so far as any forecast can be made at this time the volume of business in 1926 will equal and may exceed that of 1925. "Soil and moisture conditions in the territory served by the Northern Pacific are very good," Mr. Elliott said. "The outlook indicates a good crop of grains, grasses and fruits. The live stock situation is better than a year ago. Lumber is about the same, and general business fairly good. The purchasing power of the country is better than a year ago, and the general banking situation is better."

Mr. Elliott said that the railroad is doing much more new construction than last year. All returns indicate a heavy tourist traffic, but local passenger business is poor, owing to private motors and buses. Mr. Elliott commended the Watson-Parker Railroad Labor bill.

Otis Steel Earnings Show Gain.

Earnings of the Otis Steel Company for the first quarter of 1926 show a marked gain over the same period of 1925, the profit being, after all charges except depreciation, $888,619, as against $223,262 for the same period last year. March profits totaled $287,850, as compared with $119,566 in March, 1925.

GENERAL MOTORS SETS NEW SALES RECORD

Retail sales of General Motors Corporation for March reached a new high record this year, 85,457 cars in excess of the sales for the same month last year, and 237 cars greater than the previous high record of April, 1923, when 105,778 cars were sold.

This year's retail sales of General Motors' divisions, including those overseas, totaled 106,051 cars, compared with 70,594 cars for March, 1925. During the first quarter retail sales reached 224,720, compared with 125,706 a year ago, a gain of 66 per cent.

Sales to dealers for March also marked a new high point, being 113,341, against 75,527 in March, 1925, and the previous high record of 95,384 in October, 1925. During the first quarter the sales to dealers totaled 280,906, a gain of 81 per cent.

Alfred P. Sloan, President of General Motors, said:

"These figures establish a new high record in General Motors history. Their importance may be appreciated when consideration is given the fact that sales potential of March is less than that of April because of the seasonal trend. The stock of unsold cars in the hands of dealers and branches at the end of March was well in line with Spring requirements, there being absolutely no excess. As a matter of fact it is expected that one or two of our divisions will lose sales on account of insufficient stocks and inability to move sufficient production to meet the demand."

Sues Frisco Road for Dividends.

Carl W. Brown has filed an action in the Federal Court for Eastern Missouri to compel the St. Louis-San Francisco Railway Company to pay $3,045,372, which it is alleged, is due holders of the company's $4,557,500 6 per cent. preferred stock. The action is based on the same contentions as were used by preferred stockholders in the original Southern Railway case, when they sought $29,000,000 back dividends. It is contended in the Missouri action that the $3,045,372 has been earned and is available for dividends.

LONG ISLAND ROAD HAS $810,000 SURPLUS

Makes First Report on Credit Side in 26 Years—Passengers Increase 8.5 Per Cent.

The report of the Long Island Railroad covering operations for 1925 was approved yesterday by the stockholders at their annual meeting, held in the Pennsylvania Station here, yesterday. The report calls attention to the fact that "for the first time in twenty-six years the profit and loss account has changed from the debit to the credit side, the amount to the credit of that accont at the close of the year being more than $810,000."

During 1925 the number of passengers carried was 100,922,813, an increase of 8.5 per cent. over 1924. At the Pennsylvania Station the Long Island handled 38,033,975 passengers, an increase of 19.5 per cent. over the previous year. The traffic to and from that station continues to show a larger increase, it is said, than the Flatbush Avenue and other terminal points.

Passengers carried on commutation, family and school tickets increased 11.5 per cent., representing 64 per cent. of the total passengers carried.

Freight hauled amounted to 8,016,763 tons, or 5 per cent. more than the year before. Notwithstanding the anthracite strike, fuel tonnage decreased only 1.1 per cent. Building material tonnage gained 15 per cent. One hundred and sixty-five new industries located along the company's lines, compared with 140 in 1924.

Referring to the development of Montauk, the report recounts that in September, 1925, a contract was entered into between the Montauk Company, in which the Long Island owns a one-quarter stock interest, and the Montauk Beach Development Corporation to sell the real estate of the Montauk Company at Montauk Point to the development corporation. Title to the property was closed early in 1926.

CONSOLIDATED ASKS STATE FOR RELIEF

Evans Proposes Modifications in Terms to Lift Burden on the Exchange.

AGREEMENT HELD DOUBTFUL

Keyes Winter, Head of Anti-Fraud Bureau, Says He Is in No Hurry to Act.

Its existence admittedly a burden under the drastic regulatory provisions of its agreement with Attorney General Albert Ottinger's Anti-Stock Frauds Bureau, which was sanctioned by Supreme Court Justice John Ford, the Consolidated Stock Exchange has submitted a formal plea for relief through modification of five paragraphs of the stipulation recently approved by its officers, directors and a majority of its members.

Deputy Attorney General Keyes Winter, head of the Anti-Stock Frauds Bureau, produced a letter from Phillip Evans, President of the Consolidated, in which the modification proposals were given in detail. Mr. Winter said that Mr. Evans had also had a long talk with him and that he had been informed that the Exchange members were of the opinion that it could not long continue in business unless material relief was obtained.

Although Mr. Winter would not say what action he would take, it is believed by many that he will not consent to alter the agreement.

Mr. Evans, in his letter to Mr. Winter, asked that the paragraph requiring every commission house member of the Exchange to have, at all times, a minimum capital of $25,000 be modified by striking out the minimum altogether. In the same paragraph Mr. Evans would change the word "customers" to "non-members" in the following sentence:

"None but commission houses shall buy or sell securities for the public as brokers, or charge commissions as brokers, or receive accounts, money or property of customers."

Mr. Evans would change to $1,000 the amount mentioned in Paragraph 11, which reads: "Every member of the Exchange clearing for himself shall keep on deposit at all times with the clearing house a minimum of $3,000."

Mr. Evans asked that the "last eleven words" be stricken from Paragraph 6, which now reads as follows: "Commission houses shall be defined as any member buying or selling securities for the public as brokers and charging commissions as brokers, or dealing with or for any non-members, or with or for more than five members of the Exchange."

Mr. Evans would also extend the time limit of ten minutes granted to "specialists" on the floor in which to execute an order to thirty minutes. Mr. Winter said he had talked with Mr. Evans about eliminating the "specialists" altogether and thought an agreement to this effect might be reached. A specialist is a trader who has sole right to sell certain stocks on the floor of the Exchange.

Mr. Winter said he had not answered Mr. Evans's communication and was "not in a hurry" to do so.

STEEL COMMON BEING SOLD.

Shares Held for Customers by Brokers Increased 118,466.

An increase of 118,466 shares of United States Steel common stock held for customers by brokers was noted during the first quarter, and a decrease of 119,466 shares in the number held for investment, according to a report published yesterday. The increase is due to liquidation of the stock, the report said.

The floating supply on March 31, representing the amount available for speculation, totaled 1,521,220 shares, or 29.92 per cent. of the outstanding number. This compares with 1,402,754 shares, or 26.6 per cent. of the entire issue held by brokers on Dec. 31, 1924, and with 1,364,850 shares, or 26.81 per cent. on March 31. The increase in the floating supply for last year was 156,370 shares.

Shares held by investors totaled 3,561,806, or 70.06 per cent. of the issue on March 31. This compares with 3,680,271, or 72.4 per cent. on Dec. 31, 1925, and 3,718,175, or 73.19 per cent. on March 31.

Brokers' holdings in New York State at the end of the quarter were 1,233,612, while foreign holdings were 112,036 shares.

EXPECT HARDWARE GAINS.

A general firmness of prices, the common belief that there is no room for further important declines from current levels and a light current business due to unseasonable weather are the important factors in the hardware trade, according to this week's issue of Hardware Age. Leaders and retailers in almost all sections believe that it is unwise to delay necessary purchases in anticipation of lower Spring prices.

"At large the trade is optimistic," the publication says. "Building programs look good, farmers had a satisfactory year and the 1926 agricultural outlook suggests another profitable year for farmers. Wages and employment are both good. Freight car loadings are heavy, with an increase predicted in twelve leading industries. The hardware trade feels that basic conditions are sound and that better conditions will come with better weather. Current sales in Spring lines are light in most centres, but staple goods have had a consistent demand."

CRUDE OIL OUTPUT OFF 1,250 BARRELS

Daily Average Production Last Week Was 1,946,200 Barrels —California Declines.

A decrease of 1,250 barrels of crude oil marked production in the United States last week according to statistics compiled by the American Petroleum Institute. The daily average was 1,946,200 barrels as against 1,947,450 barrels for the preceding week.

Production in Oklahoma maintained the high rate set for it last week by the Sinclair well, brought in at that time, which flowed at the rate of 17,000 barrels a day. However, the Oklahoma figure dropped 9,600 barrels from last week's rate.

For the first time since the first of March production in California fell below the 600,000 barrels mark, with a total production of 597,000.

An increase of 5,450 barrels was noticed in Montana and slight increases were reported from Kansas, West Central Texas, North Louisiana, Arkansas, Gulf Coast, the Eastern region, and New Mexico. Decreases were reported from North Texas, East Central Texas, Southwest Texas, Wyoming and Colorado.

The following table shows the daily average production for the more important States and fields, compared with other periods, figures being in barrels of forty-two gallons each:

URUGUAY LOAN NEXT WEEK.

$30,000,000 Six Per Cent. Issue to Be Ratified in Few Days.

The $30,000,000 Uruguayan Government 6 per cent. loan, which was awarded this week to a syndicate headed by Hallgarten & Co. and Halsey, Stuart & Co. by the Uruguayan National Council, is expected to be offered to the public early next week. The award has yet to be ratified by the Uruguayan Congress, but this action is regarded as assured within a few days, as all parties are represented in the Council and there is no opposition to the loan.

Figures showing the remarkable national wealth of Uruguay became available in connection with the loan. The national wealth is estimated at $1,570 per capita, which is greater than that of any other South American country and, in Europe, exceeds that of Belgium, France, Holland or Germany. The gold reserves of the Government bank of issue at the end of 1925 exceeded the amount of notes in circulation. The Uruguayan peso has a nominal value slightly larger than the American dollar and is at present quoted substantially at par.

Among the purposes of the loan, aside from refunding, are expenditures for railways, harbor works, road building, agricultural developments and educational buildings. The loan will carry a sinking fund of 1 per cent. a year, operating semi-annually, which will retire the bonds in about thirty-three years. The price has not yet been announced.

MACHINERY BUSINESS GOOD.

American Machinist Reports Outlook is Favorable for Year.

General improvement is reported throughout the machinery industry, although there has been noted a lessening in activity in some sections, due, however, to temporary pending readjustment of production schedules, the American Machinist for this week reports.

Business continues more or less normal, it is said, with a good export demand and a favorable outlook for the remainder of the year in almost all sections.

"Conditions in the New England territory," the American Machinist says, "are better than in some time past. In the New York market sales are up to normal and there has been a steady improvement in expert demand. In Buffalo sales are spotty, but the outlook is regarded as favorable. Philadelphia reports increased industrial activity, with prospects for good summer business.

"Orders for machinery on the Detroit district are mostly for special equipment for the automotive industry. Buyers in Cleveland are taking equipment at a conservative rate. Orders in the Cincinnati region are scattered, yet the total represents a fair volume. The tone has improved in Chicago, especially for used machinery."

PACIFIC GAS INCOME GROWS.

The Pacific Gas and Electric Company, in its detailed statement for 1925, shows a net income of $7,851,537, after taxes, interest, depreciation, &c., the same as was shown in its preliminary statement. After preferred dividends the profit is equal to $9.52 a share on $48,130,848 of common stock. This compares with $7,028,349, or $8.83 a share on $42,805,932 common stock in 1924.

The consolidated income account shows gross earnings were $47,729,079, with other income $337,817. Expenses and taxes were $28,898,712. Bonds and interest were $7,936,837, while depreciation was figured at $1,807,950. After preferred dividends of $3,265,433 and common dividends of $3,624,337, a surplus remained of $361,557.

Among the total assets of $307,354,517 were cash, $1,538,865; notes and accounts receivable, $5,296,969; materials and supplies, $6,222,202; plant and property, $273,815,663; investments of $194,725, and due stock subscription, $342,763. Liabilities for 1925 totaled $236,774,236. Accounts payable were $2,194,637; outstanding drafts, $301,559; bond interest, $447,767; accrued interest, $1,956,673, and accrued taxes, $3,824,678.

Operations in 1925 Result in Surplus Equal to $4.54 on Common Stock.

MORE LONG-HAUL TRAFFIC

The net result of operation of the Chicago, Rock Island & Pacific Railway during 1925, the company announced yesterday, was a surplus equivalent to $4.54 on the common stock, compared with $4.36 in 1924. There was a decrease in gross revenue of $197,205 and an increase of about $380,000 in maintenance expenses, but these items were more than offset by a decrease in transportation expenses, so that net income advanced from $6,835,220 in 1924 to $6,966,127 in 1925.

The general balance shows current assets of $36,891,109, an increase of $7,309,129 over 1924. Current liabilities were $18,351,770, a gain of $3,384,232.

Net operating income of $22,799,945, against $23,046,156 the previous year, was reported as equivalent to 4.15 per cent. on the property investment. If freight rates had been adjusted, it was said, to enable the road to earn the 5¾ per cent. prescribed by the Interstate Commerce Commission, net operating income would have been $6,720,000 more.

"One of the outstanding features of the report," said President J. E. Gorman, "is the continued decline in passenger business, which is due almost entirely to the competition of the motor vehicle. We are carrying fewer passengers now than in 1911 or in any year since, and the passenger revenue in 1925 was less than in any year preceding.

"We recognize that this situation is a result of new conditions in transportation, and we are devoting our efforts to developing that phase of passenger business with which the motor bus cannot compete, namely the long-haul traffic. The improved California service, to which we referred in last year's report, has been very successful. The new Golden State Limited is earning a very substantial amount over the direct cost of operation, and the favorable comment of thousands of pleased travelers convinces us that the service is a great asset to the company. We are curtailing the local passenger train service to meet the new conditions; but, since there is a limit below which passenger train mileage cannot be reduced, we are trying out the motor car as a substitute for the passenger train, and believe that in the near future a type of motor rail car will be developed which will enable the railroads to compete with the motor bus for short haul traffic."

As previously announced a net profit of $2,467,000 was realized by the company in its purchase of the Edwin Gould holdings of the St. Louis Southwestern and the later sale to the Kansas City Southern Railway. "Such there are no commissions of any kind in the transaction, it was said, and the entire amount will be credited to the surplus account in 1926.

SEES NEW STABILITY IN BUSINESS LOANS

Federal Reserve Bulletin Points to Effects of Credit Readjustment.

SPECULATION DISCOURAGED

Production of Automobiles Is Larger, but Sales by Dealers Show a Decrease.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, D. C., April 13.—That the policy enunciated by the Federal Reserve system at the peak of the recent "bull" market on the Stock Exchange, which discouraged the extension of further loans by member banks on securities which were held for speculative purposes, had a very decided effect in bringing about a readjustment of the credit structure tending to stabilize business, was indicated in the April bulletin of the Federal Reserve Board, made public here today.

Between the end of December, 1925, and the end of March of the present year, the board pointed out, the volume of loans secured by stocks and bonds at member banks in leading cities declined by about $450,000,000, a reduction amounting to more than 40 per cent. of the increase in this class of loans during the preceding year.

This liquidation, which during the early weeks of the year was partly seasonal in character, the board added, continued in the later weeks largely as a result of the decrease in credit requirements of the security market consequent upon the drop in security values.

New York Cuts Loans 18 Per Cent.

"That it was the reduced volume of loans to finance the trading in securities that was the principal factor in the recent decline in the volume of this class of loans," the board stated, "is indicated by the fact that total loans of reporting banks to brokers and dealers made by member banks in New York City declined from $3,139,000,000 on Feb. 17, a figure close to the peak for the current year, to $2,573,000,000 on March 31, a drop during the six-week period of $556,000,000, or about 18 per cent."

This rapid decline in the credit requirements of the security market was accompanied, the board points out, by a growth in the demand for loans to finance the current operations of industry and trade, which continued to be active during the first three months of the year and was reflected after the end of January by a considerable increase in the volume of commercial loans at member banks in leading cities. These loans rose by the end of the first quarter to a level near that reached last Autumn when commercial loans were in larger volume than at any time in the past four years.

Out-of-Town Funds Flow Back.

It is stated that during the earlier weeks of the year, out-of-town funds flowed into the New York market and were used to replace funds withdrawn from the market by the New York banks for their own account, but that since the middle of February the withdrawal of out-of-town funds has been more rapid than the reduction in the street-loan account of the local banks.

The volume of commercial loans in 1925 changed relatively little and the increase for the year was entirely in banks outside New York as the commercial loan account of the New York City banks showed a decrease for the year.

Condition of Auto Industry.

In view of the many conflicting opinions expressed recently about the condition of the automobile industry, a statement in the board's bulletin was read with unusual interest.

"Production of passenger automobiles during the first two months of this year," the board stated, "was greater than in the corresponding period of 1925 and 1923 but less than in those months of 1924, the previous record. Truck output exceeded that of January and February of any previous year. Trade reports indicate a continuation of production at a high rate during March. Further readjustments in prices have been announced by various producers, many of them making allowances for the prospective reduction in the Federal tax on automobiles sold by manufacturers.

"Distribution of cars was large during February, exceeding that of a year ago by an appreciable margin. Reports indicate, however, that retail sales by dealers were much smaller than their receipts from manufacturers."

CUBAN RAIL STRIKE NEAR.

Men Will Walk Out Tonight Unless Wage Compact Is Put in Force.

Copyright, 1926, by The New York Times Company.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

HAVANA, April 13.—Unless the management of the Consolidated Railways of Cuba puts the labor agreement made with its men last year into force, or something unexpected happens at Camaguey, the brotherhood will decree a walkout on the Cuba Railroad and the Cuban Northern Railways at 6 o'clock tomorrow night, the time given to the company to accede to the demands.

According to word received here tonight from Camaguey, the men are determined to strike and fight to a finish, declaring they have had enough of dead-letter compacts, and that the railways are only sparring for more time. Sixty thousand men will be affected.

The management asserts that the brotherhood refuses to compromise and that no reason for a strike exists.

Governor Villena of Camaguey considers the railroad men in the right, and in messages to President Machado he states that the people of Camaguey are with the men, and that the company has provoked the conflict by not putting the labor compact into effect as signed before the Secretary of the Interior.

Contradictory statements as to whether the Government will run trains or will allow a general paralyzing of business could not be confirmed tonight.

According to the railroad delegation No. 2 of this city, a cable has been received by the brotherhood from the Pan-American Federation of Labor at Washington asking for full details in order to lend cooperation to the Cuban workers.

A long manifesto was issued today explaining the situation and declaring that if necessary a walkout on the United Railways of Havana would be decreed.

The Camaguey brotherhood has sent telegrams to all unions on the island asking for a sympathy strike. It is probable that all transportation workers on the island will join.

ADMITS TICKET SCALPING.

One of Six Defendants in Railroad Fraud Case Pleads Guilty.

The six defendants placed on trial on Monday before Federal Judge Henning and a jury, on a charge of conspiracy to defraud various railroad companies, were reduced to five defendants yesterday because one of the three alleged scalpers, Ross Frazier of Kansas City, pleaded guilty. The indictment named sixteen conductors and alleged ticket scalpers, but this number was reduced to fifteen because one of them is dead.

It is alleged that the conspiracy resulted in defrauding various railroads out of more than $1,000,000. The five defendants on trial are Adolph A. Blum and David Lyons of Chicago, alleged scalpers, and Charles D. Davis, George H. Wertz and William G. Yates, conductors, who live in Newark.

Captain Charles G. Bakcsys, Director of the Bureau of Railway Intelligence, whose investigations resulted in the indictment, resumed the witness stand and told how he had discovered the methods of the fraud and those engaged in it.

The trial will be continued today.

ASKS $60,700 IN COAL DEAL.

Plaintiff Says Buyer of His Company Owes Him Part of Profits.

The trial of a suit for $60,700 damages brought by Edward A. Fries of 493 Washington Avenue, Brooklyn, against Henry G. Senger of 347 McDonough Street, Brooklyn, began yesterday in the Brooklyn Supreme Court before Justice Callaghan and a jury. Fries was the owner of the Fries Coal Company, which in March, 1921, he sold to Senger, head of the Putnam Coal Company. He testified that, under an agreement, he was to have received until April 30, 1927, 10 cents for every ton of coal sold.

Fries now asks for $32,800 as his commission of the coal sold and an additional $27,900 on coal which he computed will be sold by the defendant before the alleged contract expires. It was contended by Senger that Fries was to have given his services to the company but had not fulfilled his part of the alleged agreement.

NEW RUBBER LOWS IN BIGGEST MARKET

Crude Prices Decline to Lowest Since Last May as Trading Sets Record for Volume.

454 LOTS CHANGE HANDS

Crude rubber futures yesterday were driven to the lowest levels since last May in a market which broke all records for volume when 454 lots changed hands on the Rubber Exchange of New York. The previous record day was 418 contracts, made just one month ago.

The decline carried the active months from 1 cent to 1½ cents under Monday's finals. Seven months were traded in, May and July coming in for the greatest share of the business.

The market opened lower in sympathy with the reaction in London, where spot sheets were quoted at 24½d. off 1½d. Thereafter prices moved irregularly until May touched 49.40 and July 45 cents, when good buying came into the market and lifted the list moderately up from earlier lows. Among the distant positions March was traded in at 47 cents, a loss of 20 points from the previous close, but the best bid at the end of the day was 45.30 cents, or a gross decline of 190 points.

Range of prices for the active deliveries follows:

	High.	Low.	Close.	Monday's Close.
May	50.10	49.40	49.80	51.00
June	49.00	49.00	49.10*	50.50

Other months closed: October 47.40, November 47.00, January 46.10, February 45.70. Spots were quoted at 50.50.

Business in the Street market also reflected the same degree of nervousness and price decline as registered on the Exchange. Most of the leading grades dropped below 50 cents for the first time in close to one year. Spot sheets were quoted at 50 cents and first latex crêpe at 51 cents.

What bonds should you buy?

We see almost daily the hardship and worry which result from buying the wrong types of good bonds. Business men, with opportunities lost because they cannot readily raise money on their bonds. Widows, with inadequate safety because they hold "business men's bonds." Estates swallowed up by inheritance taxes because of wrong investments.

Your choice of good bonds should depend on two things:

1. Yourself

How old are you? What is the source of your income? What is the size of your income and the amount of your surplus for investment? Are you married? How many dependents? What are your tax liabilities? Other liabilities? Do you own your home? Do you travel? Where is your legal residence? What are your prospects? What are your plans? Have you made your will? Created a trust fund?

Why are you saving? To buy something? To assure a comfortable income in old age? To provide for your family? To protect a business? To provide for some contingency?

Personal questions—yes. But financial health is as important as physical health. And the investment specialist, no less than the medical specialist, must have facts for diagnosis before he prescribes the bonds you ought to buy.

2. Your present investments

The bonds you already own have a bearing on your next and other future purchases. It is quite possible that some of your present holdings are not the best for you. Others may have depreciated as regards the features most favorable from your standpoint.

You may realize the foregoing facts but you may not realize this: all the securities you now own should fit into a personal investment program, based not only upon the fluctuations of industry and a constant income average but also upon your own plans and contingencies and other personal factors mentioned above.

Your present holdings are a personal matter, too. But the sincere investment specialist warrants your confidence as completely as does your physician. He cannot intelligently advise you on new purchases unless he knows what you already own.

Our Offer

We offer you the help of our investment specialists in selecting the right bonds from the best bonds the financial world affords.

Our offer is made in your interest as well as our own. It is easy to accept. It entails no obligation.

Simply send for an Equitable Investment Memorandum. Turn to your page. Put down the facts it calls for and return it to us. The information will be held entirely confidential and, with it as a basis, we will prepare a personal investment program designed to meet your specific needs and plans.

ROAD ENGINEER DISMISSED.

Jersey Men Charged With Inefficiency by State Board.

Special to The New York Times.

TRENTON, N. J., April 13.—Charged with gross inefficiency and neglect of duty, Walter E. Roberts of Flemington, Resident Engineer, and William H. Cunningham of Somerville, Assistant Civil Engineer, were summarily discharged today by the State Highway Commission. The men were suspended after a shortage of cement was said to have been discovered in the Flemington-Ringoes Road on which they were employed.

The motion by which the board dismissed the engineers expressly exonerated them of any criminal intent, however.

The board sent all records in the case to Assistant Attorney General Fred W. Devoe, who is investigating the alleged cement shortage.

REPORTS EXTRA-JUDGE BILL

House Committee Endorses Measure Giving Five More to This State.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, April 13.—Three additional Federal Judges for the Southern District of New York—Manhattan—and one additional Judge each for the Northern and Western districts of the State will be provided soon if Congress passes a bill ordered reported to the House today by the Committee on Judiciary.

The measure authorizes the creation of twelve new district judgeships, to be located in States where court business is congested, due in part to the accumulation of cases incident to enforcement of the Federal dry laws. A majority of the additional Judges proposed will go to the States classified as "wet."

ASSOCIATION OPPOSES BAR INCORPORATION

Votes Against Gibbs Bill to Unite Lawyers of State—Guthrie Decries Interference.

The Association of the Bar of the City of New York went on record last night at a meeting at the Bar Association Building, 42 West Forty-fourth Street, as opposed to the Gibbs bill, now pending in Albany, which would incorporate the entire bar of the State.

The vote, which came after a lively debate, was about in the ratio of 10 to 1, with 275 members attending. The brunt of the opposition to the bill was carried by William D. Guthrie, President of the association, who, at a meeting last January, debated the question with Charles Evans Hughes. Mr. Hughes contended then that organization by law of all lawyers in the State could work no harm.

Of 23,000 lawyers in New York State, Mr. Guthrie said, only 4,200 now belonged to the State Association, and those who did not belong were "unknown and untried."

"I submit it is neither proper nor prudent to turn over the power officially to speak for the bar of this State or of this Judicial District to an organization which would be so constituted, so controlled and so untried," he continued. "If we place power and the control of funds, patronage and influence in the hands of any such majority, there is plainly the danger that they will take advantage of the control which mere numbers would give them.

"I am of the opinion that it would constitute an oppressive and unconstitutional interference with the individual liberty of lawyers to compel them to become members of such a compulsory and involuntary organization. I believe that it would be the duty of the courts so to adjudge."

FORD COMPANY IS SUED.

Plaintiffs Charge Infringement of Patent on Choke Control.

A patent infringement suit was filed in the Federal court yesterday against the Ford Motor Company on an alleged infringement of the patent rights of a choke and needle valve control for automobiles. The plaintiffs are Jacob R., Sherman F. and George B. Titman of Rahway, N. J.

The complaint alleges that the patents were obtained on Oct. 6, 1925, that the device had gone into "wide and extended use," and that the defendant has offered for sale and has advertised the article, and threatens to continue doing so. An injunction and an accounting of profits are asked. The defendant, it was said, contends the device was developed in its own plant and without regard to the Titman invention.

COMPETITION TO BUY RADIO PATENTS TOLD

Westinghouse Manager Asserts Radio Corporation Offered $1,000,000 to Telegraph Co.

PAID $2,500,000 FOR THEM

Kintner to Continue Testimony Today in Inquiry Into Charges of $2,000,000,000 Radio Trust.

The Radio Corporation of America tried unsuccessfully in 1920 to purchase for $1,000,000 the radio patents controlled by the International Radio Telegraph Company, according to Samuel M. Kintner, manager of the Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing Company research department, who continued as a witness yesterday at the Federal Trade Commission investigation into charges that a $2,000,000,000 trust controls the field of radio manufacturing. The hearings are before Examiner William C. Reeves, in the commission's offices at 45 Broadway.

Negotiations in behalf of the Radio Corporation of America were carried on by Owen D. Young, Senator David A. Reed of Pennsylvania, at that time counsel for the General Electric Company, and A. G. Davis, the witness testified. He said the conferences took place in the New York offices of the General Electric Company, about a year prior to the purchase of the patents by the Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing Company for approximately $2,500,000.

He said it was known in radio and electrical manufacturing circles during the time the International Radio Telegraph Company was functioning, that the General Electric Company was displaying a great deal of activity and interest in radio. He said that while an official of the International Radio Telegraph Company he visited the General Electric Company plant on business and found there was a great deal of secrecy in the experiments of the engineers in their work on vacuum tubes.

The witness was shown a mass of contracts by Mr. Smith and these were identified as exhibits relating to the turning over of the patents to Radio Corporation of America. At the time of adjournment the witness was being examined regarding the contracts. When the hearing is resumed at 10 o'clock this morning his direct examination will continue.

Attorney Smith, at the close of the hearing, said he would not ask at this time for another ruling by the Federal Trade Commission on the question of putting into the record the names of the largest individual stockholders in the companies named as respondents in the investigation.

STRONG SEES NO PERIL IN CUBAN SITUATION

He Tells House Committee the Effect of Gold Shipments Will Be Offset Quickly.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, April 13.—The situation presented in New York yesterday, when about $100,000,000 in bankers' loans was called, following the shipment of a little more than $30,000,000 in gold to Cuba and big gold withdrawals by wire from various parts of the United States, was discussed before the House Committee on Banking and Currency today by Benjamin Strong, Governor of the New York Federal Reserve Bank.

Mr. Strong told the committee that while these withdrawals came when reserves were short, the Federal Reserve Bank was in position to cope with the situation. He said the effect of the gold shipment to Cuba and transfer of reserves from New York to other sections would be offset quickly. Governor Strong appeared before the committee to continue his discussion of what might be done through legislation to prevent situations growing out of periods of intensive inflation or deflation. He declared the remedies proposed in the bill introduced by Representative Strong of Kansas, intended to require the Federal Reserve Board to use all of its authority to promote stabilization of price levels, might prove disappointing, because "the board can do a great deal in a period of rising prices, but its control over a decline of prices is very limited."

TO RADIO 'TALKING MOVIE.'

Bell Anniversary Dinner Will Also Broadcast "Phone Roll-Call."

BOSTON, April 13 (AP).—A radio broadcast of a "talking movie" and a "telephone roll-call" of the nation will be features of a dinner at the Boston City Club on Thursday night.

The dinner is tendered to Brig. Gen. John J. Carty, Vice President of the American Telephone and Telegraph Company, as a part of the fiftieth anniversary celebration of the invention of the telephone. The whole program will be broadcast by Station WEEI, starting at 8 P. M.

The telephone roll-call will be carried out by General Carty and will contrast the development of the telephone since the first messages were carried from one room to another over wires in a Boston house in 1876. The advances made since 1916, the fortieth anniversary of the telephone, will also be shown.

The talk will call New York, then Philadelphia, Washington, Havana, Atlanta, Chicago, St. Louis, Kansas City, Denver and other cities, including, at last, San Francisco.

The talking motion picture, said to be the first ever broadcast, has never before been shown. It was taken recently and is a picture of Thomas Watson, assistant of Alexander Graham Bell, when he invented the telephone half a century ago.

SHIPBUILDING GAIN FOR US AND HOLLAND

All Other Countries Suffered a Decline in March Quarter, Lloyd's Reports.

RISE HERE IS 12,556 TONS

The United States and Holland are the only countries in which shipbuilding shows an increase in the amount of work on hand for the quarter ended March 31, according to Lloyd's survey of shipping. In the United States the increase was 12,556 tons. The world decline in shipbuilding was 60,000 tons. The slump in post-war shipbuilding has now continued for two years, according to the statement just issued. It says: "In the quarter ended June 30, 1924, Lloyd's returns showed a total of ship construction under way throughout the world of 2,616,000 gross tons. The unbroken decrease brings the present total to 2,010,000 gross tons. This, however, includes 79,600 tons of work contracted for with the shipyards of Great Britain and Ireland on which operations have been ordered suspended, so that the actual total now building is only about 1,930,000 gross tons.

"It is to be noticed that during the quarter just ended the new tonnage on which work was begun was considerably less than the tonnage launched indicating that new contracts placed are not keeping pace with the amount of work going forward toward completion, although in Great Britain and Ireland the new work started was slightly in excess of launchings."

The United States is the only country which shows an increase in the tonnage of tankers under construction. The American increase was 1,300 tons. The decrease in tanker construction is 105,000 tons as compared with a year ago.

	Mar. 31, 1926.	Dec. 31, 1925.
Italy	295,530	269,578
Germany	216,871	234,143
France	155,965	167,236
Holland	133,605	108,894
United States	117,777	105,211
Denmark	59,438	90,662
Sweden	53,780	55,180
Japan	45,690	52,210

POLAND WANTS KEMMERER.

WARSAW, April 13 (AP).—It was learned today from governmental sources that the Polish Government intends to invite Professor Edwin W. Kemmerer, expert financial adviser and head of the Department of Economics at Princeton University, to come to Poland as permanent financial adviser.

Professor Kemmerer recently signed a contract with the Government of Ecuador to assist in the adjustment of its finances. He had planned to go to Poland first to advise that country on its finances and proceed to Ecuador to spend three months making a study of the financial situation there. Professor Kemmerer recently assisted the Government of Chile in adjusting its finances.

HOOVER UNABLE TO SPEAK

Colonel Crompton, British Scientist, Calls Commission the "First League of Nations."

The international Electrotechnical Commission, which will begin work today on the standardization of universally used apparatus and on the adoption of technical electsical terms and measurements, were formally welcomed to this country at a meeting at the Engineering Societies Building at 29 West Thirty-ninth Street.

The principal speaker was to be Secretary of Commerce Herbert Hoover, but he was unable to be present in person. He spoke a few words of welcome at Washington which were relayed by telephone and radio and broadcast to the meeting.

John W. Lieb, Chairman of the Reception Committee, presided at the meeting. Colonel R. E. Crompton, a British delegate, described the formation of the commission twenty-two years ago at the suggestion of Elihu Thompson. Colonel Crompton said the commission had been a great agency in the promotion of international goodwill. The international cooperation required for the progress of science and engineering, he said, was laying the foundations for a better understanding among nations.

"We are the real peacemakers of the world," he said. "We were the first League of Nations."

Elihu Thompson outlined further work of standardization and other technical problems for the commission. In deploring generally the faste of natural resources, he mentioned the great oil fire in California.

"It has consumed a million tons of oil, according to reports," he said. "The cause is said to be a stroke of lightning. Why no protection against lightning? Why so large a storage of oil in one place?"

100 Delegates Arrive.

One hundred European delegates to the International Electrotechnical Commission meeting arrived in New York yesterday on the Cunard liner Andania from Hamburg, Southampton and Cherbourg. Their spokesman, Colonel Crompon, described the organization to which they belonged as "the real league of nations."

The delegates came from seventeen European countries, bringing twenty members of their families. At the pier the visiting electrical engineers were met by John W. Lieb, Vice President of the New York Edison Company, acting as Chairman of the Reception Committee, and Frank W. Smith, Vice President of the United Electric Light and Power Company, Chairman of the Entertainment Committee.

In thirty closed cars, flying the blue pennants of the Engineering Society, the European engineers were driven from the pier to the Hotel Astor, where they are making their headquarters. Among the delegates are five electrical engineers from Germany —the first group of their profession to make a formal visit to the United States since the World War—and three Russian engineers.

Tells Russia's Progress.

The progress of electrification in Russia was described by Professor M. Chatelain, Chairman of the Russian Electrotechnical Council and Vice President of the Russian Standards Committee. Professor Chatelain is highly esteemed by the Soviet Government despite the fact that he was an adherent of the overthrown political régime.

Th German delegates were treated with great cordiality by the other European delegations.

M. E. Genissieu, Engineer-in-Chief of the Hydraulic Forces and the Distribution of Energies of Minister of Public Works of France, is a member of the delegation. Others in the delegation arriving on the Andania were:

AMERICANS BARRED FROM AUTO CONFERENCE

State Department Will Not Send Official Delegation to International Meeting in Paris.

By Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, April 13.—The State Department at Washington has refused to appoint an official delegation to the international diplomatic conference on automobile circulation which will open in Paris next Tuesday, with fifty nations represented, thereby depriving American motorists of the first opportunity they have had to obtain recognition of American cars in Europe.

Lack of this recognition has been a source of great trouble and considerable expense to thousands of Americans who each year bring their automobiles to Europe, for in order to bring in motors Americans must apply for British license plates or plates of some other European country, American licenses not being accepted because America is not a party to the international convention. The last similar convention was held in 1909, when the American motor car was still in the initial stage of its marvelous development.

American automobilists in touch with the situation abroad have tried to bring pressure to bear on the State Department to send an official delegation to the Paris meeting armed with the necessary authority to sign a new convention which will bring the rules and regulations for international motoring up to date, but the department, following its policy of refusing official participation in European conferences, has withstood all the urgent requests. Instead, a small and entirely unofficial delegation, with no powers, has been selected. It will consist of the American commercial attaché at Paris, Chester Lloyd Jones, and one other as yet unnamed, but probably an American resident in Paris.

The Embassy tried to obtain for America full privileges of the projected new convention without responsibility of signature, but the French Foreign Office, under whose auspices the convention will convene, politely but firmly refused, pointing out that acceptance of the privileges of the convention, which are many, must be accompanied by the official signature of the American Government.

It was explained today that one official reason America cannot sign the convention is the lack of a uniform national automobile law in the United States, such as other nations have, for the guidance of motorists. Each American State has its own laws. American automobilists reply that, despite this handicap, the American Government could safely sign an agreement for international travel without consulting each State.

The proposed new international automobile treaty provides that no one under the age of 18 can drive a car.

Another proposed provision, which is expected to meet widespread objection, calls for two independent VTS brakes on each motor car.

MAY WHEAT MAKES A FIVE-CENT JUMP

Buying Is Credited to Eastern Shorts and All Deliveries Advance.

5,000,000 BUSHELS IN DEALS

Other Markets Catch the Swing and Corn, Oats and Rye Also Rise.

CHICAGO, April 13.—Buying of May wheat credited to Jesse Livermore, the New York trader, was largely responsible for a bulge of 5 cents in the nearby delivery today, and, while there was immense profit taking the finish was about the top with a net gain of 4⅝ cents. Deferred deliveries were up 2⅝@3 cents and closed at the top.

The buying by houses with Eastern connections was in evidence from the start and each bulge carried prices to a new nigh on the present movement. May at the top showed 5¾ cents over the low of last week. Above $1.62 stop loss orders were caught. There was nothing in the general run of the news to account for the buying, but the market has shown unmistakable signs of congestion during the past few days.

Export sales of 400,000 to 500,000 bushels wheat, largely durum, were reported at the seaboard and late messages from Winnipeg claimed that 1,000,000 bushels of Manitobas had been sold to exporters. Buying of May here against sales at Winnipeg to close spreads widened the difference between the two markets 2¼ cents. Liverpool closed ½@1d. higher and Buenos Aires 2⅝@3 cents higher.

There was considerable enlargement in the outside trade in wheat during the day, especially in the May. It was estimated by "Pit" traders that the Eastern short covering exceeded 5,000,000 bushels and that they were in on the greater part, if not all, of their line.

Those who sold offers Monday night had little chance of protecting themselves at the figures at which they sold offers, as the opening quotations were about equal to the offer price.

Kansas City May closed 10 cents under Chicago, a shipping difference, but as it is impossible to secure cash wheat in the former market except at a good premium over futures, no sales to come here were claimed. Much durum has been sold for export via Montreal and will be dropped from the visible supply statement as soon as it clears from Duluth.

Primary arrivals today were 436,000 bushels; week ago, 465,000; last year, 347,000. Shipments were 398,000 bushels; week ago, 413,000; last year, 571,000.

Corn closed 1½ to 1¾ cents higher on buying induced by the strength in wheat. Outside trade was light and the market was easily influenced. Weather conditions were more favorable and field work is expected to keep down the movement of corn to terminal markets for some time to come. Cash basis here was unchanged to 1 cent lower.

Primary arrivals today were 351,000 bushels; week ago, 630,000; last year, 533,000; and shipments, 399,000 bushels; week ago, 322,000; last year, 737,000.

It is claimed that today was the first time since the new crop started to move in volume that shipments have exceeded the receipts.

Exchanging between May and July oats at ¼ cent difference furnished the bulk of the trade in that grain with the close ¼ cent higher in sympathy with wheat. Seeding has been resumed in the West, but is decidedly late in many sections.

Rye was 2 to 2¼ cents higher with wheat. Outside trade was small and there was no evidence of export business.

JOIN RUBBER EXCHANGE.

A group of importers and dealers, some of whom were said to have opposed organization of the Rubber Exchange of New York, Inc., on the grounds that this action would be premature, became members of the exchange yesterday. They included Poel & Kelly, Inc.; Meyer & Brown, Inc.; Littlejohn & Co., Inc.; Schmoll, Stiles & Reid, Inc.; Isaac Winkler & Brother Company, J. T. Johnstone, Haldane, Bierries & Co., Inc.; Bair Rubber and Trading Company and H. A. Astlett & Co.

The seats assigned to the group were acquired by J. Chester Cuppia of J. C. Cuppia & Co., member of the New York Cotton Exchange and a governor of the Rubber Exchange. Mr. Cuppia paid $4,700 for one of the seats and $4,500 for most of the others. The seats he purchased were sold by J. Edward Rowe, Julius Rosenfeld, Joseph A. Wade, Robert M. Harriss, Philip G. McFadden, Leo Goldsmith, Karl Wolff, Sailing P. Baruch, Joseph F. Bernard and Frost Haviland.

Earlier in the day the seat of Edward A. Pierce was sold to Paul Elbogen of P. Elbogen & Co. for $4,000.

PRICES OF COTTON IN SLIGHT DECLINE

Strength of May Position Partly Offsets Pressure on New Crop Months.

NEW JANUARY CROP DOWN

Contracts Both for This Month and for December Move to Lower Levels.

Less moisture in the cotton belt than there has been for several days caused a slightly easier market yesterday and prices lost 3 to 12 points. While temperatures were still below normal in most sections, showers were confined to Georgia and the Carolinas, and the Weather Bureau predicted generally clear conditions attended with rising temperatures for today. Pressure on new crop months carried quotations off 10 to 15 points at one time, but strength of the May position continued to sustain the whole list. May sold 59 points over July and 180 points over December, compared with a 140-point spread a week ago.

For the first time in a month January, a new crop position, sold below the 17-cent level, while December contracts declined within $1 a bale of low levels of the year. On the other hand, May held $3 bale from low levels of last month, and a large amount of covering occurred in that position again yesterday. A census report on March domestic consumption is announced for 10 o'clock this morning. Figures will compare with 563,000 bales last year.

In each of the three large contract markets spot cotton continues to be quoted above near positions, while near positions are selling over distant months. This situation is particularly marked in Liverpool, where middling quotations are 10.14d, as against 9.50d for May contracts—a premium of 64 points, or about 1¼ cents. In New Orleans middling quotations are about one-quarter of a cent over May contracts and in New York about one-half cent over. On the Southern Exchange May rules about one-half cent over July and in New York more than 55 points over July, while May in Liverpool is 15 English points over July. This relation between spot quotations and the various months has prevailed since the bad weather last Fall led spot interests to transfer hedges from near to distant positions. Sufficient pressure of actual cotton to weigh on the market has not yet developed. Though combined port and interior stocks are now over a million bales in excess of last year, premiums on near months remain unimpaired.

Yesterday's quotations follow:

PINCHOT'S NEPHEW IN TRADE

Gifford 2d, Columbia Student, Says He's Tired of Being Unproductive.

Gifford Pinchot 2d, son of Amos Pinchot, a New York lawyer, and nephew of his namesake, the Governor of Pennsylvania, who is 23 years old and a student of architecture at Columbia, telephoned newspapers yesterday to announce that he had gone into the linen and silk scarf manufacturing and importing business at 171 Madison Avenue.

He told reporters who visited his office that he was "tired of being economically unproductive."

"I shall have to be a student five years to get my architectural degree, and a student is not useful. So I took interest accrued from a trust fund and opened up. Business is good. I handle the financial end, while I continue my studies.

"I believe that the railroads should be under Government control. So does my Uncle Gifford, but he doesn't say anything about it. Oil lands should also be controlled by the Government. That would make private monopoly of them impossible.

HAILS A PRECEDENT TO PHONE RATE RISE

NEW JERSEY RULING CITED

Officials of the New York Telephone Company asserted yesterday that the decision of the United States Supreme Court in the matter of telephone rates in New Jersey supported the company's contention that it was entitled to increase the rates in this city and State to yield a net return of 8 per cent. In New Jersey the Public Utilities Commission sought to impose a rate that the company contended was much too low, and the Federal court in that district granted an injunction restraining the commission from attempting to enforce it. The decision of the United States Supreme Court upholds this injunction.

In this State there has been a long fight over telephone rates.

Question of Reserves.

During the many months of controversy over the rates in this State, before the Public Service Commission, in the courts and before a special master, much of the discussion concerned the depreciation reserves. These reserves total about $110,000,000, and in 1925 an allowance of about $20,000,000 was made for depreciation. The city, in opposing any increase in rates, asserted that the subscribers of the company were asked to pay a return upon the large balances in depreciation reserves which have been invested in property.

One of the city's experts, Dr. Milo R. Maltbie, testified that the company was now earning a net return of a little more than 8 per cent., instead of about half that amount, which the company claimed was all it earned.

Charles T. Russell, general counsel for the New York Telephone Company, in commenting upon the decision of the Supreme Court, said:

"The decision proves the contention of the company and holds clearly that the company is entitled to charge such rates as will yield a fair and reasonable return on the fair value of all of its property, and that it has a right to use the money by which the property was acquired. It is equally entitled to earn a return on the property bought with this money represented in the reserve account as well as on property bought from the proceeds of the sale of bonds and stocks, and that in ascertaining the fair value of the property the balance in the reserve account should not be deducted."

It was pointed out that the decision had disposed of all controversy as to what place in the calculations over rates the reserves shall take. The following quotation from the opinion, it was explained, establishes that question:

Payment Is for Service.

"Customers pay for service, not for the property used to render it. Their payments are not contributions to depreciation or other operating expenses or to the capital of the company. By paying bills for service they do not acquire any interest, legal or equitable, in the property used for their convenience or in the funds of the company. Property paid for out of moneys received for service belongs to the company just as does that purchased out of proceeds of its bonds and stock. The property or money of the company represented by the credit balance in the reserve for depreciation cannot be used to make up the deficiency."

One of the legal representatives of the city said last night that the decision of the Supreme Court had no bearing upon the rates in this city and State and that all the court decided was that depreciation reserves could not be used to make up deficiencies. He said that the telephone rate case here stood alone and would have to be decided alone, without reference to the conditions or decisions affecting any other locality.

INDIAN RELICS FOR HARVARD.

Arm Bone Encircled With Bracelets in Collection From New Mexico.

Special to The New York Times.

CAMBRIDGE, April 13.—A human arm bone embedded in caked mud and surrounded by a long string of bracelets is the most striking feature of the collection of Indian relics which C. B. Cosgrove has brought back to Harvard University. Mr. Cosgrove has just returned after spending two years in charge of the Peabody Museum expedition in the Mimbres Valley in Southwestern New Mexico.

Mr. Cosgrove, commenting on the crude jewelry and pottery which he found, said:

"In the naturalistic tendency of its design, the pottery in the Mimbres Valley seems to be entirely peculiar to that section of Indian territory. On one bowl, for instance, is an almost perfect representation of a lizard.

"The bracelets we found, which in some instances have become cemented on the arm bone, are of Pacific calm shell and were evidently traded in to the interior by coast tribes. Almost all of the jewelry, including several turquoise necklaces, was part of burial trappings.

"We know practically nothing about the Indians whose pueblo towns we are excavating. In the northern part of the State there are living descendants of the ancient tribes, but the southern peoples have apparently passed out of existence entirely. It appears that they were chiefly agriculturists and not wandering hunters, like most of their contemporary aborigines."

LOS ANGELES FLIES AN HOUR AND A HALF

First Trial Since Shenandoah Wreck Successful — Slight Mishap at Mooring Mast.

Special to The New York Times.

LAKEHURST, N. J., April 13.—Sailing out of the sunset tonight, the United States Navy dirigible Los Angeles moved evenly above the flying field at the naval air station, and a few minutes later was anchored to its mooring mast, having completed its first flight since last June.

The flight was a short one, the dirigible being in the air only one hour and one-half. It was the first of a series of "post repair" flights to take place this week. The dirigible has undergone extensive repairs during the Winter. When he left the dirigible after the flight, the commander, Captain George W. Steele Jr., said the ship had behaved "perfectly."

The flight did not take the dirigible out of sight of the air station, around which it made a wide circle. A flight to be made tomorrow, if weather conditions remain favorable, will probably be longer.

Included in the crew of the ship on its flight were Lieutenant Commander Charles E. Rosendahl, Colonel Chalmers G. Hall of the Army Air Service, and several other airmen who survived the wreck of the Shenandoah.

A slight mishap occurred while the Los Angeles was being moored to the mast during the afternoon after being taken from its hangar and "walked" more than a mile across the flying field to the mast. While the nose of the dirigible was being drawn into the anchoring cone at the top of the mast, one of the three steel cables used for holding it in place, snapped. The ship swung around the mast with its long lashings swinging wildly. One of them struck Jeremiah Frankel, a news real photographer. He was cut and bruised, but was able to leave for his home after treatment by a doctor.

FREED IN $11,000 THEFT ON VICTIM'S PLEA

Ex-Auditor Stole to Meet $650,000 Insurance Policies to Safeguard Family.

Henry M. Vandenvoort, 36 years old, of South Burnett Street, East Orange, N. J., formerly an auditor for Robert L. Brown, a coal dealer with offices in the Grand Central Terminal Building, was freed on a suspended sentence yesterday by Judge Koenig in General Sessions. His employer had pleaded for clemency because the $11,000 Vandenvoort had stolen from him had been used in paying for insurance policies aggregating $650,000.

Vandenvoort, who had pleaded guilty to grand larceny in the second degree, told the court through his counsel, John T. Dooling, that he had been persuaded by an insurance agent to take out the policies, which were to mature in twenty years, "so that he could provide comfort for his invalid wife and himself in their old age."

A surety company which had bonded Vandenvoort had joined in the plea for clemency for the defendant who, prior to his arrest, had borne an excellent reputation. Many letters from his neighbors in his behalf were presented to the court.

Vandenvoort, in tears, expressed repentance for the misstep he had taken, and Mr. Brown, his employer, told the court that he did not believe that Vandenvoort really was a thief, but "just unfortunate."

"I cannot understand how any sane man, respected by his neighbors and business associates, could have done what you did," Judge Koenig said to Vandenvoort. "The kindness of your employer, the fact that you have heretofore borne a spotless reputation, now stands you in good stead. I could have sent you to State's prison for a five-year maximum term. I shall expect you to make restitution to the bonding company. This is a mighty queer case—a study for psychological students. I can't help but wonder what your intentions really were."

Freshmen Strikers Against Chapel Are Again in Good Standing.

Special to The New York Times.

NEW HAVEN, April 13.—Yale's freshman class, which started a riot in the dining hall six weeks ago, was restored to good standing in the university today by the 1929 Faculty, and The Yale Daily News interpreted the action as forecasting favorable consideration by the University Corporation, or Trustee Board, of the Faculty recommendation for abolishing compulsory chapel attendance.

The News said that "one of the grievances which was numbered among the causes of the outbreak by 1929—namely, compulsory chapel—will probably not be a menace to the pacifist party much longer."

The paper recommended that in case of future riots by freshman the handling of the situation be referred to the Student Council. It also sugested that the historic Omega Lambda Chi parade and festivities be revived in order to allow the freshmen to join with other classes in supplying an outlet for their exuberant spirits.

THE BUSINESS WORLD

COMMERCIAL PAPER.

Yesterday—6¼ per cent. for the best names. Monday—6¼ per cent. for the best names. Quotations are for six months' paper.

Shirt Reorders Continue Active.

A nice reorder business is being done in men's shirts, according to wholesalers here. The business placed since Easter continues to stress novelty effects in collar attached and collar to match models, although staple white shirts still hold their own. Tans and blues are two of the leading shades in the novelty merchandise, the patterns being both large and small stripes, checks and small figured all-over designs. Pleated bosom shirts are being shown by some manufacturers, but their vogue is confined to the more exclusive trade, little popular interest being shown in them. Sports shirts, particularly Oxfords and special neckband types to be worn with soft collars, are in increasing demand.

Campaign on Summer Suits.

An early start in the featuring of men's suits of well-known Summer cloths will be made this year. Particular stress will be placed in advertising material and dealer helps on the new patterns in the weaves and the part that tailoring plays in the cost of these suits to the consumer. The advertising, it was said yesterday, will be on a wide scale, while the dealer helps will be of larger variety than ever. A special campaign will be made to interest college men, particularly those in the South and in leading Eastern educational institutions. The general campaign will begin on May 15.

Predicts More Road Selling.

The prediction was made yesterday that there will be more selling of Fall lines of carpets and rugs on the road this season and less of it in the local salesrooms of the manufacturers than for a long time. One of the reasons for this prediction is that several of the important jobers bought so heavily at the Smith auction that they are "fed up" for the time being, even though the goods they bought was Spring merchandise. Another reason is the split opening, in which some of the leading manufacturers are now showing their Fall lines and others will not put out their new goods until June 1. It was said that some of those jobbers from more distant points who were in this city for the auction would not return for the June openings, but would wait until they were called on by road men to do their buying. Many of the buyers here for the auction have left the city, and the indications are that they will buy well from road men whether they plan to come back in June or not.

Clothing Retailers Await Spurt.

Men's clothing retailers find that Spring merchandise is moving slowly, and they are generally holding off their sales of both suits and topcoats in the expectation that warmer weather will supply a more active demand at original mark-ups. The topcoat turnover has been spotty, with the cooler temperatures reacting against expansion of sales. It is believed, however, that a weak of weather such as that of yesterday or last Sunday will do much to increase the topcoat volume. Suits will also have a better demand, it is believed, when it is warmer, as the discarding of overcoats will make more obvious to many consumers the necessity of purchasing a new suit.

Coat Demand Is Still Quiet.

It cannot be said that coat and suit wholesalers have yet gotten the volume of business they expected to receive with the passing of Easter. The trade, however, is still confident that the remaining weeks of this month are likely to show a lively spot demand. It is hoped that much of this business will be on a profitable basis, but coat and suit wholesalers recognize that the time has grown materially shorter and competitive factors by the end of the month will make for the clearing of stocks in a declining market. Moreover, the Summer season idea does not have the same possibilities for the coat and suit manufacturers as for the dress producers. The former are supporting the campaign for the Summer season, but extensive and general preparations for such a season in coats and suits are not being made as they are in dresses, which are the logical Summer merchandise.

Openings Being Further Delayed.

Recent developments in strike conditions in the Passaic and Gerfield districts are serving to delay further the openings of the woolen mills there. It had been expected that the opening of the Fall lines of the Forstmann & Huffmann Company would be held today, but inquiry made of executives of this firm yesterday indicated that it may not be until next week before the firm will be ready with its showing of sample pieces. Openings by the Botany Worsted Mills and the Gera Mills are also being held off, no announcement as yet being made by these mills of the probable time they will be ready to display their samples to the cutting-up trades.

Offer Novel Belts for Women.

Several novelties have lately been brought out here by manufacturers of women's belts. One of the most interesting is a belt that widens at the front, where it fastens with a row of buttons set over clasps to suggest the popular vestee. This belt comes in combinations of colored leather, such as yellow and white, and in white with stripes of patent leather. Other novelties include belts with a small pocket at the side and sets comprising two kid pockets to match the belt. These pockets are supplied ready to stitch on, and carry a flap under which the belt is slipped. Sets of buckles fastening at the side and front lacings are other belt features that have recently been presented.

Gray Goods Sales Fair.

Gray goods were fairly active in this market yesterday. In the printcloths spot 39½-inch 64-60s were sold at 7¾ cents, while for shipment next month the same construction brought an eighth less. At 7¾ cents these goods sold quite freely for July-September delivery. Spot sales of 39-inch 68-72s were put through at 8⅝ cents, and there was trading in that construction for late April shipment at 8⅝ cents. Spot 39½-inch 60-48s moved at 6¾ cents. Not so much was done in sheetings, but some trading took place on the basis of 9¾ cents for 87-inch 44-square, four-yard goods. For 87-inch 3.95-yard drills buyers paid 9 cents. In the specialties sales of 87½-inch 4.37-yard sateens were made at 11⅝ cents.

Show Retail Lines on May 17.

Monday, May 17, has been chosen as the opening date of the retail season for Summer millinery, according to an announcement made yesterday by the Retail Millinery Association of America. This opening will come just two weeks after the beginning of the wholesale Summer season in the millinery trade. Diversification of styles will be the keynote of both showings. One of the features of the wholesale showing this year will be an exhibition of Summer hat styles at a local hotel under the auspices of the Retail Millinery Association. At this exhibition hats most suitable for wear on various occasions will be selected by a style committee of the association, and tagged as being sponsored by the association as indicative of the mode. Eighteen new colors have been selected for incorporation in Summer chapeaux this year. They have all been taken from the standard Fall card of the Textile Color Card Association.

Silk Underwear Duplicates.

Although the peak of the Spring buying season has passed manufacturers of women's silk underwear in this market are receiving a good volume of duplicate business on their most popular "numbers." They are chiefly the ones embodying the so-called high colors. Lace-trimmed garments are being duplicated a bit more freely than those of the strictly tailored type, according to information received by the United Underwear League of America. Prints are coming into greater prominence in both underwear and negligee lines. They are shown in two-piece sets of step-ins and vests, and also in cotton voile negligees. This voile is of very fine texture and is not unlike georgette crêpe in its softness. Ruffles mark the more "summery" negligees, while fringe is distinctive in the trimmings of some of the more elaborate models.

WOULD AID DEBTORS IN BANKRUPTCY CASES

Accountant Favors Change in Law to Permit Withholding Part of Assets.

An amendment of the Federal Bankruptcy act to aid honest debtors and to induce them to cooperate with their creditors before their financial condition becomes hopeless was advocated last night at a special meeting of the New York Society of Accountants at the Hotel McAlpin by Bernard Bercu, certified public accountant. The matter will be presented to the Committee on Commerce, Trade and Commercial Law of the American Bar Association at its meeting tomorrow morning in the Chamber of Commerce Building, 65 Liberty Street. The cooperation of that committee in expediting the amendment will be asked.

Mr. Bercu said his suggestion resulted from his personal experiences in bankruptcy investigations in New York in the last ten years in which he said he had represented creditors. He pointed out that in the course of their work accountants could advise clients who appeared to be in a precarious condition to notify their creditors before their situation became hopeless. He believed that the amendment would be a preventive of crime.

"No man, with assets in sight," said Mr. Bercu, "wants to borrow from relatives or friends to assist him when his business goes bankrupt. Under the present law, no provision is made for the future of the business man who gets into financial trouble, so it happens not infrequently that he commits a technical violation of the law by withdrawing a few hundred dollars on the eve of his failure. If he commits this crime and succeeds, he is often led to bolder and more serious acts.

"The suggested amendment should provide that if a debtor has satisfied his creditors of his honesty and good faith, he may receive a certain percentage of his assets for his own use, one-half to be paid to him as soon as the assets can be converted into cash, to enable him to support his family, and the other half when the creditors get their final dividends."

BUSINESS NOTES.

Ralph Lazarus, who was for many years with Best & Jacoby, ribbon manufacturers, is now connected with the John C. Welwood Corporation, for which he will cover the city trade.

The following cable was received yesterday by Max Feist, Inc., from Max Feist, who is now in Europe: "Belting silks and belting ribbons in strong favor. Myrtle, garnet, attar, wild honey, gray, beige, blue and navy are the most popular colors."

The stabilization of conditions in the knitted outerwear field will be the featured topic at the convention of the National Knitted Outerwear Association to be held at Milwaukee, Wis., on June 10, 11 and 12.

HOUSTON GOES TO GENEVA.

Will Help Prepare Economic Conference Program for the League.

David F. Houston, former Secretary of the Treasury and now an official of the American Telephone and Telegraph Company, sailed last night on the Aquitania to attend a meeting of the Preparatory Economic Conference at Geneva on April 26, to prepare a program for the Economic Conference to be called by the League in the Fall.

"I know very little about the matter," said Mr. Houston yesterday. "I was invited by the Council of the League and I accepted. Professor Allyn A. Young of Harvard will attend. Members of this conference are not officials of the Governments which they represent."

We Have a most unusual opportunity by which a few selected men can cash in on their canvassing and selling experience.

If you have sold portraits, books, stock, real estate, &c., it will be worth your while to learn how you can increase your earnings presenting a simple plan of saving money in a prominent National Bank in this city.

Why not begin to ask people to KEEP their money instead of trying to get them to SPEND it.

Our men receive a commission of $15 an account.

Not only will you have a chance to make some real commissions immediately as a salesman but it will not be difficult for you to qualify in a few weeks to take charge of one of our branch offices as Manager.

For the benefit of men who are considering making a change to find a bigger, broader opportunity, we will hold an informal meeting at 10:30 A. M. SHARP today.

Why not come in and talk things over. Just ask for Mr. Black and remember 10:30 A. M. SHARP.

The disturbance off Hatteras will probably advance east northeastward and the disturbance from the northwest will move rapidly eastward to Northern New England, attended by showers Wednesday or Wednesday night in the lower lake region, Western Pennsylvania, the North Atlantic States and the northern portion of the Middle Atlantic States.

Otherwise mostly fair weather will prevail Wednesday and Thursday in the States east of the Mississippi River. The temperature will rise to Wednesday generally in the Washington forecast district, but the area of high pressure and colder weather now over the Northwest will overspread the lower lake region and the Ohio Valley Wednesday night and the Middle Atlantic and North Atlantic States and Tennessee Wednesday night or Thursday.

AMUNDSEN'S AIRSHIP SAILS FOR LENINGRAD AFTER HALT AT OSLO

Colonel Nobile Decides to Cut Short His Stop to Take Advantage of Fair Weather.

HE GETS AWAY AT 1:05 A. M.

Trip to Russian Base Will Take 15 to 20 Hours and Dirigible Will Stay There Till May 1.

FLIERS GET WILD WELCOME

News From the Polar Airship.

THE NEW YORK TIMES, in conjunction with The St. Louis Globe-Democrat, has purchased the American rights to all news, special articles and pictures emanating from the Amundsen-Ellsworth-Nobile Expedition, and the authentic narratives of the explorers will appear exclusively in THE TIMES and the newspapers associated with it.

Copyright, 1926, by The New York Times Co. and The St. Louis Globe-Democrat.
By Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

OSLO, Norway, Thursday, April 15.—"Hail and Farewell" was all the Norge's crew had a chance to say to Oslo. Although hopes had been held out that the airship would remain for several days, giving the many enthusiastic Norwegian populace a full opportunity to feast the fliers, Colonel Umberto Nobile, immediately after alighting at 4 o'clock yesterday afternoon, consulted the Meteorological Bureau and finding that the weather promised to remain ideal gave orders for the departure at night.

The Norge, the dirigible in which the Amundsen-Ellsworth-Nobile expedition hopes to fly over the North Pole to Alaska, left its mooring mast at 1:05 o'clock this morning for Leningrad.

Slowly discharging her ballast the Norge rose vertically in the windless air until sixty feet above the mooring mast, when the mooring rope was cast loose and the motors roared a farewell. The night was slightly cloudy.

A crowd of 10,000 remained at the airdrome to watch the departure by searchlight and sang the national anthem as it left for the Russian capital.

The navigators estimated before their departure that the flight of the Norge from Oslo to Leningrad will require from fifteen to twenty hours, according to wind and weather. With average conditions, the Norge should reach Stockholm in about seven hours, Helsingfors in fourteen hours and Leningrad in three or four hours more. The Leningrad hangar is at Gatschina, thirty miles south of the city.

Oslo Goes Wild With Joy.

Oslo literally went wild when the Norge's approach was bulletined yesterday morning. The small shops and offices throughout the city closed and tens of thousands in shouting throngs, afoot and in vehicles, jammed roads and fields for miles around the airdrome. Bands galore blared martial music, school children paraded with banners, singing societies went hoarse chanting patriotic airs, while American and Italian flags, flanking the Norwegian colors, everywhere brought endless repeated cheers for Amundsen and his foreign collaborators.

Informed through the morning newspapers of the departure of the Norge from Pulham and the likely arrival here at 11 A. M., the people early by thousands made their way to Ekeberg, an eastern suburb of Oslo, where the mooring mast was ready and all preparations finished. The weather was splendid and the city beflagged. All schools were dismissed at an early hour.

During the morning and early forenoon messages on the position of the dirigible established that the Norge, after crossing the North Sea direct to Jutland, had followed the Danish west coast, later crossing the Skagerrack, touching Norway off Christiansand and following the coast straight northeast to Oslo. The airship flew at an average height of 200 to 300 meters, passing en route over several minor coast towns.

All along it was enthusiastically cheered. Off the naval station the Norge was received by three seaplanes, which accompanied it the rest of the way.

Circles the City Six Times.

Colonel Umberto Nobile with characteristic caution circled six times over Oslo before bringing the airship down to the mooring altitude, and although the Norge first crossed the airdrome shortly after 1 o'clock it was nearly 4 o'clock before it was made fast. There was a light variable breeze and the sun shone through a faint haze.

King Haakon VII, with Defense Minister Wefring and other high State officials, plowed afoot through the mud to greet the Norge's gallant crew. The ship and its crew got a great ovation from the 50,000 spectators.

Later the Minister of Defense welcomed the Norge to Oslo, expressing joy at seeing the representatives of three nations joined in an effort to win new discoveries for humanity.

After their debarkation the crew informed your correspondent that the airship met fog on the way from Pulham and the course was lost until at 5:30 A. M. Jutland was discovered

Atlantic Radio Picture Service Expected Within a Few Weeks

LONDON, April 14 (AP).—Captain Richard H. Ranger, designer of the photo-radiogram system by which photographs have been transmitted successfully across the Atlantic Ocean by wireless, expects to begin a New York and London service within a few weeks.

His method was demonstrated in November, 1924, when photographs were transmitted for publication from London to New York newspapers with the cooperation of the Radio Corporation of America and the Marconi Wireless Company.

Captain Ranger has arrived here with trunks filled with apparatus packed with extreme care. His apparatus, when running, sounds exactly like the cackling of hens.

Associates of Captain Ranger estimate that it will cost between $5 and $10 each to transmit photographs, although no definite rates have been announced.

BOY ON SCHOOL CREW CAN'T SWIM, DROWNS

SHELL CAPSIZED IN HARLEM

Parent Says He Refused to Let Son Row—Principal Declares He Had Card of Consent.

Herman Greenfeld, a tailor, of 567 West 178th Street, announced yesterday he intended to ask the authorities to investigate why his son, Edward, 17 years old, who was drowned in the Harlem River on Monday when a racing shell capsized, was allowed by the Principal of George Washington High School to be a member of the rowing squad despite the boy's inability to swim.

Mr. Greenfeld said he learned of the drowning of his son on Monday about 6 P. M. through a friend. Then, he said, he was informed that the accident had occurred two hours before, while Edward and three other boys were rowing in a four-oared shell. He said he went to the Wadsworth Avenue Police Station to ask the police to drag the river for the body. The police were still dragging the river yesterday.

Mr. Greenfeld said he sent his two daughters, Elsie and Lulu, to the school on Tuesday morning to ask Arthur A. Boylan, the Principal, about details of the accident.

Later in the day, he went on, Mr. Boylan came to his tailor shop with four boys who were members of the rowing squad with his son. They were Jack Fellows of 803 West 184th Street, Richard Heppner of 2,851 Webb Avenue, Justin Levy of 471 Audubon Avenue and Herbert Schane of 473 West 158th Street. He said he asked how the accident occurred and that Mr. Boylan explained that the shell was capsized by the backwash of a passing tug.

Mr. Greenfeld said his son had been a pupil at George Washington High School for three years and had mentioned two months ago that he would like to try for the crew, but was told by his father that he must learn to swim before attempting it.

Mr. Boylan said Edward applied to him two months ago for permission to join the rowing squad. The Principal gave him a card to be filled by his parents, giving their consent.

He said that not only had young Greenfeld produced the required written consent of his parents to join the rowing crew, but that his mother had frequently witnessed her son practicing with other members of the crew in the shell.

As to whether or not the boy could swim, Mr. Boylan said that no student at George Washington High School could get a diploma unless the student could swim.

Sigmund Cederstrom, a real estate broker of 189 Montague Street, Brooklyn, widely known in Brooklyn political circles, identified a body washed up at the foot of Ocean Avenue, Coney Island, yesterday as that of his son, Joseph, who was last seen the day before. The boy had been a student at Columbia University. The body was taken to the Kings County Morgue. It is not known how he came to be drowned.

NORMAN THOMAS JAILED FOR DEFYING RIOT ACT IN STRIKE

Garfield (N. J.) Police Seize the Socialist Leader, Who Seeks to Test Bar to Public Meetings.

$10,000 BAIL SET IN SECRET

He Is Not Allowed to Get Counsel and Information Is Denied to Lawyers Who Try to Aid.

TOWN OFFICIALS INDIGNANT

Heated Mass Meeting Demands the Removal of Civilian Deputies Who Guard Roads With Shotguns.

Special to The New York Times.

GARFIELD, N. J., April 14.—Norman Thomas, former Presbyterian minister and candidate for Mayor of New York on the Socialist Party ticket at the last election, was arrested this afternoon on a plot of ground rented by the New York League for Industrial Democracy when he sought to ascertain whether the Riot act, read before one group of textile strikers on Monday, was a blanket regulation which automatically banned all future public assemblages of strikers in Bergen County.

Mr. Thomas was taken in charge by a member of the local police force and arraigned secretly before Justice of the Peace Louis Hargreaves, who fixed bail at $10,000. He was not permitted to be represented by counsel, and Chief of Police John A. Forss refused to tell lawyers representing the American Civil Liberties Union of his arraignment.

Forrest Bailey, associate director of the American Civil Liberties Union, secured Bergen County for several hours, unable to locate Mr. Thomas. He told friends he feared that it "looked like a case of kidnapping." Three hours after his arrest Mr. Thomas was locked up in the Bergen County Jail at Hackensack.

$70,000 Raised for Bail.

Reporters who attempted to interview him were turned away from the jail by a representative of Sheriff Nimmo. Mr. Thomas will have a hearing tomorrow afternoon. Tonight the American Civil Liberties Union announced that voluntary subscriptions toward bail for those arrested in the Passaic-Garfield textile strike area in the last three days would be forthcoming tomorrow and that $70,000 had been raised for this purpose.

Oswald Garrison Villard, editor of The Nation, it was said, would offer bail of $10,000 for the release of Robert Junn of the American Civil Liberties Union, arrested yesterday in Garfield a few minutes after Sheriff Nimmo read the Riot act.

Civilian deputies, hastily sworn in, patrolled the roads of Garfield today armed with sawed-off shotguns. Plain-clothes men and patrolmen in uniform ordered strangers out of town. Two young men carrying brief cases were stopped and asked their business.

"We're just walking," they said.

"Walk out of town, or you'll be in the hospital in two minutes," the officer said. He escorted them to the Passaic line.

Police Chief Forss referred reporters, lawyers and members of the American Civil Liberties Union to the City Solicitor concerning their inquiries on the effect of the Riot act, tested by Mr. Thomas this afternoon. Chief Forss finally refused to answer further questions and ordered the interrogators from Police Headquarters. A reporter who asked him the name of the City Solicitor was forcibly ejected by two detectives.

Preacher Arrested Also.

The Rev. Charles Webber of the Church of All Nations, New York, was arrested in front of Police Headquarters this afternoon when he discussed with several people the reading of the Riot act by Sheriff Nimmo. Justice of the Peace Hargreaves discharged him with a reprimand.

The City Hall was jammed tonight at a meeting of the City Council, where Councilmen demanded that Mayor William Burke, an employe of the Botany Worsted Mills, order Sheriff Nimmo and his deputies out of town. The Mayor admitted bringing in the Sheriff and said that he did it

Walker to Drive First Ball As City Links Open Saturday

Mayor Walker was invited yesterday by Park Commissioner Joseph A. Hennessy of the Bronx to drive the first ball at the opening of the Van Cortlandt Park municipal golf links on Saturday morning. The Mosholu and Pelham links will be thrown open on the same day.

The Mayor informed Commissioner Hennessy that he would be on hand at the first tee at 10 A. M. with his favorite driver if other engagements did not interfere. If the Mayor does appear, his competitor in a driving contest from the first tee will be Borough President Henry Bruckner of the Bronx.

As soon as the first official drives have been made the horde of less prominent devotees of the royal and ancient game will try to start the new season with "birdies" on the first hole.

M'KINLEY'S DEFEAT PLEASES COURT FOES

They Plan to Attack All Other Court Supporters Seeking Re-election This Year.

HOPE TO DEFEAT LENROOT

Borah and Reed of Missouri Express Satisfaction Over the Result in Illinois.

By RICHARD V. OULAHAN.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, April 14.—Political circles fairly seethed today with discussion of the defeat of Senator William B. McKinley for renomination in the Illinois Republican primaries yesterday. As Senator McKinley's vote for the Senate resolution providing for American participation in the World Court was the outstanding issue in the primary campaign, the disposition was to attribute his rejection to his support of the proposal.

The apparent immediate result of the Illinois Republican primary is the determination of anti-Court Senators to make it an issue in this year's political contests. In the claim that Mr. McKinley's political downfall was due to their efforts, they contemplate an intensive campaign designed to defeat for renomination other Senators who voted for the World Court measure.

Senator Irvine L. Lenroot of Wisconsin is next on their list of contemplated victims, and it is expected that Senator George Wharton Pepper of Pennsylvania soon will find a determined opposition to his renomination by anti-Court associates in the Senate.

Another marked for slaughter is Senator Albert B. Cummins of Iowa. There now appears to be no doubt that Smith W. Brookhart, insurgent Republican, who was unseated as a Senator on Monday, will seek the Republican nomination against Mr. Cummins on the ground that he opposed the World Court, while Mr. Cummins voted for it.

Criticism of Coolidge Heard.

President Coolidge's ears may have tingled today over comment that buzzed, but not in loud tones, through the Republican cloakroom of the Senate. There was a disposition by some Republican Senators to criticize the President for failing to give aid and comfort to Senator McKinley in return for the support he and his policies had received from the latter. Especially was this criticism due to the fact that Mr. McKinley had given his vote for the President's World Court proposal when votes were needed. This loyalty of Mr. McKinley to the President was considered to be emphasized on account of the strong anti-Court sentiment in Illinois.

Mr. Coolidge did not come out in any public statement in Mr. McKinley's behalf when the Illinois primary campaign was on, and there was a disposition among some Republican Senators today to hold that he had been lacking in a proper spirit of gratitude toward a man who had stood by him in time of need.

In the closing days of the Illinois primary campaign George E. Brennan, Democratic leader of Cook County, which embraces Chicago, became a candidate for his party's nomination for the Senate and won hands down in yesterday's contest. Mr. Brennan came out flatly for a modification of the Volstead act and thereby injected the wet and dry issue into the campaign. While the liquor question did not become a factor in the Republican primary battle, other than that the organized dry forces supported Mr. McKinley, its predominance as a matter of absorbing interest was apparent.

Whether this organized effort and Mr. McKinley's pronounced dry sympathies affected his vote, especially in Chicago and other cities, is not clear, but the impression prevails here that when Mr. Brennan entered the Democratic primaries as an out-and-out wet he furnished an incentive to the Republican wets to vote for Colonel Frank L. Smith, who defeated Senator McKinley, although Colonel Smith conformed also to the dry faith.

Borah and Reed Pleased.

Senator William E. Borah of Idaho, Republican, and Senator James A. Reed of Missouri, Democrat, the foremost opponents of the World Court in the Senate, did not conceal their satisfaction over Senator McKinley's defeat. Each could take some credit for bringing about that result, as he had gone into Illinois in the early stages of the Senatorial primary and attacked the World Court proposal.

As for Senator McKinley, who got back to Washington today from Illinois, he failed to mention the Court issue in commenting on the outcome of the Senatorial primary contest. He

42 RESORTS SERVED WITH PADLOCK WRITS IN BIGGEST ROUND-UP

Clubs, Cabarets, Inns, Cafes and Apartments on Buckner's Newest List.

SEVERAL WIDELY KNOWN

PATRONS GO UNMOLESTED

Rendezvous of Brokers, Theatre Folk, Sporting Set and Motorists Among Places Served.

Two "flying squads" of Deputy United States Marshals, prohibition agents, Assistant United States Attorneys and policemen started out last night to serve subpoenas in padlock proceedings against forty-two night clubs, cabarets, social clubs, hotels, inns, roadhouses, restaurants and cafes, constituting the fourth and largest "special list" proceeded against by United States Attorney Emory R. Buckner in his padlock campaign.

Information against these places, which are scattered from Cortlandt Street to Catskill, N. Y., and include some of the night life centres of Greenwich Village, mid-Manhattan and the Bronx, was filed yesterday. It was the result of a month's investigation by Assistant United States Attorney J. Edward Lumbard Jr., Nat C. Harben and Lowell Wadmond, of Mr. Buckner's padlock division, with the cooperation of Major Chester P. Mills, Prohibition Administrator; Police Commissioner George V. McLaughlin, Dr. Harry B. Fish of the New York Civic League, Ralph H. Oyler, Richard Nash, Narcotic Agent, and a special squad under Charles Forbes, General Prohibition Agent.

The resorts, according to Mr. Buckner, include "silk stocking" places and rendezvous owned by men with police records. Some of them have been the scenes of former raids. Others have enjoyed freedom from such interference for varying lengths of time. It was not the intention of the authorities to have spectacular raids last night, but merely to serve the subpoenas in each instance and not to molest any patrons. This was carried out as far as possible.

List of Accused Places.

The places against which subpoenas were issued late yesterday afternoon are as follows:

ANDREWS SAYS BEER WOULD AID DRY LAW; FAVORS STRICT CONTROL AND NO SALOONS; BORAH ASSAILS PLEAS FOR MODIFICATION

SENATOR HITS WET AIMS

Calls Attempts to Change Volstead Act Assault on the Constitution.

RAPS "REFERENDUM" HERE

SHARP TILTS IN DEBATE

Bruce Accused of Preaching the Doctrine of Trotsky—Edge Urges Amendment.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, April 14.—Vigorously attacking the efforts of the wets to effect modification of the Volstead act as an assault upon the Constitution itself, and specifically singling out for condemnation the proposed referendum in New York State, Senator William E. Borah of Idaho provoked a spectacular debate of nearly two hours' duration in the Senate this afternoon.

Senator Borah severely criticized District Attorney Buckner's proposal for the States to judge how the Constitution should be applied. He declared it would lead to endless confusion to have one standard of intoxication in one State and another standard elsewhere.

Stating that the Civil War was fought out over a similar proposition, he continued:

"To my mind it is treason. It is evasion of the Constitution. Suppose the State of New York fixes a percentage of intoxication. Shall the United States acquiesce? Shall we leave it to the State of New York or to California?"

Large Audience in the Senate.

Senator Borah took the floor soon after Assistant Secretary of the Treasury Andrews had declared before the Judiciary Subcommittee that distribution of beer under Government control would help solve the problem now before the country. Mr. Borah had an unusually large audience of Senators, who had gathered to reach an agreement for disposing of the Italian debt settlement, and the galleries were filled.

Several colleagues interrupted and there were numerous sharp clashes, the liveliest being with Senator Bruce, Democrat, of Maryland, when the latter arose to defend the methods of the wets. The Idaho Senator once accused his Maryland colleague of preaching the doctrine of Trotsky and anarchy.

The rare spectacle of Senators on the floor starting applause for a speech came toward the conclusion of a long and particularly sharp colloquy with Senator Bruce, when Senator Borah declared himself for defending the Constitution if necessary by walking through blood and fire "in order to maintain it as it is."

This declaration was greeted with applause which drowned the vigorous pounding of the gavel by Vice President Dawes, while gallery spectators ignored the efforts of the doorkeepers to enforce quiet. Three Senators, Sheppard of Texas, Smith of South Carolina and McKellar of Tennessee, were among the first to applaud.

Exchanges Fire With Bruce.

The remarks leading to this incident came during interruptions by Senator Bruce, who asked Senator Borah if there was any reason why Congress should not enact a statute allowing 2.75 per cent. beer without violating the Eighteenth Amendment.

"Oh, no; but it will not solve anything; it will not settle anything," Senator Borah replied.

"There is where I do not agree with the Senator," rejoined Senator Bruce.

Asserting that the Maryland Senator had just stated that he had not much to say about light wine, Mr. Borah explained:

"But there are thousands, and hundreds of thousands, and millions of people in the United States who have something to say about light wines. Will they be satisfied with that beer?"

"I confess my ignorance of that subject," Senator Bruce said. "I do not know exactly, technically speaking, what constitutes a light wine and a

Anti-Saloon League Defers Judgment on General Andrews

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, April 14.—The testimony of General Lincoln C. Andrews, head of the Federal prohibition forces, that manufacture and sale of beer of low alcoholic content, under Government control, but without reopening saloons, would help dry enforcement had all the effects of a bomb explosion in camps of the drys and in political circles.

The Anti-Saloon League of America gave out this brief statement:

"We have no comment to make until General Andrews himself clarifies the statement attributed to him by the papers."

The signers were Wayne B. Wheeler, general counsel; F. Scott McBridge, General Superintendent, and Bishop James Cannon Jr. of the Executive Committee of the League.

MAKE GOVERNERSHIP, OFFER TO M'GINNIES

Drys, Seeking His Aid in Blocking Referendum, Mention Nomination.

HE WAITS FOR WADSWORTH

Leaders Will Confer With State Chieftain Monday to Determine Final Prohibition Policy.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, April 14.—Seeking to enlist the aid of Speaker McGinnies of the Assembly in the fight they are preparing to stage next week for the defeat of the Karle-Phelps modification referendum bill the drys today are reported as offering him the Republican nomination for Governor.

They believe that they will control the Republican State Convention next Autumn and that in the circumstances their offer must be regarded as more than an empty honor to the Speaker.

Heartened by the success of the Wales-Jenks enforcement bills in the Assembly yesterday, the drys are again on the aggressive. They expect to stage a demonstration in favor of their cause on Sunday in a large number of churches up-State, located in districts which at present have assumed a position of strategic importance in the coming battle and thus influence representatives of dry constituencies who have shown an inclination to support the Karle-Phelps bill and who have felt that they could do so consistently on the ground that the intent of the measure was nothing more or less than to sound out popular sentiment on the wet and dry question.

Await Wadsworth Decision.

Friends of Speaker McGinnies do not believe that offer of the bone dry enthusiasts will have any effect on his future actions as leader of the Assembly and Chairman of the Committee on Rules.

Mr. McGinnies is an organization man, first of all, who, it is believed, will not under any circumstances lend himself to any move not fully approved by the recognized leader of the Republican organization in this State, Senator James W. Wadsworth Jr.

Friends of Senator Wadsworth are fully alive to the imperative necessity that he assert his leadership at the present stage of affairs and believe that he will do so. It was learned today that Senator Wadsworth is expected to visit Albany on Monday. He is scheduled to deliver an after-dinner address in Schenectady.

That Senator Wadsworth will improve the occasion by conferences with Speaker McGinnies and other legislative leaders is fully expected and that the decisions reached will have a decisive effect on every move in the battle over the Karle-Phelps bill and other prohibition measures is regarded as certain. It was announced today that nothing will be done prior to next Monday night in the Legislature with regard to such measures.

McGinnies Biding His Time.

While the Speaker personally is not in sympathy with the proposal for a referendum such as the Karle-Phelps bill contemplates, there is reason to believe that the refusal of the Rules Committee thus far to report the bill is not due to any hard and fast determination on the part of the Speaker to keep the measure in committee and thus bring about its defeat, although some persons are placing that interpretation on the failure to let it out.

There is authority for the statement that Speaker McGinnies is merely biding his time, watching developments and depending upon the forthcoming conference with the State leader for wise counsel and a final decision on a course of action.

The Rules Committee is controlled by the drys, but undoubtedly would acquiesce should the Speaker urge that Custodian of Captured Devices Describes Easy Methods of Liquor Production.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, April 14.—General Lincoln C. Andrews, Assistant Secretary of the Treasury, in charge of prohibition enforcement, created a sensation in the Washington prohibition camp today when he admitted before the Senate Committee on Judiciary that enforcement might be "helped" if a way could be found to dispense, under proper Government control, beers of a higher alcoholic content than now permitted by the law.

General Andrews, however, refused to come out in favor of light wines.

He said his forces captured last year 172,000 stills and other liquor making devices and admitted this was probably one in ten of the number in operation.

Practically the entire time of General Andrews on the stand was taken up in answering the rapid-fire cross-examination by Senator Reed. The Missourian was at his best as a cross-examiner, and once, near the close of the hearing, when he denounced a law that would send a man to the penitentiary for selling a single glass of beer, there was loud applause.

Calls Beer Temperance Aid.

Leading up to the light wine and beer situation, Colonel Lucian Codman, attorney for the wet organizations, asked General Andrews if he did not think that many men who are drinking hard liquors today would be willing to give up such beverages in favor of a wholesome light beer, provided they could get the beer. General Andrews replied that in his opinion such would be the case.

Senator Reed took charge at this point in the proceedings. His face indicated how important he considered the statement made by General Andrews.

"Now, as I understood you," said Senator Reed, addressing General Andrews, "your opinion is this—particularly in view of the bad quality of hard liquor now sold in this country—that if beer, healthful beer, could be manufactured, a beer that is non-intoxicating in fact to the average person and distributed by the Government under regulation, not allowed to be sold in saloons or public places or drunk upon the premises, that the people would take to the drinking of that sort of beverage, instead of drinking the vile hard liquors that we have now, and that it would promote temperance and would aid you in suppressing the illicit still and the bootlegger?"

"The answer is that I do believe that would be helpful."

"On the other hand," continued Senator Reed, "it is your opinion—for I want to know both sides of it—that if you opened up the saloon again and permitted the sale of beer and wines, that might be used as a cover by which the proprietor of that saloon could slip his customers some illicit whiskey, and that that would increase your difficulties?"

"I think it would be disastrous," replied General Andrews.

Wide Comment on Testimony.

The admissions of General Andrews occasioned a great deal of comment in Government circles, particularly in the Treasury and Justice Departments, but not for publication.

Just what the drys will say was a question on everybody's lips, it seemed. Will they demand General Andrews's removal, will they protest to the President and Secretary Mellon? was the general line of comment.

General Andrews, answering a question by Senator Reed, said he agreed that it is now easier to distill whisky than it is to make a loaf of good bread. He made it plain that it is policy to go after the big men of the bootleg trade instead of the little ones, or, as Senator Reed put it, concentrate on the "tigers rather than the jackrabbits."

Once, when Senator Harreld, coming to the aid of the drys, remarked that it might be well to make violations of the prohibition law a felony, so as to permit a search of homes—without warrants—Senator Reed retorted it might be better to burn of the Magna Charta or the Constitution.

Germans Free Bergdoll on Girl's Charges; He Calls Trial an "American Frame-Up"

By LINCOLN EYRE

By Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

MOSBACH, April 14.—Grover Cleveland Bergdoll, American slacker, was acquitted tonight of charges of immoral conduct with a minor, Friedel Schmidt of Heidelberg, three years ago.

The jury of six deliberated only ten minutes before bringing in an acquittal, the conflicting testimony of the girl and her mother and the evidence of a psychologist, who pronounced Friedel irresponsible, convincing them that Bergdoll was innocent.

The Judge stated that no political considerations were taken into account and that the motives for bringing the case to the court's attention were also not considered.

Bergdoll is free for the first time since his arrest on Feb. 15. Immediately upon his release he cried:

Bergdoll took the stand in his own defense at the opening of the trial and stated he had met Friedel Schmidt, who was born at Cairo and raised in Budapest, in Heidelberg three years ago. He wrote a letter to her mother asking permission to keep her company, which was granted. When they became engaged ceremonies were held at the girl's home. Bergdoll said he broke off the engagement on account of Friedel's flirtations with a Heidelberg student.

In 1925, he said, he learned of the death of a Fräulein Schmidt and went to Heidelberg to visit the grave and discovered it was her sister who had died. Meeting his ex-fiancée he tried to renew the former relations, but was rejected in favor of the student.

After the trial Bergdoll left for his old haunt, Ebersbach, accompanied by friends, who joined him in celebration of his acquittal.

Plucky Teacher Routs Snapping Dog in School; Fifty Children in Panic; Boy and Girl Bitten

A large brown dog pattered into the 2B classroom of the St. Francis of Assisi Parochial School at Nostrand Avenue and Maple Street, Brooklyn, yesterday.

The fifty children, almost all of them under ten, were immediately interested. "Here, doggie," called one holding out his hand.

The dog, however, showed no sign of friendship. It leaped upon the desks barking and snapping, throwing the whole room into confusion and nipping the hands of a small boy and a girl. The children rushed for the hall and the cloak room screaming.

Miss Anna Bretnan, the teacher, stood her ground. She threw books and rulers at the animal and then, with the aid of the school nurse, she drove it into the closed courtyard adjoining the classroom.

A telephone call to the Empire Avenue station brought Patrolman John Albrecht with a rope and the mongrel was quickly lassoed. It was taken to the police station, where the Board of Health was notified.

The two children, Katherine Graham, 6 years old, of 213 Rogers Avenue, and Vincent Brogan, 7 years old, of 110 Empire Boulevard, each of whom was bitten on the hand, went home after the wounds had been cauterized.

DECLARE WILLIAMS SUFFERED FROM DRUG

Medical Witnesses Testify That Prescription He Was Taking Produced Nausea.

DEFENSE ASSAILS BUTLER

Testimony Is Given That He Was Near a Break-Down and Has Faulty Eyesight.

Special to The New York Times.

SAN DIEGO, Cal., April 14.—Acquittal of Colonel Alexander Williams, charged with intoxication and conduct unbecoming an officer, seemed possible today when the defense closed its case unexpectedly after physicians had testified that the commander of the Fourth Regiment, United States Marine Corps, was drugged and not intoxicated on March 6, as charged by Brig. Gen. Smedley D. Butler, commander of the local marine base.

Lieutenant John Henry of the Naval Hospital in Balboa Park testified that he prescribed the use of drugs for Colonel Williams to "offset an infection of the upper urinary tract." "I prescribed full doses for him on March 2, and he came to me two days after the party at the Hotel Del Coronado on March 6 and declared the drug had made him sick," testified the naval physician.

Colonel Williams contends that he had stomach and bladder trouble, which affected him on the night of the alleged cocktail party, when he was said to have been intoxicated.

Lieutenant Henry's testimony was introduced after the defense had put Commander E. C. White of the Marine Medical Corps on the stand in an effort to prove that General Butler, the witness who testified to having seen him drunk, was physically unfit to observe whether Colonel Williams was intoxicated or sober. Dr. White said General Butler was suffering from a near nervous breakdown, and that the visibility of one of his eyes was slightly impaired.

The drug used by Colonel Williams was described by Lieutenant Henry as hexyl resorcinol, compounded by Dr. Hugh Thomas of Baltimore for bladder trouble.

Second Doctor Testifies for Williams.

Dr. Roberts W. Thomas, naval medical officer stationed in San Diego, also was placed on the witness stand by the defense.

"I visited the Williams home in Coronado on March 4, 5 and 6," he testified, "to attend his son. I noticed that Colonel Williams was not looking well and he told me he was being treated at the Naval Hospital for bladder trouble."

Dr. Henry's testimony was at greater length than that of any of the other physicians.

"Colonel Williams first came under my treatment on Jan. 13," he said. "He was suffering from an infection of the upper urinary tract and I considered his condition quite serious. To offset this I prescribed the use of drugs. Reaction of the drug causes heartburn, gastric irritation, nausea, sick stomach and even vomiting. For a time we decreased the use of the drug, but full doses were renewed on March 2. I did not see him for two days before March 6, but saw him again two days afterward. He said the drug had made him sick on the evening of March 6. I do not know the exact words he used, but they were to the effect that it caused trouble again."

The physical condition of General Butler was attacked by defense witnesses when the session opened. On this testimony the defense seeks to establish the fact that in making the charge of drunkenness against Colonel Williams he had depended on his imagination rather than what he actually saw.

Commander White testified that a complete examination showed that the marine commander had exceedingly low blood pressure.

"He was almost a complete physical wreck because of bad teeth," Commander White said. "We examined his eyes thoroughly. The right eye was perfect, but the left was affected with abnormal visibility."

Says Philadelphia Affected Butler.

General Butler, the witness said, attributed his nervous condition to reaction from his experience in Philadelphia.

Colonel Williams took a lively interest in testimony which tended to prove that General Butler was physically unqualified to testify against him. Previously he had taken but a listless interest in the trial.

It is probable that General Butler will be recalled to the stand tomorrow.

Dr. Harry Wegeforth, local physician, testified that the drug taken by Colonel Williams had been used by him with ill effects on patients. His testimony sustained that of Drs. Frank Chamberlain and W. C. Lee, experts in urinary ailments, who preceded him on the stand, and who testified that the use of the drug named in this connection probably would cause symptoms akin to those of drunkenness.

Dr. Chamberlain said he had used the drug in many cases of this kind, and that it caused gastric disturbances, indigestion and other ill effects.

Dr. Lee said he used the drug the past year as a urinary antiseptic, and that it occasionany caused nausea, vomiting and stomach trouble.

Williams May Not Testify.

Colonel Williams and Mrs. Williams may escape the ordeal of taking the stand in the case, according to those close to the trend of the court-martial. It is improbable they will do so unless it is insisted upon by Rear Admiral Thomas Washington, President of the court-martial.

San Diego society, prominent in its criticisms of General Butler, has been conspicuous by its absence at the trial since its opening. Barely fifteen outsiders were present at today's sessions.

Criticism of General Butler continued today, gaining strength upon presentation of evidence that the accused officer was drugged and not drunk.

General Butler, of all the witnesses who have appeared at the trial, alone has testified emphatically that Colonel Williams was drunk. Others went no further than to say that the officer appeared to be doped or ill. Many testified that he appeared normal aside from an appearance of illness.

Rumors persist of bad blood between the Marines commander and his subordinate, due to something that happened years ago.

Aurora Borealis Seen Here; Wire Services Are Hampered

The flashing of the northern lights, the Aurora Borealis, shot over the sky last night and the illumination was visible from many parts of the city and suburbs.

Residents of Mineola, Garden City and other Long Island towns had an exceptionally fine view of the lights. The white streak extended from the north, in a southerly direction.

Reports from Northern New York and New England States said that the phenomenon was also visible there.

Radio, telegraph and telephone communication was somewhat hampered by the electrically charged atmosphere.

CAPT. PIDGEON GETS BLUE WATER MEDAL

The Blue Water Medal of the Cruising Club of America, awarded for noteworthy accomplishment in deep-water navigation, was presented last night to a man who had been reared on an Iowa farm, who learned navigation from a book and got his first glimpses of salt water when 18 years old. He is Harry Pidgeon, who sailed around the world in a thirty-five-foot yawl, the Islander, a product of his own handicraft.

Captain Pidgeon was made an honorary member of the Cruising Club at a dinner at the Yale Club. When Henry A. Wise Wood presented the medal, which has been awarded only twice before, and 160 leading yachtsmen of the East rose to cheer him, Captain Pidgeon rose to his feet and waves of red chased over his tanned face.

"I feel rather embarrassed, after traveling over the seas, to be hauled up here to give account of myself," he said. "I'll do the best I can to tell you about my trip. People always ask me two things: 'What made you do it?' and 'What did you do at night?' In answer to the first question, any boy who has read Robinson Crusoe knows the reason for that. As for the second, well, I have two bunks in my boat. I pick the softer one and fall into it."

Some one asked what food he had taken on such a long trip. With an engaging grin, he replied, "Oh, grub."

Among those who attended the dinner were Commodore Stuyvesant Wainwright, former Commodore Robert N. Bavier, C. Sherman Hoyt, Herbert L. Stone, editor of Yachting; George Granbery, Geoffrey Parsons, Butler Whiting, President Clifford D. Mallory of the Yacht Racing Association of Long Island Sound; W. P. Stephens, Recorder of the Yacht Racing Association; George Bunnell, M. S. Kattenborn, former Commodore C. A. Marsland of the New Rochelle Yacht Club; Commodore George Nichols, New York Yacht Club; Commodore James B. Ford, Larchmont Yacht Club; Commodore Charles Farmer, Harry S. Jackson, Gerald Ford, Vice Commodore Harry S. Maxwell, Arthur Masury, George Ratsey, Edward S. Tucker and Robert A. Mahlstedt.

GEN. BOOTH ARRIVES; SISTER KEEPS POST

TELLS OF WORK IN ORIENT

Will Seek Aid in This Country to Help Cause There—Hopes England Will Go Dry.

General W. Bramwell Booth, head of the Salvation Army, arrived here yesterday on the White Star liner Olympic. He denied that he had come to remove his sister, Commander Evangeline Booth, as head of the Salvation Army in America. He expressed the hope that prohibition would find its way to Great Britain and told of the great missionary work done by the Salvation Army in China, India and Africa.

General Booth was accompanied by Mrs. Booth, his son, Adjutant Wycliffe Booth; Commander Henry Mapp, representative in London of the American organization; Brigadier J. Evans Smith and Brigadier Mrs. Eva B. Smith, secretary to Mrs. Booth. The General said he was going to Chicago and would return to New York on April 30. He will be at the Hotel Roosevelt for a few days before leaving.

"Prohibition is becoming a political question in Great Britain," General Booth said. "I am dead against drinking, and I would like to see prohibition in the United Kingdom."

He was visibly pleased when he received a letter from Commander Evangeline Booth before he disembarked. Miss Booth sent a message of greeting and said she would meet her brother at his hotel. The General expressed anxiety about her health. Some time ago she was compelled by ill health to rest from her activities.

Plans No Change Here.

Some one asked General Booth whether he contemplated making any changes in the personnel of the Salvation Army in New York. He said he knew the question applied to his sister, and added:

"No, I have no interest in that direction. I know what you mean. The Salvation Army system contemplates the removal of its leading officers at different periods, therefore you can now ask me whether I am going to reverse the whole system, and ask if I am going to remove Evangeline Booth, and I shall answer in the manner of the British House of Commons, in the negative."

When the General was asked about the policy of the Salvation Army regarding its members having connection with secret orders, he replied:

"You can be a member of secret societies and still be a member of the Salvation Army, but the idea is that our officers are separate from all of these associations which are mixed up with what we call worldly influences and especially political influences. Secret societies are involved in politics. It became necessary for us either to make an investigation every time the question was raised as to whether a society was political or not, and consequently to give orders from time to time or decide upon the better policy of coming out of the whole thing. We decided, therefore, to get out.

"I do not know what I shall find here. I am always hearing about difficulties. It is all moonshine. In every sense of the word the Salvation Army is forging ahead. It is going ahead in the old country as fast as possible, it is obvious. It is going ahead in other countries, but we don't make progress along the same lines in all countries. There is unquestionably remarkable progress being made.

Great Interest in China.

"Most important is our work among the heathen. And if I have a special object in coming here, it is because I want to increase the interest of all people in the heathen world, especially China, Africa and India.

"Speaking of China, it is a regular joint. China and Africa just now appeal to me most powerfully because of the extraordinary opening we have there. While on this boat Mr. Mapp and I have been wirelessing to London for the appointment of a man to open work in South China. Now, I want money for China, and I want men."

General Booth said that while there were outbreaks against the Salvation Army in Africa, the organization had made many and wonderful friends, especially in Rhodesia. There are 1,000 enrolled members in Matabela, but no officers, according to General Booth, who said he was thinking of starting a new commandership in that part of the world.

General Booth is in his seventieth year. To aid his hearing he uses a mechanical device. Over his heart he wore a miniature of his father, the late General William Booth, founder of the Salvation Army.

WRECK LAID TO SPLIT RAIL.

Steel Being Analyzed for Possible Flaw, Camden Investigators Hear.

CAMDEN, N. J., April 14.—The wreck of the Nellie—Bly, Pennsylvania Railroad train, at Delair, near here, Thursday evening was caused by a broken rail thirty feet south of the De Rousse Avenue crossing, E. R. Hyle, division track supervisor of the Camden Terminal district, testified today at the investigation being held jointly by the Interstate Commerce Commission and the Public Utility Commission of New Jersey. Three persons were killed and about thirty injured in the wreck.

The break was a "clean one," Hyle said. The rail, he added has been sent to the Pennsylvania Railroad repair shops at Altoona, Pa., where it will be analyzed to determine whether the break was due to a flaw.

Bandit Gets $37,500 in Indiana Mail Bags; Forces Driver to Run Taxi Into Illinois

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, April 14.—Two sacks of registered mail containing $37,500 in currency were stolen at Indiana Harbor, Ind., today in a puzzling hold-up.

One or two robbers held up Frank Watson, a taxicab driver, while he was carrying the mail from the New York Central Railroad station to the Indiana Harbor postoffice. Watson tossed the mail sacks into a car, driven by the robber, or robbers, got in after them and was driven rapidly away. No shots were fired.

A few hours later Watson turned up in Joliet. The car was found disabled in a Joliet garage, but robber and loot were missing. Watson told the Joliet police that a lone robber managed the hold-up, although witnesses at Indiana Harbor said they saw two men.

"This one man took me by surprise," Watson told the Joliet police. "He pulled a gun on me and made me throw the bags into the car."

Indiana Harbor witnesses said no gun was used.

"After we got into the car," continued Watson, "he made me drive all the way into Joliet. When we got here the car broke down. He told me to drive into a garage, but I couldn't make it. He tried and had no luck. Then he got out to talk with the garage man and I ducked."

Watson called the police from a house near the garage, but by the time they got there the robber had disappeared with his plunder.

The $37,500, believed to have been part of the shipment, was sent by the Federal Reserve Bank here to a bank in Indiana Harbor. Reports that the $150,00 payroll of the Inland Steel Company was also part of the loot were denied by Chicago officials of the company.

Watson is employed by the Yellow Cab Company of Indiana Harbor which has the contract to carry the mail in that city. He has worked for the company two months, officials said.
